

YOGA SŪTRAS

of Patañjali

Yogi Madhvācārya / Michael Beloved

Copyright © 2007 --- Michael Beloved

All rights reserved

Transmit/ Reproduce/ Quote with author's consent only.

ISBN :

978-1-4357-1246-1

Library of Congress Control Number :

2008902438

LORD SHIVA – Master of the Yogis

EDITORIAL CREDITS

Computer Formatting Editor:
 Advisory Editor.
 Final Editor:
 Computer Consultant.
 Front-Back Cover/Shiva Art.
 Krishna-Balaram logo
 Glossary
 Indexes

Bhagīratha das
 Sir Paul Castagna
 Author
 Raymond Grant
 Sir Paul Castagna
 Sundarananda devi dasi
 Bhagīratha das
 Author

FINANCIAL CREDITS

Bhagīratha das,
 Curt Simon, Surya das, Christopher Hall,
 Dear Beloved,
 Bharat Patel.

HARE KRISHNA HARE KRISHNA
 KRISHNA KRISHNA
 HARE HARE
 HARE RAMA HARE RAMA
 RAMA RAMA
 HARE HARE

CorrespondenceBook Orders

Paul Castagna
 P.O. Box 152
 Iron Belt, WI 54536
 USA
 E-mail: sssix@yahoo.com

Ingrid Thomas-Clark
 3703 Foster Ave
 Brooklyn NY 11203
 USA

Michael Beloved
 13 Goodhope, Canal No.1
 West Bank Demerara
 GUYANA

Inquiries

bhagiratha@optonline.net
 axisnexus@gmail.com

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Introduction	7
Part 1
Yoga Sūtras: Verses and Translation	9
Chapter 1
Samādhi Pāda: Transcendence Accomplishment	11
Chapter 2
Sādhana Pāda: Practice Accomplishment	21
Chapter 3
Vibhūti Pāda: Glory Displayed	32
Chapter 4
Kaivalya Pāda: Segregation Accomplished	45
Part 2
An Approach to Patañjali's Yoga Sūtras	53
Chapter 1
Samādhi Pāda: Transcendence Accomplishment	55
Chapter 2
Sādhana Pāda: Practice Accomplishment	60
Chapter 3
Vibhūti Pāda: Glory Displayed	67
Chapter 4
Kaivalya Pāda: Segregation Accomplished	73

Part 3Yoga Sūtra: Verses, Translation and Commentary* 79*Chapter 1

Samādhi Pāda: Transcendence Accomplishment 81

Chapter 2

Sādhana Pāda: Practice Accomplishment 116

Chapter 3

Vibhūti Pāda: Glory Displayed 149

Chapter 4

Kaivalya Pāda: Segregation Accomplished 187

Glossary with Word-for-Word Meanings* 205Index to Verses: Selected Sanskrit Words* 219Index to Verses: Selected English Words* 223Index to Commentary of Part 3* 229*Scheme of Pronunciation 238*About the Author 239

Introduction

Anyone who does not have a basic knowledge of sanskrit is at a disadvantage when studying a translation. This is because the reader is at the mercy of the translator and is liable to be exploited. Texts like the Bhagavad-gita and the Yoga Sūtras were and are being translated by many writers. Each translator has a motive. If the reader is naive, he can hardly sort between the intentions of the original writer and the agenda of the translator.

I was prompted to attempt this translation by Sir Paul Castagna, but I did have some schooling in the practice of this yoga by Srila Yogeshwarananda, one of my yoga gurus. He showed me much in the astral dimensions. I must admit however that until Sir Paul brought it to my attention, I did not regard the implications of these sūtras for modern people. The question remains: What was my motive in the translation? I may evade that by stating that I did this without motive just after Sir Paul asked me to translate. However, it is true that even a motiveless translator develops a particular interest and loads that into his translation as he proceeds. My interest was a curiosity to see exactly what Sri Patañjali expounded. I was to an extent shocked at his crude pronouncements and his total disregard for the psychosis or disordered and uncontrolled mental and emotional status of an average human being.

With all due respects to Patañjali, his sanskrit text and my translation is presented first. Then a simplification entitled “An Approach to Patañjali’s Yoga Sūtras” is given. And at last the text, the word-for-word meanings, the translation and a commentary is presented.

I would suggest however, that readers tackle the second part first, that is the approach to the sūtras. Then read the first part, the actual translation. Then study the third part, which is the translation and my commentary. And always remember that Patañjali’s ideas cannot be utilized except through the practice of yoga.

Mdv.

Part 1

Yoga Sūtras:

Verses and Translation

CHAPTER 1: SAMĀDHI PĀDA

Transcendence Accomplishment

Verse 1

अथ योगानुशासनम्
atha yogānuśāsanam

Now I give the explanation of yoga and its practice.

Verse 2

योगश्चित्तवृत्तिनिरोधः
yogaḥ cittavṛtti nirodhaḥ

The skill of yoga is demonstrated by the conscious non-operation of the vibrational modes of the mentoemotional energy.

Verse 3

तदा द्रष्टुः स्वरूपेऽवस्थानम्
tadā draṣṭuḥ svarūpe avasthānam

Then the perceiver is situated in his own form.

Verse 4

वृत्तिसारूप्यमितरत्र
vṛttisārūpyam itaratra

At other times, there is conformity with the mento-emotional energy.

Verse 5

वृत्तयः पञ्चतय्यः क्लिष्टाऽक्लिष्टाः
vṛttayah pañcatayyah kliṣṭā akliṣṭāḥ

The vibrations in the mento-emotional energy are five-fold being agonizing or none-troublesome.

Verse 6

प्रमाणविपर्ययविकल्पनिद्रास्मृतयः

pramāṇa viparyaya vikalpa nidrā smṛtayaḥ

They are correct perception, incorrect perception, imagination, sleep and memory.

Verse 7

प्रत्यक्षानुमानागमाः प्रमाणानि

pratyakṣa anumāna āgamāḥ pramāṇāni

Correct perception may be acquired directly,
by correct analysis or by correct reference.

Verse 8

विपर्ययो मिथ्याज्ञानमतद्रूपप्रतिष्ठम्

वपिरयायाḥ मतिहयḥ जश्वḥ नाम तादरḁपा परतऱḥ हाम

Incorrect perception is based on false information
and on perception of what is not the true form.

Verse 9

शब्दज्ञानानुपाती वस्तुशून्यो विकल्पः

śabdajñāna anupātī vastuśūnyaḥ vikalpaḥ

Verbal or written information which is followed by concepts
which are devoid of reality, is imagination.

Verse 10

अभावप्रत्ययालम्बना वृत्तिर्निद्रा

abhāva pratyaya ālambanā vṛtṭiḥ nidrā

Sleep is the vibrational mode which is supported by the absence of objective awareness.

Verse 11

अनभूतविषयासम्प्रमोषः स्मृतिः

anubhūta viṣaya asaṁpramoṣaḥ smṛtiḥ

Memory is the retained impression of experienced objects.

Verse 12

अभ्यासवैराग्याभ्यां तन्निरोधः

abhyāsa vairāgyābhyāṁ tannirodhaḥ

That non-operation of the vibrational modes is achieved by effective practice in not having an interest in the very same operations.

Verse 13

तत्र स्थितौ यत्नोऽभ्यासः

tatra sthitau yatnaḥ abhyāsaḥ

In that case, practice is the persistent endeavor (to cultivate that lack of interest).

Verse 14

स तु दीर्घकालनैरन्तर्यसत्कारासेवितो दृढभूमिः

sa tu dīrghakāla nairantarya

satkāra āsevitaḥ dṛḍhabhūmiḥ

But that is attained on the firm basis of a continuous reverential sustained practice which is executed for a long time.

Verse 15

दृष्टानुश्रविकविषयवितृष्णस्य वशीकारसञ्ज्ञा वैराग्यम्

dṛṣṭānūśravika viṣaya vitṛṣṇasya

vaśīkārasañjñā vairāgyam

The non-interest in the operations of the mento-emotional energy is achieved by one who has perfect mastery in consciousness and who does not crave for what is perceived or what is heard of in the mundane existence.

Verse 16

तत्परं पुरुषख्यातेर्गुणवैतृष्णाम्

tatparaṁ puruṣakhyāteḥ guṇavaitṛṣṇyam

That highest non-interest occurs when there is freedom from desire for the features of material nature and thorough awareness of the spiritual person.

Verse 17

वितर्कविचारानन्दास्मितारूपानुगमात् सम्प्रज्ञातः
vitarka vicāra ānanda asmitārūpa anugamāt saṁprajñātaḥ

The observational linkage of the attention
 to a higher concentration force occurs with analysis, reflection and introspective happiness
 or with focus on self-consciousness.

Verse 18

विरामप्रत्ययाभ्यासपूर्वः संस्कारशेषोऽनयः
virāmapratyaya abhyāsapūrvāḥ saṁskāraśeṣaḥ anyāḥ

The other state is the complete departure from the level where the remaining impressions lie in the mento-emotional energy.

Verse 19

भवप्रत्ययो विदेहप्रकृतिलयानाम
bhavapratyayaḥ videha prakṛtilayanām
 Of those who are diffused into subtle material nature
 and those who existing in a bodiless state,
 their psychology has that content.

Verse 20

श्रद्धावीर्यस्मृतिसमाधिप्रज्ञापूर्वक इतरेषाम्
śraddhā vīrya smṛti samādhiprajñā pūrvakaḥ itareṣām

For others, confidence, stamina, introspective memory,
 the continuous effortless linkage of the attention
 to a higher concentration force, and profound insight,
 all being previously mastered, serves as the cause.

Verse 21

तीव्रसंवेगानामासन्नः
tīvrasaṁvegānām āsannaḥ
 For those who practice forcefully in a very intense way,
 the skill of yoga will be achieved very soon.

Verse 22

मृदुमध्याधिमात्रत्वात्ततोऽपि विशेषः
mṛdu madhya adhimātratvāt tataḥ api viśeṣaḥ
 Then there is even more ratings,
 according to intense, mediocre, or slight practice.

Verse 23

ईश्वरप्रणिधानाद्वा
Īśvara praṇidhānāt vā
 Or by the method of profound religious meditation
 upon the Supreme Lord.

Verse 24

क्लेशकर्मविपाकाशयैरपरामृष्टः पुरुषविशेष ईश्वरः
kleśa karma vipāka āśayaiḥ
aparāmr̥ṣṭaḥ puruṣaviśeṣaḥ Īśvaraḥ
 The Supreme Lord is that special person
 who is not affected by troubles, actions, developments
 or by subconscious motivations.

Verse 25

तत्र निरतिशयं सर्वज्ञबीजम्
tatra niratiśayaṁ sarvajñabījam
 There, in Him, is found the unsurpassed origin of all knowledge.

Verse 26

स एषः पूर्वेषामपि गुरुः कालेनानवच्छेदात्
sa eṣaḥ pūrveṣām api guruḥ kālena anavacchedāt
 He, this particular person, being unconditioned by time
 is the guru even of the ancient teachers,
 the authorities from before.

Verse 27

तस्य वाचकः प्रणवः
tasya vācakaḥ praṇavaḥ
 Of Him, the sacred syllable Āum̐ (Om) is the designation.

Verse 28

तज्जपस्तदथभावनम्

tajjapaḥ tadarthabhāvanam

That sound is repeated, murmured constantly
for realizing its meaning.

Verse 29

ततः प्रत्यक्केतनाधिगमोऽप्यन्तरायाभावश्च

tataḥ pratyakcetana adhigamaḥ api antarāya abhāvaḥ ca

As a result there is inwardness of the sense consciousness
and the disappearance of obstacles to progress.

Verse 30

व्याधिस्त्यानसंशयप्रमादालस्याविरतिभ्रान्ति

दर्शनालब्धूमिकत्वानवस्थितत्वानि चित्तविक्षेपास्तेऽन्तरायाः

*vyādhi styāna saṁśaya pramāda ālasya avirati bhrāntidarśana
alabdhabhūmikatva anavasthitatvāni cittavikṣepaḥ te antarāyāḥ*

These obstacles are disease, idleness, doubt, inattentiveness,
lack of energy and proneness to sensuality, mistaken views,
not being able to maintain the progress attained,
unsteadiness in progression,
scattered mental and emotional energy.

Verse 31

दुःखदौर्मर्नस्याङ्गमेजयत्वश्वासप्रश्वासा विक्षेपसहभुवः

duḥkha daurmanasya aṅgamejayatva

śvāsapraśvāsāḥ vikṣepa sahabhuvaḥ

Distress, depression, nervousness and labored breathing
are the symptoms of a distracted state of mind.

Verse 32

तत्प्रतिषेधार्थमिकतत्त्वाभ्यासः

tatpratiṣedhārtham ekatattva abhyāsaḥ

For the removal of the obstacles,
there should be the practice of a standard method
used in the pursuit of the reality.

Verse 33

मैत्रीकरुणामुदितोपेक्षाणां सुखदुःखपुण्यापुण्यविषयाणाम्भावनातश्चित्तप्रसादनम् maitrī karuṇā muditā upekṣaṇam
sukha duḥkha puṇya apuṇya
viṣayāṇām bhāvanātaḥ cittaprasādanam

The abstract meditation
 resulting from the serenity of the mento-emotional energy,
 comes about by friendliness, compassion, cheerfulness
 and non-responsiveness to happiness, distress, virtue and vice;

Verse 34

प्रच्छर्दनविधारणाभ्यां वा प्राणस्य
pracchardana vidhāraṇābhyām vā prāṇasya
 or by regulating the exhalation and inhalation of the vital energy;

Verse 35

विषयवती वा प्रवृत्तिरुत्पन्ना मनसः स्थितिनिबन्धनी
viṣayavatī vā pravṛtṭiḥ utpannā manasaḥ sthiti nibandhanī or by fusion and steadiness of the mind which is produced by the operation of the mento-emotional energy towards an object which is different to,
 but similar to a normal thing;

Verse 36

विशोका वा ज्योतिष्मती
viśokāh vā jyotiṣmatī
 or by sorrow-less and spiritually-luminous states;

Verse 37

वीतरागविषयं वा चित्तम्
vītarāga viṣayaṁ vā cittam
 or by fixing the mento-emotional energy
 on someone who is without craving;

Verse 38

स्वप्ननिद्राज्ञानालम्बनं वा
svapna nidrā jñāna ālambanaṁ vā
 or by taking recourse to dream or dreamless sleep.

Verse 39

यथाभिमतध्यानाद्वा
yathābhimata dhyānāt vā
 Or it can be achieved from the effortless linkage of the mind to a higher concentration force which was dearly desired.

Verse 40

परमाणुपरममहत्त्वान्तोऽस्य वशीकारः
paramāṇu paramamahattvāntaḥ asya vaśīkāraḥ
 The mastery of his psyche results in control of his relationship to the smallest atom or to cosmic proportions.

Verse 41

क्षीणवृत्तेरभिजातस्येव मणेर्ग्रहीतृग्रहणग्राह्येषु तत्स्थितदञ्जनता समापत्तिः *kṣīṇavṛtṭeḥ abhijātasya iva maṇeḥ grahīṭṛ
 grahaṇa grāhyeṣu tatstha tadañjanatā samāpattiḥ*
 In regards to the great reduction
 of the mento-emotional operations,
 there is fusion of the perceiver, the flow of perceptions and what is perceived, just like the absorption of a transparent jewel.

Verse 42

तत्र शब्दार्थज्ञानविकल्पैः सङ्कीर्णां सवितर्का समापत्तिः
*tatra śabda artha jñāna vikalpaiḥ
 saṅkīrṇā savitarkā samāpattiḥ*
 In that case,
 the deliberate linkage of the mento-emotional energy
 to a higher concentrating force occurs when a word, its meaning and the knowledge of the object alternate within the mind, blending as it were.

Verse 43

स्मृतिपरिशुद्धौ स्वरूपशून्येवार्थमात्रनिर्भासा निर्वितर्का
smṛtipariśuddhau svarūpaśūnya iva
arthamātranirbhāsā nirvitarka

Non-analytical linkage of his attention to a higher concentration force occurs when the memory is completely purified
 and the essential inquiring nature disappears as it were,
 such that the value of that higher force shines through.

Verse 44

एतथैव सविचारा निर्विचारा च सूक्ष्मविषया व्याख्याता
etayaiva savicāra nirvicāra ca sūkṣmaviṣayā vyākhyātā

By this, the investigative and non-investigative linkage of one's attention to a higher concentration force consisting of subtler objects, was explained.

Verse 45

सूक्ष्मविषयत्वं चालिङ्गपर्यवसानम्
sūkṣmaviṣayatvaṁ ca aliṅga paryavasānam

The insight into the subtle nature of gross objects terminates when one becomes linked to the higher concentration force which has no characteristics.

Verse 46

ता एव सवीजः समाधिः
tā eva sabījaḥ samādhiḥ

The previous descriptions concern the effortless and continuous linkage of the attention
 to a higher concentration force,
 as motivated by the mento-emotional energy.

Verse 47

निर्विचारवैशारद्येऽध्यात्मप्रसादः

nirvicāra vaiśāradye adhyātmaprasādaḥ

On gaining competence in the non-investigative linkage of one's attention to the higher concentration force, one experiences the clarity and serenity which results from the linkage of the Supreme Soul and the limited one.

Verse 48

ऋतम्भरा तत्र प्रज्ञा

ṛtambharā tatra prajñā

There with that competence, the yogin develops the reality-perceptive insight.

Verse 49

श्रुतानुमानप्रज्ञाभ्यामन्यविषया विशेषार्थत्वात्

śruta anumāna prajñābhyām anyaviṣayā viśeṣārthatvāt

It is different from the two methods of insight which are based on what is heard and what is reasoned out, because that is limited to a particular aspect of an object.

Verse 50

तज्जः संस्कारोऽन्यसंस्कारप्रतिबन्धी

tajjaḥ saṁskāraḥ anyasaṁskāra pratibandhī

That impression which is produced from the reality-perceptive insight, acts as the preventer of the other impressions.

Verse 51

तस्यापि निरोधे सर्वनिरोधान्निर्वीजस्समाधिः

tasyāpi nirodhe sarvanirodhāt nirbījaḥ samādhiḥ

The continuous effortless linkage of the attention to the higher concentration force which is not motivated by this mento-emotional energy, occurs when there is a non-operation, even of that preventative impression which caused the suppression of all other lower memories

CHAPTER 2: SĀDHANA PĀDA

Practice Accomplishment

Verse 1

तपःस्वाध्यायेश्वरप्रणिधानानि क्रियायोगः
tapaḥ svādhyāya Īśvarapraṇidhānāni kriyāyogaḥ Austerity, study of the psyche, profound religious meditation on the Supreme Lord
 is the dynamic kriya yoga practice.

Verse 2

समाधिभावनार्थः क्लेशतनूकरणार्थश्च
samādhi bhāvanārthaḥ kleśa tanūkaraṇārthaś ca
 It is for the purpose of producing continuous effortless linkage of the attention to a higher concentration force and for causing the reduction of the mental and emotional afflictions.

Verse 3

अविद्याऽस्मितारागद्वेषाभिनिवेशाः पञ्चक्लेशाः
avidyā asmītā rāga dveṣa abhiniveśaḥ pañca kleśāḥ
 The mental and emotional afflictions are spiritual ignorance, misplaced identity, emotional attachment, impulsive-emotional disaffection
 and the strong focus on mundane existence,
 which is due to an instinctive fear of death.

Verse 4

अविद्या क्षेत्रमुत्तरेषां प्रसुप्ततनुविच्छिन्नोदाराणाम्
avidyā kṣetram uttareṣāṃ prasupta tanu vicchina udārāṇām Spiritual ignorance is the existential environment
 for the other afflictions, in their dormant, reduced,
 periodic or expanded stages.

Verse 5

अनित्याशुचिदुःखानात्मसु नित्यशुचिसुखात्मख्यातिरविद्या
anitya aśuci duḥka anātmasu nitya śuci sukha ātma khyātiḥ avidyā

Spiritual ignorance is exhibited when what is temporary, impure, distressful and mundane, is identified as being eternal, pure, joyful and spiritual respectively.

Verse 6

दृग्दर्शनशक्त्योरेकात्मतेवाऽस्मिता
dṛg darśanaśaktyoḥ ekātmatā iva asmitā

Mistaken identity occurs when the supernatural vision and what is seen through it seems to be identical.

Verse 7

सुखानुशयी रागः
sukha anuśayī rāgaḥ

Craving results from a devoted attachment to happiness.

Verse 8

दुःखानुशयी द्वेषः
duḥkha anuśayi dveṣaḥ

Impulsive emotional disaffection results from a devoted attachment to distress.

Verse 9

स्वरसवाही विदुषोऽपि तथारूढोऽभिनिवेशः
svarasavāhī viduṣaḥ 'pi tatha rūḍho 'bhiniveśaḥ

As it is, the strong focus on mundane existence, which is due to the instinctive fear of death, and which is sustained by its own potencies, which operates for self preservation, is developed even in the wise man.

Verse 10

ते प्रतिप्रसवहेयाः सूक्ष्माः

te pratiprasavaheyāḥ sūkṣmāḥ

These subtle motivations are to be abandoned
by reverting their expressions backwards.

Verse 11

ध्यानहेयास्तद्वृत्तयः

dhyānaheyāḥ tadvṛttayaḥ

Their vibrational modes are to be abandoned or ceased
by the effortless linkage of the attention
to a higher concentration force or person.

Verse 12

क्लेशमूलः कर्माशयो दृष्टजन्मवेदनीयः

kleśamūlaḥ karmāśayaḥ dṛṣṭa adṛṣṭa janma vedanīyaḥ

The psychological storage of the impressions
left by performance of cultural activities
which is itself the cause of the mental and emotional distress, is experienced in realized and non-realized births.

Verse 13

सति मूले तद्विपाको जात्यायर्भोगाः

sati mūle tadvipākaḥ jāti āyuh bhogāḥ

In the case aforementioned, there exists the resulting effects
which manifest as a particular species of life
with certain duration of body and type of experiences gained in that form.

Verse 14

ते ह्लादपरितापफलाः पुण्यापुण्यहेतुत्वात्

te hlāda paritāpa phalāḥ puṇya apuṇya hetutvāt

They produce happiness and distress as results,
on the basis of merit and demerits.

Verse 15

परिणामतापसंस्कारदुःखैर्गुणवृत्तिविरोधाच्च दुःखमेव सर्वं विवेकिनः
pariṇāma tāpa saṁskāra duḥkaiḥ guṇavṛtti
virodhāt ca duḥkham eva sarvaṁ vivekinaḥ

The discriminating person knows
 that all conditions are distressful
 because of circumstantial changes, strenuous endeavor, impulsive motivations, clashing aspects
 and the vibrational modes of the mento-emotional energy.

Verse 16

हेयं दुःखमनागतम्
heyam duḥkham anāgatam

Distress which is not manifested is to be avoided.

Verse 17

द्रष्टृदृश्ययोः संयोगो हेयहेतुः
draṣṭṛdṛśyayoḥ saṁyogo heyahetuḥ

The cause which is to be avoided is the indiscriminate association of the observer and what is perceived.

Verse 18

प्रकाशक्रियास्थितिशीलं भूतेन्द्रियात्मकं भोगापवर्गार्थं दृश्यम् prakāśa kriyā sthiti śīlam bhūteन्द्रiyātmakam bhogāpavargārtham
dṛśyam

What is perceived is of the nature of the mundane elements and the sense organs
 and is formed in clear perception, action or stability.
 Its purpose is to give experience or to allow liberation.

Verse 19

विशेषाविशेषलिङ्गमात्रालिङ्गानि गुणपवर्षाणि
viśeṣa aviśeṣa liṅgamātra aliṅgāni guṇaparvāṇi

The phases of the influences of material nature
 are those which are specific, regular, indicated or not indicated.

Verse 20

द्रष्टा दृशिमात्रः शुद्धोऽपि प्रत्ययानुपश्यः

draṣṭā dṛśimātraḥ śuddhaḥ api pratyayānupaśyaḥ

The perceiver is the pure extent of his consciousness
but his conviction is patterned by what is perceived.

Verse 21

तदर्थ एव दृश्यस्यात्मा

tadārthaḥ eva dṛśyasya ātma

The individual spirit who is involved in what is seen, exists here for that purpose only.

Verse 22

कृतार्थं प्रति नष्टमप्यनष्टं तदन्यसाधारणत्वात्

kṛtārthaṁ prati naṣṭam api

anaṣṭam tadanya sādharmaṇatvāt

It is not effective for one to whom its purpose is fulfilled
but it has a common effect on the others.

Verse 23

स्वस्वामिशक्त्योः स्वरूपोपलब्धिहेतुः संयोगः

sva svāmīśaktyoḥ svarūpa upalabdhi hetuḥ saṁyogaḥ

There is a reason for the conjunction of the individual self and his psychological energies. It is for obtaining the experience of his own form.

Verse 24

तस्य हेतुरविद्या

tasya hetuḥ avidyā

The cause of the conjunction is spiritual ignorance.

Verse 25

तदभावात् संयोगाभावो हानं तद्दृशेः कैवल्यम्
tad abhāvāt saṁyogā bhāvaḥ hānaṁ taddr̥śeḥ kaivalyam

The elimination of the conjunction which results from the elimination of that spiritual ignorance
 is the withdrawal that is the total separation
 of the perceiver from the mundane psychology.

Verse 26

विवेकख्यातिरविप्लवा हानोपायः
vivekakhyātiḥ aviplavā hānopāyaḥ
 The method for avoiding that spiritual ignorance
 is the establishment of continuous discriminative insight.

Verse 27

तस्य सप्तधा प्रान्तभूमिः प्रज्ञा
tasya saptadhā prāntabhūmiḥ prajñā
 Concerning the development of his discriminative insight,
 there are seven stages.

Verse 28

योगाङ्गानुष्ठानादशुद्धिक्षये ज्ञानदीप्तिराविवेकख्यातेः
yogā ṅgānuṣṭhānāt aśuddhikṣaye
jñānadīptiḥ āvivekakhyāteḥ
 From the consistent practice of the parts of the yoga process,
 on the elimination of the impurity,
 the radiant organ of perception becomes manifest,
 until there is steady discriminative insight.

Verse 29

यमनियमासनप्राणायामप्रत्याहारधारणाध्यानसमाधयोऽष्टवङ्गानि
yama niyama āsana prāṇāyāma pratyāhāra
dhāraṇā dhyāna samādhayaḥ aṣṭau aṅgāni

Moral restraints, recommended behaviors, body posture,
 breath enrichment, sensual energy withdrawal,
 linking of the attention to higher concentration forces or persons, effortless linkage of the attention
 to higher concentration forces or persons,
 continuous effortless linkage of the attention
 to higher concentration forces or persons,
 are the eight parts of the yoga system.

Verse 30

अहिंसासत्यास्तेयब्रह्मचर्यापरिग्रहा यमाः

ahimsā satya asteya brahmacarya aparigrahāḥ yamāḥ

Non-violence, realism, non-stealing, sexual non-expressiveness
 which results in the perception of spirituality (brahman)
 and non-possessiveness, are the moral restraints.

Verse 31

जातिदेशकालसमयानवच्छिन्नाः सावभौमा महाव्रतम्
jāti deśa kāla samaya anavacchinnāḥ
sārvabhaumāḥ mahāvratam

Those moral restraints are not to be adjusted
 by the status, location, time and condition.
 They are related to all stages of yoga, being the great commitment.

Verse 32

शौचसन्तोषतपःस्वाध्यायेश्वरप्रणिधानानि नियमाः

śauca saṁtoṣa tapaḥ svādhyāya īśvarapraṇidhānāni niyamāḥ

Purification, contentment, austerity
 and profound religious meditation on the Supreme Lord are the recommended behaviors.

Verse 33

वितर्कबाधने प्रतिपक्षभावनम्

vitarkabādhane pratipakṣabhāvanam

In the case of the annoyance produced by doubts,
one should conceive of what is opposite.

Verse 34

वितर्का हिंसादयः कृतकारितानुमोदिता लोभक्रोधमोहपूर्वका
मृदुमध्याधिमात्रादुःखाज्ञानानन्तफला इति प्रतिपक्षभावनम्

*vitarkaḥ hiṁsādayaḥ kṛta kārita anumoditāḥ lobha krodha moha pūrvakaḥ mṛdu madhya adhimātraḥ duḥkha ajñāna anantaphalāḥ
iti pratipakṣabhāvanam*

Doubts which produce violence and related actions,
which are performed, caused to be done or endorsed,
and which are caused by greed, anger and delusion,
even if minor, mediocre or substantial,
cause endless distress and spiritual ignorance as the results. Therefore,
one should consider the opposite features.

Verse 35

अहिंसाप्रतिष्ठायां तत्सन्निधौ वैरत्यागः

ahiṁsāpratiṣṭhāyām tatsannidhau vairatyāgaḥ

On being firmly established in non-violence,
the abandonment of hostility occurs in his presence.

Verse 36

सत्यप्रतिष्ठायां क्रियाफलाश्रयत्वम्

satyapratīṣṭhāyām kriyāphalāśrayatvam

On being established in realism,
his actions serve as a basis for results.

Verse 37

अस्तेयप्रतिष्ठायां सर्वरत्नोपस्थानम्

asteyapratīṣṭhāyām sarvaratnopasthānam

On being firmly established in non-sealing,
all precious things wait to serve a yogin.

Verse 38

ब्रह्मचर्यप्रतिष्ठायां वीर्यलाभः

brahmacaryapraṭiṣṭhāyām vīryalābhaḥ

On being firmly established in the sexual non-expressiveness, which results in the perception of spirituality, vigor is gained.

Verse 39

अपरिग्रहस्थैर्ये जन्मकथन्तासम्बोधः

aparigrahasthairye janmakathamtā sambodhaḥ

In being consistent in non possessiveness, there is manifested the reason and the correct perception regarding one's birth.

Verse 40

शौचात्स्वाङ्गजुगुप्सा परैरसंसर्गः

śaucāt svāṅgajugupsā paraiḥ asaṁsargaḥ

From purification comes a disgust for one's own body and a lack of desire to associate with others.

Verse 41

सत्त्वशुद्धिसौमनस्यैकाग्रयेन्द्रियजयात्मदर्शनयोग्यत्वानि च

sattvaśuddhisaumanasya ekāgra indriyajaya

ātmadarśana योग्यत्वानि च

Purification of the psyche results in benevolence, the ability to link the attention to one concentration force or person, conquest of the sensual energy, vision of the spirit and fitness for abstract meditation.

Verse 42

सन्तोषादनुत्तमसुखलाभः

saṁtoṣāt anuttamaḥ sukhālābhaḥ

From contentment, the very best in happiness is obtained.

Verse 43

कायेन्द्रियसिद्धिरशुद्धिक्षयात्तपसः

kāya indriya siddhiḥ aśuddhikṣayāt tapasaḥ

Austerity, resulting in the elimination of impurity
produces perfection of the body and sensual energy.

Verse 44

स्वाध्यायादिष्टदेवतासम्प्रयोगः

svādhyāyāt iṣṭadevatā samprayogaḥ

From study of the psyche, comes intimate contact with the cherished divine being.

Verse 45

समाधिसिद्धिरीश्वरप्रणिधानात्

samādhisiddhiḥ īśvarapraṇidhānāt

From the profound religious meditation upon the Supreme Lord comes the perfection of continuous effortless linkage of the attention to that Divinity.

Verse 46

स्थिरसुखमासनम्

sthira sukham āsanam

The posture should be steady and comfortable.

Verse 47

प्रयत्नशैथिल्यानन्तसमापत्तिभ्याम्

prayatna śaithilya ananta samāpattibhyām

It results in relaxation of effort and the meeting with the infinite.

Verse 48

ततो द्वन्द्वानभिघातः

tataḥ dvandvāḥ anabhighātaḥ

From then on, there are no botherations from the dualities like happiness and distress, heat and cold.

Verse 49

तस्मिन्सति श्वासप्रश्वासयोगतिविच्छेदः प्राणायामः
tasmin satiśvāsa praśvāsayoḥ gativicchedaḥ prāṇāyāmaḥ
 Once this is accomplished, breath regulation,
 which is the separation of the flow of inhalation and exhalation,
 is attained.

Verse 50

बाह्याभ्यन्तरस्तम्भवृत्तिर्देशकालसङ्ख्याभिः परिदृष्टो दीर्घसूक्ष्मः
bāhya ābhyantara stambha vṛttiḥ deśa kāla
saṁkhyābhiḥ paridṛṣṭaḥ dīrgha sūkṣmaḥ
 It has internal, external and restrictive operations,
 which are regulated according to the place, time
 and accounting, being prolonged or hardly noticed.

Verse 51

बाह्याभ्यन्तरविषयाक्षेपी चतुर्थः
bāhya ābhyantara viṣaya ākṣepī caturthaḥ
 That which transcends
 the objective external and internal breath regulation
 is the fourth type of pranayama.

Verse 52

ततः क्षीयते प्रकाशावरणम्
tataḥ kṣīyate prakāśa āvaraṇam
 From that is dissipated, the mental darkness which veils the light,

Verse 53

धारणासु च योग्यता मनसः
dhāraṇāsu ca योग्यता मनसः
dhāraṇāsu ca योग्यता मनसः
 ... and from that, is attained the state of the mind
 for linking the attention
 to a higher concentration force or person.

Verse 54

स्वविषयासम्प्रयोगे चित्तस्य स्वरूपानुकार इवेन्द्रियाणां प्रत्याहारः
svaviṣaya asaṁprayoge cittasya svarūpānukārah
iva indriyāṇām pratyāhārah

The withdrawal of the senses is as it were,
 their assumption of the form of mento-emotional energy
 when not contacting their own objects of perception.

Verse 55

ततः परमा वश्यतेन्द्रियाणाम्
tataḥ paramā vaśyatā indriyāṇām

From that accomplishment, comes the highest degree of control of the senses.

CHAPTER 3: VIBHŪTI PĀDA*Glory Displayed*

Verse 1

देशबन्धश्चित्तस्य धारणा
deśa bandhaḥ cittasya dhāraṇā

Linking of the attention to a concentration force or person, involves a restricted location
 in the mento-emotional energy.

Verse 2

तत्र प्रत्ययैकतानता ध्यानम्
tatra pratyaya ekatānatā dhyānam

When in that location,
 there is one continuous threadlike flow of one's instinctive interest that is the effortless linking of the attention to a higher concentration force or person.

Verse 3

तदेवार्थमात्रनिर्भासं स्वरूपशून्यमिव समाधिः tadeva arthamātranirbhāsaṁ
svarūpaśūnyam iva samādhiḥ

That same effortless linkage of the attention
 when experienced as illumination
 of the higher concentration force or person,
 while the yogi feels as if devoid of himself,
 is samadhi or continuous effortless linkage of his attention to the special person, object, or force.

Verse 4

त्रयमेकत्र संयमः
trayam ekatra saṁyamaḥ

The three as one practice is the complete restraint.

Verse 5

तज्जयात्प्रज्ञालोकः
tajjayāt prajñālokaḥ

From the mastery of that complete restraint
 of the mento-emotional energy, one develops the illuminating insight.

Verse 6

तस्य भूमिषु विनियोगः
tasya bhūmiṣu viniyogaḥ

The practice of this complete restraint occurs in stages.

Verse 7

त्रयमन्तरङ्गं पूर्वेभ्यः
trayam antaraṅgaṁ pūrvebhyaḥ

In reference to the preliminary stages of yoga,
 these three higher states concern the psychological organs.

Verse 8

तदपि वहिरङ्गं निर्वीजस्य

tadapi bahiraṅgam nirbījasya

But even that initial mastership
of the three higher stages of yoga,
is external in reference to meditation,
which is not motivated by the mento-emotional energy.

Verse 9

व्युत्थाननिरोधसंस्कारयोरभिभवप्रादुर्भावौ निरोधक्षणचित्तान्वयो निरोधपरिणामः

vyutthāna nirodha saṁskārayoḥ

abhibhava prādurbhāvau nirodhakṣaṇa

cittānvayaḥ nirodhapariṇāmaḥ

When the connection with the mento-emotional energy momentarily ceases during the manifestation and disappearance phases when there is expression or suppression of the impressions, that is the restraint of the transforming mento-emotional energy.

Verse 10

तस्य प्रशान्तवाहिता संस्कारात्

tasya praśāntavāhita saṁskārāt

Concerning this practice of restraint,
the impressions derived cause a flow of spiritual peace.

Verse 11

सर्वार्थतैकाग्रतयोः क्षयोदयौ चित्तस्य समाधिपरिणामः

sarvārthatā ekāgratayoḥ kṣaya udayau

cittasya samādhipariṇāmaḥ

The decrease of varying objectives in the mento-emotional energy and the increase of the one aspect within it,
is the change noticed
in the practice of continuous effortless linking of the attention
to higher concentration forces, objects or persons.

Verse 12

ततः पुनः शान्तोदितौ तुल्यप्रत्ययौ चित्तस्यैकाग्रतापरिणामः
tataḥ punaḥśānta uditau tulya
pratyayau cittasya ekāgratāpariṇāmaḥ

Then again, when the mind's content is the same as it was when it is subsiding and when it is emerging, that is the transformation called "having one aspect in front of, or before the attention".

Verse 13

एतेन भूतेन्द्रियेषु धर्मलक्षणावस्थापरिणामा व्याख्याताः etena bhūtendriyeṣu dharma lakṣaṇa
avasthā pariṇāmāḥ vyākhyātāḥ

By this description of changes, quality and shape, the changing conditions of the various states of matter as well as those of the sensual energy, was described.

Verse 14

शान्तोदिताव्यपदेश्यधर्मानुपाती धर्मी
śānta udita avyapadeśya dharma anupātī dharmī

When the collapsed, emergent and latent forces reach full retrogression, that is the most basic condition.

Verse 15

क्रमान्यत्वं परिणामान्यत्वे हेतुः
karma anyatvaṁ pariṇāma anyatve hetuḥ

The cause of a difference in the transformation is the difference in the sequential changes.

Verse 16

परिणामत्रयसंयमादतीतानागतज्ञानम्
pariṇāmatraya saṁyamāt atīta anāgatajñānam

From the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy in terms of the three-fold transformations within it, the yogi gets information about the past and future.

Verse 17

शब्दार्थप्रत्ययानामितरेतराध्यासात्-

सङ्करस्तत्प्रविभागसंयमात्सर्वभूतरुतज्ञानम्
śabda artha pratyayānām itaretarādhyāsāt
saṅkaraḥ tatpravibhāga saṅyamāt
sarvabhūta rutajñānam

From the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy in relation to mental clarity, regarding the intermixture resulting from the superimposition one for the other, of sound, it's meaning and the related mentality, knowledge about the language of all creatures is gained.

Verse 18

संस्कारसाक्षात्करणात्पूर्वजातिज्ञानम्
saṁskāra sākṣātkaraṇāt pūrvajātijñānam

From direct intuitive perception of the subtle impressions stored in the memory, the yogi gains knowledge of previous lives.

Verse 19

प्रत्ययस्य परचित्तज्ञानम्
pratyayasya paracittajñānam

A yogi can know the contents of the mental and emotional energy in the mind of others.

Verse 20

न च तत्सालम्बनं तस्याविषयीभूतत्वात्
na ca tat sālambanam tasya aviṣayī bhūtatvāt

And he does not check a factor which is the support of that content, for it is not the actual object in question.

Verse 21

कायरूपसंयमात्तद्ग्राह्यशस्तिम्भे चक्षुःप्रकाशासम्प्रयोगेऽन्तर्धानम्
kāya rūpa saṁyamāt tadgrāhyaśakti stambhe
cakṣuḥ prakāśa asaṁprayoge antardhānam

From the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
 in relation to the shape of the body,
 on the suspension of the receptive energy,
 there is no contact between light and vision,
 which results in invisibility.

Verse 22

एतेन शब्दादि अन्तर्धानम् उक्तम्
etena śabdādi antardhānam uktam

By this method, sound and the related sensual pursuits,
 may be restrained, which results in the related perceptibility.

Verse 23

सोपक्रमं निरुपक्रमं च कर्म तत्संयमादपरान्तज्ञानमरिष्टेभ्यो वा

सखपाकरामां नरुपाकरामां चा कारमा sopakramaṁ nirupakramaṁ ca karma
tatsaṁyamādaparāntajñānamariṣṭebhyo vā

Complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
 in relation to current and destined cultural activities
 results in knowledge of entry into the hereafter.

Or the same result is gained
 by the complete restraint in relation to portents.

Verse 24

मैत्र्यादिषु बलानि
maitryādiṣu balāni

By complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
 in relation to friendliness he develops that very same power.

Verse 25

बलेषु हस्तिबलादीनि
baleṣu hasti balādīni

By complete restraint
of the mento-emotional energy in relation to strength,
the yogin acquires the strength of an elephant.
The same applies to other aspects.

Verse 26

प्रवृत्त्यालोकन्यासात्सूक्ष्मव्यवहितविप्रकृष्टज्ञानम्
pravṛtṭi āloka nyāsāt sūkṣma vyavahita viprakṛṣṭajñānam

From the application of supernatural insight
to the force producing cultural activities,
a yogi gets information about what is subtle, concealed
and what is remote from him.

Verse 27

भुवनज्ञानं सूर्ये संयमात्
bhuvanajñānam sūrye saṁyamāt

From the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
in relation to the sun god or the sun planet,
knowledge of the solar system is gained.

Verse 28

चन्द्रे ताराव्यूहज्ञानम्
candre tārav्यूhajñānam

By complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy,
in reference to the moon or moon-god,
the yogi gets knowledge about the system of stars.

Verse 29

ध्रुवे तद्गतिज्ञानम्
dhruve tadgatijñānam

By the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
in relation to the Pole Star, a yogi can know of the course of planets and stars.

Verse 30

नाभिचक्रे कायव्यूहज्ञानम्
nābhicakre kāyavyūhajñānam

By complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
 in relation to the focusing on the navel-energy-gyrating center,
 the yogi gets knowledge about the layout of his body.

Verse 31

कण्ठकूपे क्षुत्पिपासानिवृत्तिः
kaṅṭhakūpe kṣutpipāsā nivṛtṭiḥ

By the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
 in focusing on the gullet,
 a yogi causes the suppression of hunger and thirst.

Verse 32

कूर्मनाड्यां स्थैर्यम्
kūrmanāḍyāṃ sthairyam

By the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
 in focusing on the kurmanadi subtle nerve,
 a yogi acquires steadiness of his psyche.

Verse 33

मूर्द्धज्योतिषि सिद्धदर्शनम्
mūrdhajyotiṣi siddhadarśanam

By the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
 as it is focused on the shining light in the head of the subtle body,
 a yogi gets views of the perfected beings.

Verse 34

प्रातिभाद्वा सर्वम्
prātibhātvā sarvam

By complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
 while focusing on the shining organ of divination
 in the head of the subtle body,
 the yogin gets the ability to know all reality.

Verse 35

हृदये चित्तसंवित्

hṛdaye cittasaṁvit

By the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
as it is focused on the causal body in the vicinity of the chest,
the yogi gets thorough insight
into the cause of the mental and emotional energy.

Verse 36

सत्त्वपुरुषयोरत्यन्तासङ्कीर्णयोः प्रत्ययाविशेषो भोगः

परार्थत्वात्स्वार्थसंयमात् पुरुषज्ञानम्

sattva puruṣayoḥ atyantāsaṁkīrṇayoḥ pratyaya aviśeṣaḥ bhogaḥ parārthatvāt svārthasaṁyamāt puruṣajñānam

Experience results from the inability to distinguish between the individual spirit
and the intelligence energy of material nature,
even though they are very distinct.

By complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
while focusing on self-interest distinct from the other interest,
a yogi gets knowledge of the individual spirit.

Verse 37

ततः प्रातिभश्रावणवेदनाऽऽदर्शाऽऽस्वादवार्त्ता जायन्ते

tataḥ prātibha śrāvaṇa vedana

ādarśa āsvāda vārtāḥ jāyante

From that focus is produced smelling, tasting, seeing, touching and hearing,
through the shining organ of divination.

Verse 38

ते समाधावुपसर्गा व्युत्थाने सिद्धयः

te samādhau upasargāḥ vyutthāne siddhayaḥ

Those divination skills are obstacles
in the practice of continuous effortless linkage of the attention to a higher concentration force, object or person.

But in expressing,
they are considered as mystic perfectional skills.

Verse 39

बन्धकारणशैथिल्यात् प्रचारसंवेदनाच्च चित्तस्य परशरीरावेशः

*bandhakāraṇa śaithilyāt pracāra
saṃvedanāt ca cittasya paraśarīrāveśaḥ*

The entrance into another body is possible
by slackening the cause of bondage
and by knowing the channels of the mento-emotional energy.

Verse 40

उदानजयाज्जलपङ्ककण्टकादिष्वसङ्ग उत्क्रान्तिश्च

udānajayāt jala paṅka kaṅṭakādiṣu asaṅgaḥ utkrāntiḥ ca

By mastery over the air which rises from the throat into the head,
a yogi can rise over or not have contact
with water, mud or sharp objects.

Verse 41

समानजयाज्ज्वलनम्

samānajayāt jvalanam

By conquest of the samana digestive force,
a yogi's psyche blazes or shines with a fiery glow.

Verse 42

श्रोत्राकाशयोस्सम्बन्धसंयमाद्दिव्यं श्रोत्रम्

śrotra ākāśayoḥ saṃbandha saṃyamāt divyam śrotram

By the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy,
while focusing on the hearing sense and space,
a yogin develops supernatural and divine hearing.

Verse 43

कायाकाशयोस्सम्बन्धसंयमाल्लघुतूलसमापत्तेश्चाकाशगमनम्

*kāya ākāśayoḥ saṃbandha saṃyamāt
laghutūlasamāpatteḥ ca ākāśagamanam*

By the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy,
while linking the mind to the relationship between the body and the sky and linking the attention to being as light as cotton fluff,
a yogi acquires the ability to pass through the atmosphere.

Verse 44

वह्निरकल्पिता वृत्तिर्महाविदेहा ततः प्रकाशावरणक्षयः
bahiḥ akalpitā vṛttiḥ mahāvidehā
tataḥ prakāśa āvaraṇakṣayaḥ

By the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
 which is external, which is not formed,
 a yogi achieves the great bodiless state.
 From that, the great mental darkness which veils the light,
 is dissipated.

Verse 45

स्थूलस्वरूपसूक्ष्मान्वयार्थवत्त्वसंयमाद्भूतजयः
sthūla svarūpa sūkṣma anvaya
arthavatva saṁyamāt bhūtajayaḥ

By the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy,
 while linking the attention to the gross forms, real nature,
 subtle distribution and value of states of matter,
 a yogi gets conquest over them.

Verse 46

ततोऽणिमादिप्रादुर्भावः कायसम्पत्तद्धर्मानभिघातश्च tataḥ aṇimādi prādurbhāvaḥ kāyasamṣat
taddharma anabhighātaḥ ca

From minuteness and other related mystic skills
 come the perfection of the subtle body
 and the non-obstructions of its functions.

Verse 47

रूपलावण्यबलवज्रसंहननत्वानि कायसम्पत्
rūpa lāvanya bala vajra saṁhananatvāni kāyasamṣat Beautiful form, charm, mystic force and diamond-like definition come from the perfection of the subtle body.

Verse 48

ग्रहणस्वरूपास्मितान्वयार्थवत्त्वसंयमादिन्द्रियजयः
grahaṇa svarūpa asmitā anvaya
arthavattva saṁyamāt indriyajayaḥ

From the continuous effortless linkage of the attention
to sensual grasping, to the form of the sensual energy,
to its identifying powers, to its connection instinct
and to its actual worth,
a yogi acquires conquest over his relationship with it.

Verse 49

ततो मनोजवित्त्वं विकरणभावः प्रधानजयश्च
tataḥ manojavitvaṁ vikaraṇabhāvaḥ pradhānajayaḥ ca

Subsequently, there is conquest over the influence of subtle matter and over the parting away or dispersion
of the mento-emotional energy,
with the required swiftness of mind.

Verse 50

सत्त्वपुरुषान्यताख्यातिमात्रस्य सवभावाधिष्ठातृत्वं सर्वज्ञातृत्वं च
sattva puruṣa anyatā khyātimātrasya
sarvabhāva adhiṣṭhātṛtvaṁ sarvajñātṛtvaṁ ca

Only when there is distinct discrimination
between the clarifying perception of material nature
and the spiritual personality, does the yogi attain complete disaffection and all-applicative intuition.

Verse 51

तद्वैराग्यादपि दोषबीजक्षये कैवल्यम्
tadvairāgyāt api doṣabījakṣaye kaivalyam

By a lack of interest, even to that (discrimination between the clarifying mundane energy
and the self) when the cause of that defect is eliminated,
the absolute isolation of the self
from the lower psyche of itself, is achieved.

Verse 52

स्थान्युपनिमन्त्रणे सङ्गस्मयाकरणं पुनरनिष्टप्रसङ्गात्
sthānyupanimantraṇe saṅgasmayākaraṇaṃ
punaraniṣṭa prasaṅgāt

On being invited by a person from the place
 one would attain if his body died,
 a yogi should be non-responsive,
 not desiring their association and not being fascinated,
 otherwise that would cause unwanted features of existence
 to arise again.

Verse 53

क्षणतत्क्रमयोः संयमाद्विवेकजं ज्ञानम्
kṣaṇa tatkramayoh samyamāt vivekajam jñānam

By the continuous effortless linkage of the attention to the moment and to the sequence of the moments, the yogi has knowledge
 caused by the subtle discrimination.

Verse 54

जातिलक्षणदेशैरन्यतानवच्छेदाचुल्ययोस्ततः प्रतिपत्तिः
jāti lakṣaṇa deśaiḥ anyatā anavacchedāt
tulyayoh tataḥ pratipattiḥ

Subsequently, the yogi has perception of two similar realities which otherwise could not be sorted due to a lack of definition in terms of their general category, individual characteristic and location.

Verse 55

तारकं सर्वविषयं सर्वथाविषयमक्रमं चेति विवेकजं ज्ञानम्
tārakam sarvaviṣayaṃ sarvathāviṣayam akramaṃ ca iti vivekajam jñānam

The distinction caused by subtle discrimination is the crossing over or transcending of all subtle and gross mundane objects in all ways they are presented, without the yogi taking recourse to any other sequential perceptions of mind reliance.

Verse 56

सत्त्वपुरुषयोः शुद्धिसाम्ये कैवल्यमिति
sattva puruṣayoḥ śuddhi sām्यe kaivalyam iti
 When there is equal purity between the intelligence energy of material nature and the spirit, then there is total separation
 from the mundane psychology.

CHAPTER 4: KAIVALYA PĀDA*Segregation Accomplished*

Verse 1

जन्मौषधिमन्त्रतपःसमाधिजाः सिद्धयः
janma auśadhi mantra tapaḥ samādhijāḥ siddhayaḥ
 The mystic skills are produced
 through taking birth in particular species,
 or by taking drugs, or by reciting special sounds,
 or by physical bodily austerities or by the continuous effortless linkage of the attention
 to a higher concentration force, object or person.

Verse 2

जात्यन्तरपरिणामः प्रकृत्यापूरात्
jātyantara pariṇāmaḥ prakṛtyāpūrāt
 The transformation from one category to another
 is by the saturation of the subtle material nature.

Verse 3

निमित्तमप्रयोजकं प्रकृतीनां वरणभेदस्तु ततः क्षेत्रिकवत्
nimittam aprayojakam prakṛtīnām
varaṇabhedaḥ tu tataḥ kṣetrikavat

The motivating force of the subtle material energy
 is not used except for the disintegration of impediments,
 hence it is compared to a farmer.

Verse 4

निर्माणचित्तान्यस्मितामात्रात्
nirmāṇacittāni asmitāmātrāt

The formation of regions within the mento-emotional energy,
 arises only from the sense of identity
 which is developed in relation to material nature.

Verse 5

प्रवृत्तिभेदे प्रयोजकं चित्तमेकमनेकेषाम्
pravṛtti bhede prayojakam cittam ekam anekeṣām

The one mento-emotional energy is that which is very much used in numberless different dispersals of energy.

Verse 6

तत्र ध्यानजमनाशयम्
tatra dhyānajam anāśayam

In that case only subtle activities which are produced from the effortless linkage of the attention to a higher reality are without harmful emotions.

Verse 7

कर्माशुक्लाकृष्णं योगिनस्त्रिविधमितरेषाम्
karma aśukla akṛṣṇam yoginaḥ trividham itareṣām

The cultural activity of the yogis
 is neither rewarding nor penalizing,
 but others have three types of such action.

Verse 8

ततस्तद्विपाकानुगुणानामेवाभिव्यक्तिर्वासनानाम्
tataḥ tadvipāka anuguṇānām eva abhivyaktiḥ vāsanānām Subsequently from those cultural activities there is development according to corresponding features only,
 bringing about the manifestation of the tendencies
 within the mento-emotional energy.

Verse 9

जातिदेशकालव्यवहितानामप्यानन्तर्यं स्मृतिसंस्कारयोरेकरूपत्वात्
jāti deśa kāla vyavahitānām api ānantaryam smṛti saṁskārayoḥ ekarūpatvāt
 Even though circumstances are separated by status, location and time,
 still the impressions which form cultural activities
 and the resulting memories, are of one form
 and operate on a timeful sequence.

Verse 10

तासामनादित्वं चाशिषो नित्यत्वात्
tāsām anāditvaṁ ca āśiṣaḥ nityatvāt
 Those memories and impressions are primeval,
 without a beginning.
 Hope and desire energies are eternal as well.

Verse 11

हेतुफलाश्रयालम्बनैः सङ्गृहीतत्वादेषामभावे तदभावः hetu phala āśraya ālambanaiḥ saṅgrhītatvādeṣāmbhāve tadabhāvaḥ
eṣām abhāve tad abhāvaḥ
 They exist by what holds them together
 in terms of cause and effect, supportive base and lifting influence.
 Otherwise if their causes are not there, they have no existence.

Verse 12

अतीतानागतं स्वरूपतोऽस्त्यध्वभेदाद्धर्माणाम्
atīta anāgataṁ svarūpataḥ asti adhvabhedāt dharmāṅām

There is a true form of the past and future
denoted by the different courses of their characteristics.

Verse 13

ते व्यक्तसूक्ष्मा गुणात्मानः
te vyakta sūkṣmāḥ guṇātmānaḥ

They are gross or subtle, all depending on their inherent nature.

Verse 14

परिणामैकत्वाद्धस्तुतत्त्वम्
pariṇāma ekatvāt vastutattvam

The actual composition of an object
is based on the uniqueness of the transformation.

Verse 15

वस्तुसाम्ये चित्तभेदात्तयोर्विभः पन्थाः
vastusāmye cittaḥedāt tayoḥ vibhaktāḥ panthāḥ

Because of a difference
in the mento-emotional energy of two persons, separate prejudices manifest in their viewing of the very same object.

Verse 16

न चैकचित्ततन्त्रं वस्तु तदप्रमाणकं तदा किं स्यात्
*na ca ekacitta tantraṁ ced vastu
tat apramāṅakam tadā kim syāt*

An object is not dependent
on one person's mento-emotional perception.
Otherwise, what would happen
if it were not being perceived by that person?

Verse 17

तदुपरागापेक्षित्वाच्चित्तस्य वस्तु ज्ञाताज्ञातम्
taduparāga apekṣitvāt cittasya vastu jñāta ajñātam

An object is known or unknown,
 all depending on the mood and expectation
 of the particular mento-emotional energy of the person in reference to it.

Verse 18

सदा ज्ञाताश्चित्तवृत्तयस्तत्प्रभोः पुरुषस्यापरिणामित्वात्
sadā jñātāḥ cittavṛttayaḥ
tatprabhoḥ puruṣasya aparīṇāmitvāt

The operations of the mento-emotional energy
 are always known to that governor
 because of the changelessness of that spirit.

Verse 19

न तत्स्वाभासं दृश्यत्वात्
na tat svābhāsaṁ dṛśyatvāt

That mento-emotional energy is not self-illuminative
 for it is rather only capable of being perceived.

Verse 20

एकसमये चाभयानवधारणम्
ekasamaye ca ubhaya anavadhāraṇam

It cannot execute the focus of both at the same time.

Verse 21

चित्तान्तरदृश्ये बुद्धिबुद्धेरतिप्रसङ्गः स्मृतिसङ्करश्च
cittāntaradṛśye buddhibuddheḥ
atiprasaṅgaḥ smṛtisaṅkaraḥ ca

In the perception of mento-emotional energy
 by another such energy, there would be an intellect
 perceiving another intellect independently.
 That would cause absurdity and confusion of memory.

Verse 22

चित्तेरप्रतिसङ्क्रमायास्तदाकारापत्तौ स्वबुद्धिसवेदनम्
citeḥ apratisaṅkramāyāḥ
tadākārāpattau svabuddhisamvedanam

The perception of its own intellect occurs
 when it assumes that form in which there is no movement from one operation to another.

Verse 23

द्रष्टृद्रश्योपरक्तं चित्तं सर्वार्थम्
draṣṭṛ dṛśya uparaktam cittam sarvārtham
 The mento-emotional energy which is prejudiced by the perceiver and the perceived, is all-evaluating.

Verse 24

तदसङ्ख्येयवासनाभिश्चित्रमपि परार्थं संहत्यकारित्वात्
tat asaṅkhyeya vāsanābhiḥ citram
api parārtham saṅhatyakāritvāt
 Although the mento-emotional energy is diverse by innumerable subtle impressions,
 it acts for the sake of another power
 because of its proximity to that other force.

Verse 25

विशेषदर्शिन आत्मभावभावनाविनिवृत्तिः
viśeṣadarśinaḥ ātmabhāva bhāvanānivṛttiḥ
 There is total stopping
 of the operations of the mento-emotional energy
 for the person who perceives the distinction between feelings and the spirit itself.

Verse 26

तदा विवेकनिम्नङ्कैवल्यप्राग्भारञ्चित्तम्
tadā hi vivekanimnam kaivalya prāgbhāram cittam
 Then, indeed, the mento-emotional force is inclined towards discrimination
 and gravitates towards the total separation
 from the mundane psychology.

Verse 27

तच्छिद्रेषु प्रत्ययान्तराणि संस्कारेभ्यः

tat cchidreṣu pratyayāntarāṇi saṁskārebhyaḥ

Besides that, in the relaxation of the focus,
other mind contents arise in the intervals.
These are based on subtle impressions.

Verse 28

हानमेषां क्लेशवदुक्तम्

hānam eṣāṁ kleśavat uktam

As authoritatively stated, the complete removal of these is like the elimination of the mento-emotional afflictions.

Verse 29

प्रसङ्गव्यानेऽप्यकुसीदस्य सर्वथा विवेकख्यातेर्धर्ममिघस्समाधिः

*prasamkhyāne api akusīdasya sarvathā
vivekakhyaṭeḥ dharmameghaḥ samādhīḥ*

For one who sees no gains in material nature,
even while perceiving it in abstract meditation,
he has the super discrimination.

He attained the continuous effortless linkage of the attention to higher reality which is described as knowing the mento-emotional clouds of energy
which compel a person to perform
according to nature's way of acting for beneficial results.

Verse 30

ततः क्लेशकर्मनिवृत्तिः

tataḥ kleśa karma nivṛttiḥ

Subsequently there is stoppage of the operation
of the mento-emotional energy
in terms of generation of cultural activities
and their resulting afflictions.

Verse 31

तदा सर्वावरणमलापेतस्य ज्ञानस्यानन्त्याज्ज्ञेयमल्पम्
tadā sarva āvaraṇa malāpetasya
jñānasya ānantiyāt jñeyam alpam

Then, because of the removal of all mental darkness and psychological impurities, that which can be known through the mento-emotional energy,
seems trivial in comparison to the unlimited knowledge available
when separated from it.

Verse 32

ततः कृतार्थानां परिणामक्रमसमाप्तिगुणानाम्
tataḥ kṛtārthānām pariṇāmakrama samāptir guṇānām
Thus, the subtle material nature, having fulfilled its purpose,
its progressive alterations end.

Verse 33

क्षणप्रतियोगी परिणामापरान्तनिर्ग्राह्यः क्रमः
kṣaṇa pratiyogī pariṇāma aparānta nirgrāhyaḥ kramaḥ
The process, of which moments are a counterpart,
and which causes the alterations,
comes to an end and is clearly perceived.

Verse 34

पुरुषार्थशून्यानां गुणानां प्रतिप्रसवः
कैवल्यं स्वरूपप्रतिष्ठा वा चित्तिशक्तिरिति Puruṣārthaśūnyānām guṇānām pratiprasavaḥ kaivalyam
svarūpapraṭiṣṭhā vā citiśaktiritim

Separation of the spirit
from the mento-emotional energy (kaivalyam),
occurs when there is neutrality
in respect to the influence of material nature,
when the yogi's psyche
becomes devoid of the general aims of a human being.
Thus at last, the spirit is established in its own form
as the force empowering the mento-emotional energy.

END.

Part 2

An Approach to Patañjali's Yoga Sūtras

Chapter 1

Samādhi Pāda:

Transcendence Accomplishment

1. Now Sri Patanjali gave the explanation of Yoga and its practice.
2. Yoga is accomplished when as a yogin, you can stop the creative urges of your mind and emotions.
3. Then you can become familiar with your bare self.
4. But otherwise, whatever you do is regulated by the urges.
5. There are five types of those creative urges. Each type has troublesome and non-troublesome interactions.
6. The five types are experienced when you gage external things correctly, when you gage them incorrectly, when you imagine anything, when you sleep and when you experience memory.
7. Your correct assessments occur by accurate sense perception, by efficient analysis or by using a reliable reference.
8. When you gage something incorrectly, that occurs through false information or by mistaking one factor for something else.
9. When you hear of something or read of it, ideas concerning it usually form. When these concepts misrepresent the actual thing, that misconception is imagination.
10. Sleep is that creative urge which operates without your awareness.
11. Memory operates anytime you visualize something which was experienced before.
12. By not having an interest in the mental ideas and emotional feelings, you may develop the power to stop their influence.
13. You should persistently cultivate that lack of interest.

14. However you should be reverential in the practice and it must be sustained for a long time.
15. Note well, that the lack of interest in one's own ideas and emotions is achieved only by one who has mastery over his psychological nature. Such a person would not crave things mundane which are perceived by his own senses or which is heard of by his own ears.
16. Please realize that the required lack of interest is exhibited when one attains a resistance to urges which usually compel one to fulfill mundane desires. That lack of interest results in the development of a thorough awareness of the spiritual self.
17. At first, after you develop that lack of interest, you will notice that your attention becomes linked to higher psychological states, but there will still be some analysis, reflection, inner joy and focus on self-consciousness.
18. Periodically and with good luck, you will experience the transcendence in which the memory of things mundane seems not to exist at all.
19. That will give you a glimpse of the status of the released souls, who are diffused into the subtle material nature requiring no gross existence and those divine beings who exist without a subtle or super subtle material body. Their mind and emotion does not comprise of subtle energies of material nature.
20. Since you have neither the diffused status nor the divine one, and since you still have a fixation with the memory of things mundane, your success in cultivating the required lack of interest hinges on confidence in what Sri Patanjali recommends. You would be required to have stamina. You should train yourself to retain any transcendental experiences, even the slightest. You should study this text so as to recognize the characteristics of samadhi which is continuous and spontaneous contact between your attention and someone or some energy which is beyond your normal range of perception. By this, a profound insight will develop in your psyche.
21. Know with certainty that those of you who practice forcefully in a very intense way, will be masterful yogis in the near future.
22. But not everyone can apply themselves with intensity. One person might be mediocre. Another might practice infrequently.
23. There is a special method to be mentioned. That is the profound religious meditation upon the Supreme Lord.

24. This person is that special individual who is not affected by troubles, actions, developments or by subconscious motivations, which are based on the urgings of subtle material nature.
25. He is, for all practical purposes the ultimate knower. He is the most experienced person.
26. This God, being unconditioned by time, is the teacher even of the ancient masters of yoga, the pioneers of the process of release.
27. The teachers before me designated the sacred syllable AUM (Om) as being related to Him.
28. Many ancient teachers constantly repeated and murmured AUM (Om) for realizing it's effects and meaning.
29. Thus when uttered correctly, one's sense energy develops the urge to turn away from objects outside of one's material body. The sense energy then seeks psychological inner objects. Thus the extrovert tendency which is an obstacle to progress, is greatly decreased.
30. The obstacles to the practice of yoga are: physical and mental diseases, idleness, doubts about the power of the practice, inattentiveness while practicing, lack of energy to invest in an intense practice, proneness to sensuality in terms of always being drawn to forms in this world, mistaken views due to the inability to side-step cultural activities and scattered mental and emotional energy which is due to being influenced by the subtle material energy.
31. It would be necessary to remove the tendency for distracted states of mind. These come about by distress, depression, nervousness and labored breathing. All of which are triggered by impulsive emotional states.
32. To remove any of these obstacles, one should practice a standard method, which was effective for a more advanced yogi and which he recommends.
33. When the obstacles to the practice of yoga temporarily subside or when they are removed altogether, an abstract meditation ensues. In that state, the creative urges disappear. This is directly related to the successful cultivation of friendliness, compassion, cheerfulness and non-responsiveness to happiness, distress, virtue and vices.

34. That abstract meditation may be caused by practicing a method of breath manipulation wherein the vital energy of the gross and subtle body is enhanced, causing the creative urges to subside, so that the higher nature is experienced.
35. One may attain fusion to higher states or steadiness of mind by directing the mind towards a supernatural or spiritual object. Such an object would be just as real and objective as a physical one.
36. That may be achieved by attaining sorrowless and spiritually-luminous states.
37. One may attain super-consciousness by linking one's attention to a person who is without craving.
38. In some cases, super-consciousness may occur after one takes recourse to dream experiences or to the dreamless sleep.
39. It may be achieved by a spontaneous linkage of the attention to a higher concentration force or person which was dearly desired.
40. The mastery over the functions and movements of the urges, results in the control of one's relationship to the smallest portions of energy or to the largest conglomerations.
41. For the great reduction of the urges in your mind and emotions, one has to sort between the perceiver in the mind, the flow of ideas or images, which are perceived by him and the objects from which the perception originated. This is similar to knowing the status of a transparent jewel, the light which it absorbs from a colorful source, and that colorful source itself. In that comparison the perceiver is like the jewel. His ideas and images are like the colored light which is reflected in the jewel.
42. Even in ordinary usage of consciousness, one may deliberately link one's attention to a higher concentration force by a careful observation of how the mind-attention mechanism operates when a word, its meaning and the knowledge of the object alternate within the mind, blending as it were, with one of those facets permeating with the other.

43. Even though analysis is useful in material existence, it does not serve the purpose in higher yoga practice. In fact such analysis is discarded completely in the highest stages. When the memory is completely purified where it no longer reminds the self to pursue vices and when the inquiring inquisitive nature disappears as it were, then the higher concentration forces and the divine personalities are experienced objectively.
44. One may investigate very subtle objects after dropping the usual analysis, and after mastering the linkage of the attention as stated above.
45. But the insight gained by that mystic research terminates, when one becomes linked to the higher concentration force which has no gross characteristics and which is not directly linked to a gross object.
46. Initially, all of this is motivated by the creative urges, in the sense that they caused the inquiring tendency in the first place. Thus the previous descriptions were of higher experiences which were to a degree, motivated, because the spirit made contact with the creative urges of the mental and emotional energies.
47. In the advanced states however, those urges lose their hold on the self. Thus that self is no longer motivated by them and no longer reacts to them, either for fulfilling the urges or for becoming indifferent to them. Thus the motivations come from the Supreme Soul to whom the limited soul becomes linked. That association brings on clarity and serenity.
48. There, with that competence, the yogi develops the reality-perceptive insight, which is so natural to the Supreme Soul and which the limited soul develops in the supreme association.
49. This is different to the normal perception, which is based on what is heard of, what is reasoned out in the material world, since that limited perception is restricted to a partial aspect of an object and never does it reveal comprehensively.
50. Once the association of Supreme Soul is repeatedly attained, the impressions of that contact which forms in the mind, acts as the preventer of the other impressions which used to contravene yoga practices.

51. When there is linkage of the attention to the higher concentration force, this must be effortless and continuous (not with effort and not momentarily). When it is like that it is considered to be samadhi, the highest stage of yoga. In that state there is a complete departure from the memory and so its power of reminding the self of its contents is nullified completely. The self then becomes freed.

Chapter 2

Sādhana Pāda:

Practice Accomplishment

1. Kriya yoga is strongly recommended because it is definite. It is a hands-on personal process. It is not reliant on mere good luck nor on accidental process. Kriya yoga has scientific austerity, careful introspective study of the psyche and religious meditation on the Supreme Lord, as it's practice.
2. That kriya yoga causes a reduction of the mental and emotional conflicts and their short-termed or long-termed negative effects. It is the definite way for attaining samadhi, which is the continuous effortless linkage of the attention to higher dimensions and their contents
3. There are five general headings of the mental and emotional conflicts which are stored in the psyche. These are the inability to know the difference between one's spirit and its subtle sensing tools, the compelling tendency to react to other influences, the tendency to link with other factors emotionally, the strong urge to dislike certain other factors, and the instinctive fear of death which sponsors a strong focus on mundane existence.

4. The inability to know the difference between one's spirit and its subtle sensing tools, is not just that lack of knowledge, but it serves as a mental and emotional environment, which is productive of and supportive of the other conflicts of identity, and energy. These conflicting energies may be dormant, reduced, appearing periodically or expanding fully.
5. That spiritual ignorance is revealed to someone when he realized that what he considered to be eternal was temporary, and what was pure was actually impure, what was joyful was in fact distressful and what was spiritual was mundane.
6. The compelling tendency to react to other influences occurs when one cannot distinguish between the viewing-sensing power and what is seen through it.
7. The impulsive urge to link with other factors emotionally creates as a result, a craving for repeated contact with those factors and a devoted attachment to any pleasure experienced by such contact.
8. The strong urge to dislike certain factors arises as a need for conflict and disharmony. It is an attachment to distress.
9. The instinctive fear of death is the subtle body's way of showing its dislike for having to repeatedly give up gross forms in an unpleasant way. To counteract the effects of this, the subtle form exhibits a strong focus on mundane existence. These energies operate even in the psyche of a wise man.
10. The mental and emotional conflicts are to be nullified by squelching their eruptions so that when they arise within the mind or emotions, their urges are inhibited or forced back into dormancy or potentiality.
11. The mental or emotional eruptions are to be squelched by developing a meditation habit whereby the attention effortlessly links to a higher concentration force or person.
12. Impressions of everything encountered do lodge in the mind and are stored there but this stored energy is itchy and troublesome. An advanced yogi may perceived those stored impressions which erupts into mental and emotional distress and is even felt by persons who are not yogis.

13. Those bodies which are assumed as well as the various climatic and geographic environments come about on the basis of those stored impressions. They are the origin. Thus the control of that stored energy is vital in terms of liberation of any limited being.
14. With those bodies functioning in the outcome-environments like this earth, we perform austerities which produce a culture or way of life. And this in turn causes happiness and distress as results, all occurring on the basis of merits and demerits which are defined by the relationship of the energies.
15. An advanced yogi has a special discriminating ability, whereby he can sort between his spirit and his psychological viewing aids. Thus he recognizes the potential for distress which cultural activity and the resulting impressions pose. There will be circumstantial changes which are beyond the performer's control and which may aid or frustrate his enterprise. He must exert himself on many occasions. He must submit to impulsive motivations from time to time, and he must react to some clashing aspects whether he wants to or not. Finally, he cannot at all times suppress the urges which grow out of his mind and emotions.
16. But distress which is not manifested is to be avoided. Thus one should develop power to thwart the impressions which would produce that.
17. Remember that the cause which can definitely be adjusted is the indiscriminate association of the observer and what is perceived. But since that linkage is impulsive and most natural, efforts will have to be made to change it.
18. What is perceived in this world with this psychology is of the nature of the mundane elements and the sense organs, and is formed in clear perception, action or stability. Its purpose is to give experience or to allow liberation. But to gain liberation, one has to abandon the need for the experiences in this world.
19. Some of the experiences afforded by material nature occur in clear perception, some in the fervor of action, some in any of the states of stability which make one form regrettable decisions. These experiences may be specific, regular, indicated before hand, or not anticipated at all.
20. Even though the perceiver is the pure extent of his consciousness, his conviction, once formed in any way, is patterned by what he perceived.

21. The individual spirit who is involved in what is seen exists here for either purpose. He may either accept the experience presented to him and react to it as he is urged and biased, or he may side-step the experiencing mechanism and move in the direction of liberation.
22. The experiences have little impact on one to whom its purpose is fulfilled but it has a common effect on all others, and keeps them occupied and enthralled.
23. Even though the conjunction of the individual spirit and his psychological energy is condemned, still its ultimate purpose is justified, when the person attains liberation. Then he appreciates that it afforded him the objective experience of his own form through blending and then contrasting itself with his core self.
24. Always keep in mind that the inability to know the difference between one's spirit and its sensing tools, is the very cause of their conjunction in the first place. Kriya yoga is designed to remove that inability.
25. One must practice the kriya discipline because it affords a detachment whereby the perceiver is separated from his sensing tools.
26. The unification with the sensing tools is to be avoided. If achieved, one develops the discriminative insight, which affords one freedom from identity with the urges of the mind and emotions.
27. There are seven stages of progress when developing the discriminative insight, which gives one the ability to differentiate between the self and its sensing tools.
28. The radiant organ of perception becomes available to one who has consistently practiced the kriya yoga process. It is experienced when there is elimination of the psychological impurities.
29. Restraining from vices and sensual addictions, becoming habituated to a disciplined life which accelerates yoga, doing bodily postures which enhances health, performing breath enrichment and control processes, removing one's attention from the things pertaining to this existence, shifting one's attention to higher concentration forces or persons, holding one's attention there long enough for it to become habituated to the higher forces or persons, and experiencing the resultant fusion of the attention into the higher dimension encountered.

30. The moral restraints consist of the following:

Non-violence: The avoidance of violence towards other life forms, the avoidance of psychological violence towards other spiritual entities, the practice of a calm, detached mood as professed by Sri Krishna in the Bhagavad-gita, if one is duty bound to discipline or apply violence to anyone.

Realism: The practice of studying the situations carefully before acting or reacting to them. The practice of assessing the defects of one's intellect to gauge its reliability in perceiving truth. Relieving oneself of the need for a favorable or palatable truth.

Non-stealing: Curing oneself of the natural urge to steal by carefully observing and monitoring the psychological mechanisms of stealing which is innate to nature.

Sexual non-expressiveness which results in the perception of spirituality (brahman): Becoming detached from expressive sexuality and from normal exhibitions and demonstrations of sexuality either as a male or female. Investing the energy usually used in sexuality for the perception of spirituality

Non-possessiveness: Carefully studying the sense of possession. Suppressing it effectively while studying methods of its eradication and spiritually supportive uses.

31. Even though one may be pressured to adjust the moral restraints, one should strive to side-step those causes and justifications for deviation. The pressures come on from the status, the location, the time and the condition. Since the moral restraints are applicable in all stages of yoga, they are the great commitment for all yogis.

32. The recommended behaviors are as follows:

Purification: Psychic cleansing which is achieved by mastery of kundalini yoga for purifying the subtle body and its energies.

Contentment: This is the practice of detachment from desire for the mundane life. It means to find an effective way of changing one's nature to eradicate the desire for mundane experiences.

Austerity: This means to practice kriya yoga under the guidance of a more advanced yogi. These austerities should suppress unwanted desires to the point of eliminating them. Such desires are those which cause extroversion and which discourage the quest for liberation.

Profound meditation on the Supreme Lord: One can meditate on the Person God, if one has a functional relationship with Him. Over all, this is impractical for most practitioners since they either have an imaginary relationship with their preferred deity or a very meager connection. To be realistic one has to develop a relationship with a person who is more advanced on this spiritual path laid out by Sri Patañjali.

33. There may be doubts about the claims of yoga made in this text of Sri Patanjali and made in other yoga books, however one should cast these doubts aside and practice. When the doubts arise, one should ignore the doubtful ideas and push ahead with practice.
34. One may doubt that one can exist without committing some minimal violence. For instance, even if one refrains from eating animal flesh, one will have to eat something else, vegetables or fruits for example. And in that case there will be violence against trees, insects and microbes. Still one should minimize such violence and hold faith that ultimately it can be removed by transfer to another dimension where the violence will be absent. If one does not succeed at yoga practice, the implication is that one will be condemned to material existence, with endless distress and continued misidentification with the mundane energy in any of its gross or subtle formations.
35. When a yogi is firmly established in non-violence, that is exhibited by his life style. Then even hostile creatures abandon their aggressive stance in his presence.
36. When a yogi is established in realism, his actions serve as a basis for desired results. He is not easily frustrated because he acts in accordance with reality, is subordinate to it, respects it and rarely makes unrealistic plans in attempts to contravene it.
37. When the yogi has subdued the stealing tendency in human nature, material existence endeavors to serve him. Thus it seems that all precious things become available to him.
38. When the yogi has practiced effective methods of sex activity reduction and elimination, his vigor to perform yoga increases proportionately. Thus his perception of spirituality is actuated.
39. Due to the development of non-possessiveness, the yogi intuitively enters into the causes of his birth. By mystic skill he reviews actions from past lives which caused him to take the present birth.
40. From purification of the subtle body, comes a disgust for one's own gross form and lack of desire to associate sexually with others.

41. Purification of the subtle energy results in a great reduction in emotional needs. From that stability one finds it easy to link the attention to one concentration force or person. After much practice one acquires conquest of the sensual energy. One gets vision of the spirit and becomes fit for abstract meditation.
42. With the reduction of sensual life in this world, with a developed resistance to desires, one gains contentment. From that, the very best in happiness is obtained.
43. Kriya yoga austerities which are highlighted by mystic actions in and with the subtle body, do result in elimination of emotional impurities. That gives perfection of the subtle form in which the troublesome, vice-seeking sensual energy is housed.
44. An in-depth mystic research into the nature of the subtle body causes the yogi to make contact with more advanced mystics. This leads to communication with divine beings, and eventually he gets in touch with the cherished divine beings, one of whom is the Supreme Lord.
45. From the profound religious meditation upon the Supreme Lord or upon any of the divine beings, comes a full time communion with that divinity.
46. As for bodily posture, it should be steady and comfortable.
47. When mastered, it results in relaxation of the effort to subdue the body and make it serve the spiritual aims. That assists in the quest of meeting with the infinite.
48. Once the body is mastered, comfortable or uncomfortable climate, pleasant or unpleasant emotions, no longer bother the person.
49. Once this is accomplished, the body's anxiety for air is greatly decreased, then there are pauses between the flow in inhalation and exhalation.
50. Breathing has internal, external and restrictive operations, which are regulated according to the place, time and accounting, being prolonged or hardly noticed. A change in lifestyle affects all this.
51. But a more advanced condition is realized, which has nothing to do with physical breathing. This is the energy consumption of the subtle body. That regulation of the subtle energy or prana is the fourth type of pranayama energy intake.

52. When a yogi shifts his attention to that subtle plane of consciousness, the darkness within his mind becomes dissipated, resulting in perception of light in real subtle objects,
53. and the establishment of always being able to link his attention to a higher concentration force or person.
54. The self should learn how to subsist on the bare sensual energy by itself without its usage procuring objects in this world. This is called pratyahar or sensual energy withdrawal. After mastering this, the yogin notices that the withdrawal of the senses is as it were, their assumption of the form of unformed psychological energy which is quiescent when it is not contacting the objects of perception.
55. From that accomplishment comes the highest degree of control of the senses because they are powered by the inner sensual energy which a human being identifies as his emotions and mental force.

Chapter 3

Vibhūti Pāda:

Glory Displayed

1. The yogi must be so familiar with the realm of mind and emotions, that he should begin to recognize where thoughts, ideas, images and memories arise. Their particular location in the mind environment and emotional atmosphere should be known. Then he may practice the sixth stage of yoga, which is linking of the attention to a concentration force or person through a restricted location in the mento-emotional space.
2. But in the seventh stage of yoga, the next stage, that of dhyana, the yogi experiences that there is a continuous threadlike flow of his instinctive interest to the selected location in the mind or emotions. This is the effortless linkage of the attention to a higher concentration force or person.

3. When, however, that sense of effortless linkage of the attention joins continually to a particular location in the mind or emotions or outside into a higher dimension, it is the highest stage of yoga, that of samadhi. It may be a link to a greater yogi or to a divinity. This is experienced as illumination of the higher concentration force or person while the yogi feels as if devoid of his conditioned self.
4. The three higher stages of yoga, when practiced in sequence, are considered as the complete restraint; then the sixth stage directly progresses into the seventh and seventh into the eighth and final stage.
5. By regular practice of the sequential three higher stages, one gains mastery over the mental and emotional urges, and then the illuminating insight becomes available for usage.
6. But this development occurs in stages
7. This higher yoga concerns voluntary control over the psychological organs in the mind and the creative urges in the emotions.
8. But even that initial mastership of the three higher stages of yoga is external in reference to meditation which is not motivated by the mental and emotional energy. Therefore you should strive to reach the advanced stages.
9. It may be asked: What is the description of the mind and emotions when the creative urges cease? The answer is this: The mind energy and emotional feelings periodically assume of their own accord, a stillness wherein there is no activity. This happens just after an idea or image subsides, and just before another one begins. The interim period may be long or momentary. When this happens impulsively, a yogi has no control over it, but he should still observe it and focus sharply on the blank interval. He should carefully note the location where the idea or image subsides. He should attach his attention to that place in the mind or emotion environment. When practicing however, he should, with attention, suppress any emerging idea or image and hold his mind or emotion in that blank state so that no other idea or image expresses itself.

10. When one learns how to use the attention to suppress any emerging idea or image, and to hold the mind and emotions in that blank state, that mastership causes a flow of spiritual peace. Impressions from that restraining activity do enter the memory. Those records of it, aid, and support the yogi, giving him more and more power over the impulsive creative urges.
11. When a yogi first gets a foothold on this mastership, he notices a decrease of the various impulsive objectives of the mind and emotions and an increase in the blank duration which occurs between the emergence and the dissolution of ideas.
12. The blankness of the mind and emotions is the desired objective for that initial samadhi practice, even though perception will develop later in it.
13. By this practice one gets personal experience of the changes, the quality, shape, changing conditions of the various states of matter and the sensual energy. Thus the mental and emotional provinces are clarified and are no longer a muddlement or vague environment. Nor does one confuse oneself with it.
14. When the emerging, manifesting, collapsing or not-yet-manifested ideas, images or emotions push back into the mental or emotional energy, and when that energy has a blankness or quiescence, that is the most basic condition.
15. But when there is expression of ideas, images or emotional feelings, these are usually different because of the sequential changes in the emotional energy which produces them.
16. When the yogi repeatedly pushes back the images or emotions into the mental and emotional energy, he gains access to the deeper layers of the memory, even to those from previous lives and he gains perception of those future possibilities which would be based on past impressions.
17. The yogi removes himself from biases which relate to sound and when he can steady his attention on that alone, getting beyond words, sounds and their formation, he makes contact with the object being described by any creature. Thus their different languages do not confuse his perception.
18. The yogi gains knowledge of his previous lives by developing direct intuitive perception of the subtle impressions stored in his own or another's memory.

19. Though he can know the mental or emotional content of a person, he should not seek to use that skill. Unless he is advised to do so by a senior yogi, he should not exercise that skill.
20. The tendency of the memory and imagination, is to check, recheck, create and recreate opinions and conclusions. An advanced yogi eliminates this tendency because it hampers higher yoga. Thus he does not allow his mind to project one idea after another in an endless sequence which entertains or keeps one occupied without any increased control over the emotions.
21. When the receptive energy of the subtle body is curbed, the yogi develops a resistance to social contact. This causes him to have some invisibility.
22. This imperceptibility may be applied to the other sensual perceptions.
23. By applying his attention to current or destined cultural activities, when no other ideas, images or memories occur in the mind, the yogi gains insight into the hereafter, or he may apply his attention to supernatural occurrences which cause his perception of worlds in other dimensions.
24. By applying his attention to friendliness within his nature and in the subtle cosmic environment, he develops universal benevolence.
25. By applying his attention to strength, personally or generally, he acquires the power of an elephant. This type of application is effective in other aspects.
26. When after much practice, a yogi develops the supernatural insight he would, of course, apply it to the force which produces cultural activities. Thus he gets information about what is subtle, concealed and what is remote from him.
27. He may apply his supernatural insight to the sun god or the sun planet. Thus knowledge about the solar system is gained.
28. From an application to the moon or moon-god, he gets knowledge about the system of stars.
29. By application to the Pole Star he can know of the course of the planets and stars.
30. By supernaturally focusing on the navel energy-gyrating center, the yogi gets knowledge about the layout of his subtle body.

31. By focusing on the gullet, he causes the suppression of appetite.
32. By focusing on the kurmanadi nerve which runs from below the gullet down the inner center of the subtle body, he acquires steadiness of his psyche.
33. By focusing on the shining light in the subtle head, he gets views of the perfected beings.
34. By focusing on the shining organ of divination in the head of the subtle form, he gets the ability to know all reality.
35. By focusing on the causal body in the vicinity of the chest, he gets thorough insight into the cause of the mental and emotional energies.
36. Experience in the material world results from the inability to distinguish between the individual spirit and the intelligence energy of material nature, even though they are in fact, very distinct. By complete restraint of the mental and emotional energies while focusing on self-interest distinct from the other concerns, a yogi gets knowledge of the individual spirit.
37. From that focus is produced supernatural smelling, tasting, seeing, touching and hearing, through the shining organ of divination
38. But those divination skills may prove to be obstacles in advanced yoga practice. But to worldly people they are considered as spectacular powers.
39. The entrance into another's body is possible by slackening the cause of bondage to cultural activities, and by knowing the channels which the mental and emotional energies use to entertain and dominate the self.
40. By mastery over the air which rises from the throat into the head, in the subtle body, a yogi can cause his gross form to rise over or not have contact, with water, mud or sharp objects.
41. By conquest of the digestive force in the gross body, a yogi's subtle form blazes or shines with a fiery glow.
42. By special focusing on the hearing sense and space, a yogin develops supernatural and divine hearing.
43. By linking the mind to the relationship between the body and the sky and linking the attention to being as light as cotton fluff, a yogi acquires the ability to objectively pass his subtle form through the atmosphere.

44. By restraining his response to the mental and emotional energy, which is universal, a yogi achieves the great bodiless state. From that, the great mental darkness which veils subtle light is dissipated.
45. By restraining his mind and emotions, while linking the attention to gross forms, real nature, subtle distribution and supersubtle states of matter, a yogi gets conquest over them.
46. From the assumption of minuteness and other related mystic skills, come the perfection of the subtle body and the non-obstruction of its functions.
47. Beautiful form, charm, mystic force, diamond-like definition come from the perfection of the subtle body. This is attained by mastership of kundalini yoga.
48. From supernatural linkage to sensual grasping, to the form of the sensual energy, to its identifying powers, to its connection instinct and to its actual worth, a yogi acquires conquest over his relation with the sensual energy.
49. Subsequently, he progresses into conquest over the influence of subtle matter and over the parting away or dispersion of the mental and emotional forces, having the required swiftness of mind.
50. Only when there is distinct discrimination between true perception of material nature and the spiritual personality, does the yogi attain complete disaffection from the same nature and all-applicative intuition to whatever he encounters.
51. By a lack of interest, even to that skill, when the cause of that defect is eliminated, the absolute isolation of the self from the lower psyche, is achieved.
52. On being invited by a person from the gross or subtle mundane place one would attain, if the body died, a yogi should be non-responsive, not desiring their association and not being fascinated, otherwise that would cause unwanted features of existence to arise again, and he would again take birth in this world or appear in a dimension near to this one, from which he would be transferred here again.
53. By supernatural linkage of his attention to the moment in time and to the sequence of moments, the yogi has detailed supernatural information.

54. Subsequently, the yogi clearly distinguishes between two similar realities which otherwise, could not be sorted due to lack of definition in terms of their general category, individual characteristic and location.
55. Thus the yogin need no longer take recourse to the normal methods of perception and analysis. For him the distinction caused by subtle discrimination is the crossing over or transcending of all subtle and gross mundane objects in all ways they are presented.
56. When by mastership of kriya yoga, there is equal purity between the intelligence energy of material nature and the spirit, then there is total separation from the error-prone, spiritually-misleading mundane psychology

Chapter 4

Kaivalya Pāda:

Segregation Accomplished

1. The mystic skills are demonstrated on the material plane through the various abilities of the varying species of life one may assume. Each species facilitates a particular ability of the subtle body. One may be empowered with a mystic skill by taking drugs which alter the chemistry of a particular form. Skills may be exhibited after pronouncing certain special sounds which affect the constitution of a body. Physical austerities may change a body to make it do what is normally impossible for the particular species. And supernatural linkage of one's mystic attention may affect changes which are unusual for one's body.

2. The transformation from one life form to another or from one dimension to another, from one existential status to another, occurs by saturation of the subtle body with the energy from that other species, dimension or status that is to be adopted.
3. The motivating force of the subtle material energy, whereby it appears to inspire the yogi to endeavor for liberation, is not used except for the disintegration of impediments, hence it is compared to a farmer who is not the real cause of growth of cultivated plants.
4. A yogi is shown how the various parts of his mind and emotions come into existence because of the involuntary application of his sense of identity to the subtle material nature.
5. The one mento-emotional energy is that which is very much used in numberless different dispersals of energy, which occur as ideas and images, arising from memory and sense perception.
6. In that case, only subtle activities which are produced from linkage to higher realities, are without harmful emotions; for the others are rooted in the subtle material nature, which always affords reversals.
7. Due to their effective detachment and their ability to push the emerging ideas and images back into the pad of the mind or the territory of the emotions, the cultural activity of the advanced yogins is neither rewarding nor penalizing, but others have three types of such action.
8. Subsequently for those cultural activities of common people, there is development according to corresponding features only, bringing about the manifestation of the tendencies within the mento-emotional energy, which causes harmful emotions to be experienced by them.
9. Even though circumstances are separated by status, location and time, still the impressions which form cultural activities and the resulting memories, are of one form and operate on a full time sequence. Thus all who are involved in worldly life meet with unfavorable circumstances and are fatigued by favorable occasions, which endorse the vices which bleed out their sensual energies.
10. Those memories and impressions are primeval without a beginning. Hope and desire energies are eternal as well. Thus the proposal which makes sense, recommends a removal of the individual spirit from this unalterable environment.

11. The memories, the impressions, the hope and desire energies, exist by what holds them together in terms of what produced them and what they generate, as well as the supportive basis and the lifting influences which reinforce their production. Otherwise, if their causes were not in existence, they would have no register at all. Thus without supernatural perception and action one cannot become freed from their influence. Hence the practice of kriya yoga is essential.
12. There is a true form of the past and future, which is denoted by the different courses of their particular characteristics. And one is subjected to the future unless one escapes from time's dominance.
13. The manifestations which are to a greater degree preset, are gross or subtle, all depending on their inherent nature.
14. The actual composition of an object is based on the uniqueness of the transformation which produced it, but this can only be viewed supernaturally.
15. Because of a difference in the prejudices of the mento-emotional energy of the two persons, separate opinions manifest in their viewing of the very same object.
16. An object is not dependent on one person's view of it; otherwise what would happen if it were not being perceived by that viewer? Would it cease to exist? But we find that this is not so.
17. An object is known or unknown, all depending on the mood and expectation of the particular mental and emotional energy of the viewer in reference to it. Thus each person must endeavor separately and individually for liberation.
18. The operations of the mind and emotions are always conducted by empowerment taken from the governing spirit. This is because of the spirit being a perpetual energy source. However, the spirit is usually bewildered and is entertained by the usage of his powers.
19. The separation of the mind and emotions are not self-generated by the mind nor the emotions. For these are only capable of being perceived by a real viewer. It is like a viewing instrument which cannot see for itself even though it is useful to the vision of a human being.
20. It cannot by itself execute the focus of itself or something else.

21. If it were possible for the mind or emotions to view themselves, then one mind would perceive another mind independently without involvement with a spirit or one emotional reserve would interact with another in the same way. That is not possible. It is an absurd idea.
22. The perceptions of a spirit's intellect occurs when the intellect operates to create an image but as soon as the image begins to dissolve, it seems as if the intellect itself vanishes.
23. When the mental and emotional forces are quieted, they do not display a prejudiced reaction. Under these conditions, their biases remain dormant. But as soon as there is an activation of the urges, the predispositions are displayed. These are attitudes and responses which were created previously by interactions of the perceiver, his sense energy and what was perceived.
24. Although the mind and emotions seem to combine to exhibit habits and unique behaviors, still those exhibitions only entertain the perceiver. It is that seer whose radiant energy causes the activation. The mind and emotions absorb his energy to entertain him.
25. When someone can distinguish between himself and his auxiliary shadow-self, his detachment or ability to distance himself from the sensuality, empowers him to push away the creative urges which may arise in his psyche.
26. Then a strange but glorious observation is made. One notices that the troublesome and once hard-to-control mind and emotions, begin acting cooperatively, as if to actually please the self and do as told. It exhibits a habit of discrimination, loosing its impulsive tendency, and it gravitates towards total separation from the self, a thing which before it was fearful of.
27. However, whenever the self relaxes vigilance, that now-cooperative psychology is again forced into the old behaviors, which were based on the old subtle impressions.
28. When the yogi applies an effective method to remove the old impressions, his resulting condition is exactly like that experienced, when the mental and emotional afflictions are no longer actuated.
29. The super discrimination, the highest degree of disinterest, is achieved by one who sees no gain in material nature, even in very abstract but potent conditions. Such a person attains an insight whereby he perceives the mento-emotional clouds of energy which dictate the laws of responsibility. Subsequently, he can side-step such obligations.

30. Unless instructed by a divine being, he stops the participation of his auxiliary shadow-self, which has the mind and emotions as its chief components. These are restrained from generating further cultural activities. Thus ending potential afflictions.
31. Obviously then, the yogin considers his former insights and feelings to be trivial, when compared to his newly-earned visions.
32. Thus the subtle material nature having served a useful purpose, its progressive alterations which sometimes perplexed and sometimes entertained the spirit, come to an end.
33. The once free and own-way (aniruddha) auxiliary self stops its mental, sensual and emotional dominance, those rhythmic displays which the self was once forced to enjoy or endure.
34. When he sheds off the human type of character which was a combination of mentality, sensuality and emotions, he gains a neutrality in reference to the subtle material nature. That separation from his auxiliary self, is established. Thus he discovers his segregated real self, which empowers the auxiliary shadow character.

Part 3

Yoga Sūtras: Verses, Translation and Commentary

Chapter 1

Samādhi Pāda:

Transcendence Accomplishment

Verse 1

अथ योगानुशासनम्

atha yogānuśāsanam

atha – now; yogānuśāsanam = yoga – yoga and its practice

+ ānuśāsanam – explanation

Now I give the explanation of yoga and its practice.

Commentary:

Śrī Patañjali began by the term atha which means now or at this time, I will do something. He took the task of giving the explanation of yoga and its practice, because before this time such an explanation was not laid out in an academic way. He gave the syllabus for yoga, thus breaking the monopoly of all those teachers who mastered yoga and who taught it to their students bit by bit over the years.

Whatever Śrī Patañjali would say would be standard. It cannot be changed merely by a difference in philosophy. Just as a gasoline combustion engine manufactured in Japan will be quite similar to one manufactured in Germany, so yoga practice will be the same everywhere, because the human body is the same in each case, and the way of changing the subtle form which produced that gross one is also the same.

Verse 2

योगश्चित्तवृत्तिनिरोधः

yogaḥcittavṛtti nirodhaḥ

yogaḥ – the skill of yoga; cittavṛtti = citta – mento-emotional energy + vṛtti – vibrational mode; nirodhaḥ – cessation, restraint, non-operation.

The skill of yoga is demonstrated
by the conscious non-operation of the vibrational modes
of the mento-emotional energy.

Commentary:

Yoga is something personal and practical. It is not a group effort. Each student of yoga has to achieve the states all by himself or herself. Thus in a sense, yoga is an isolated and lonely course. This is the reason for the poor response of the public to the call to take up hard-core yoga austerities. People like company but yoga requires the company of one's self only. One must work with one's psyche only to be successful in yoga.

There were many attempts to translate the word chitta. Some say it is the mind, some say it is the energy in the mind. Some say it is the consciousness.

These terms, though accurate to a degree bring with them a certain vagueness which covers the meaning even more.

To understand chitta we have to consider two aspects, those of thinking and feeling. Whatever energy is used for thinking is chitta, and whatever is used for feeling is chitta. It is chitta through which we think and feel. To understand chitta one has to become concerned with psychological locations. Where does your thinking take place? When a thought arises in which energy is it illustrated in the mind? When you have an emotional response to something real or imaginary, in which part of your psyche does that take place? What sort of energy is used to develop and transmit emotion? Whatever correct answer one would give to any of these questions would identify the chitta energy. Chitta is the mento-emotional energy in which our thoughts are formed and are disintegrated. It is the energy in which our feelings are formed and in which the same feelings subside to nothingness.

By convention it is discovered that the vibrational energy of the mind always keeps moving in one way or the other. Thus some spiritual masters conclude that it would be impossible to comply with this stipulation of Patañjali for the non-operation of the mento-emotional force in the psyche. They have dismissed Patañjali as being an impractical theorist. The solution they say is to engage the mind in spiritual topics, never giving it the chance to dwell on ordinary subjects, which are apart from the transcendence. However, human convention is not everything. When a yogin gets experience beyond the dimension of this world, he can afford to heed Patañjali, and strive for the non-operation of the mental-emotional force in this dimension of consciousness. Somehow by his own endeavor and by divine grace, a yogin's mento-emotional force becomes stilled. It stalls for a time and turns into a divine vision which perceives the chit akasha, the sky of consciousness, the world known otherwise as akshardam, brahma and vaikuṅṭha. When this happens, the yogi understands what Śrī Patañjali explained in this verse 2 of his sūtras.

Śrīla Yogeshwarananda Yogirāja indicated that Śrī Patañjali should not have suggested that it was possible to completely quiet the mento-emotional force, for indeed, it is not possible to stop it from vibrating altogether, but rather one may quiet it in one dimension while it continues to operate in another. It cannot be quieted in all of its phases because even after the dissolution of the universe, the prāṇa, or subtle mundane energy keeps shifting quietly for many millions of years. This slight movement, might in reference, be considered to be static but it does have a vibrational consistency.

Verse 3

तदा द्रष्टुः स्वरूपेऽवस्थानम्

tadā draṣṭuḥ svarūpe avasthānam

tadā – then; draṣṭuḥ – the perceiver; svarūpe – in his own form; avasthānam – is situated.

Then the perceiver is situated in his own form.

Commentary:

When the mento-emotional energy has reached the state of quiescence, the perceiver within that energy, experiences himself by himself, alone without those influences. This is the state of svarūpa, or his own form.

So long as that mento-emotional energy vibrates actively, the perceiver is not allowed to reflect on himself. He is instead, drawn into concerns other than myself. Thus he responds carelessly since his sense of identity was diverted to something else. Śrī Patañjali gave this statement about the situation in the spiritual self, swarupe, to give encouragement and to generate interest in self-realization. After all, if one does not realize one's essential self, one must identify with objects or energies which are not the self.

Verse 4

वृत्तिसारूप्यमितरत्र

vṛtti sārūpyam itaratra

vṛtti – the mento-emotional energy; sārūpyam – with the same format, conformity; itaratra – at other times.

At other times, there is conformity
with the mento-emotional energy.

Commentary:

The perceiver, even though he is different to the mento-emotional energy, is not allowed to show autonomy or independence when that energy is active in its concern for things in this dimension. The perceiver is forced as it were, to conform to the dictates of that mento-emotional force. He is forced to use the same format as the energy irrespective of a deliberate or non-deliberate interest into this dimension and its corresponding higher or lower locales. The perceiver is forced to identify with that ideation energy. It is only when its vibrations cease of their own accord or are suppressed by him or by another force, that he may realize the self.

Verse 5

वृत्तयः पञ्चतय्यः क्लिष्टाऽक्लिष्टाः

vṛttayaḥ pañcatayyaḥ kliṣṭā akliṣṭāḥ

vṛttayaḥ – the vibrations in mento-emotional energy; pañcatayyaḥ – fivefold; kliṣṭākliṣṭāḥ = kliṣṭā – agonizing + akliṣṭāḥ – non-troublesome.

The vibrations in the mento-emotional energy are five-fold, being agonizing or none-troublesome.

Commentary:

Śrī Patañjali has not given a middle designation or a mixed status for the mento-emotional vibrations. He simply stated that there were five types of these vibrations; some causing agony and some which are not troublesome. This is to be realized in mystic yoga practice so that the yogi becomes expert at recognizing the various moods of his mind and emotions. An ignorance of the operations of the mental and emotional energy, will cause the self to trail behind the mental and emotional moods. This will invariably lead to haphazard rebirths and responsibility for wreckless acts. Ignorance of one's psychology and of how it operates, is costly to the living entity.

As stated in the second verse of these sūtras, the skill of yoga is demonstrated by non-vibration of the mento-emotional energies. When the yogi ceases the vibrations, the energy converts into being a supernatural vision with which he sees into the chit akash, the sky of consciousness, the spiritual environment. The yogin was given the chitta energy for that purpose but due to his ineptness he was not able to use it appropriately. Instead it served him for imagining and analyzing mundane energy. Śrī Patañjali will tell us something more about the five vibrational modes of the mental and emotional energy.

Verse 6

प्रमाणविपर्ययविकल्पनिद्रास्मृतयः

pramāṇa viparyaya vikalpa nidrā smṛtayaḥ

pramāṇa – correct perception; viparyaya – incorrect perception; vikalpa – imagination; nidrā – sleep; smṛtayaḥ – memory.

They are correct perception, incorrect perception,
imagination, sleep and memory.

Commentary:

This means that we have to recognize five kinds of vibrational activities of the mento-emotional energy. According to Śrī Patañjali whatever occurs in the mental and emotional energy must be one of a combination of the five vibrations. A yogin should know these thoroughly. If one does not understand the workings of his mind and feelings, he cannot become liberated. One cannot become liberated from an ignorance of these.

We are endowed with the mento-emotional energy and it is restricted to those five kinds of vibrations which produce either correct perception, false perception, imagination, sleep and memory. All these psychological functions occur in the chitta energy. That is its capability when focused into this dimension. The problem with this is that the living entity cannot always be in a position to know what is taking place within his own mind and emotions. In most persons, the operations occur faster than the entity is able to perceive. Thus the entity sees the conclusions or feels such conclusions and does not understand what is taking place until after it has occurred or until after he or she has reacted beneficially or unbeneficially to them.

Let us take for example the operation of sleep. One may fall asleep and not know it until after the sleep mode has terminated. A man for instance, who drives a car in a tired state, would realize that he fell asleep at the wheel after his car had crashed into a tree and he awoke in a badly damaged body in a hospital. The operations are impulsively performed in the mind and emotions. This impulsiveness is a handicap for the living entity.

Now I will discuss these five operations one by one:

Correct Perception:

The most interesting feature of this operation is our dependence upon it. The question arises as to why we need a psychological tool for correct perception. Why is it that we could not perceive reality without having to use the mento-emotional energy? The question is this: If as this sūtra indicates, we are dependent on the correct perception vibrational mode of the mind, then how can we restrict the energy so that it does not shift into the mode which gives us incorrect perception or unrealistic imagination? As we consider these sūtras, we will see if Śrī Patañjali dealt with these questions. Otherwise each yogi will have to get answers from another authority and from his own valid research.

The only thing we know for certain is this: the mento-emotional energy is capable of five kinds of operations. Furthermore, normally we do not control this, but rather this happens reflexively. What yoga process gives us the ability to control this either absolutely or partially?

Incorrect Perception:

The problem with false perception is that within the energy itself, there is a tendency not to recognize the vibrations which cause false perception, but rather to try to correct such perception by various haphazard applications. Therefore we have to train the psychology in a different way, in a totally new way, so that it becomes concerned only with recognizing the vibrational state from which false perceptions are derived. This means that we have to advance to higher yoga in dhāraṇā linkage of the mind to higher concentration forces.

It is not false perceptions that are the problem but rather the vibrations in the energy which cause the wrong views in the first place. We have to strive to recognize these vibrations and to stop them, so that the mind may function only with the vibrations which produce correct or true perceptions. This will take repeated practice, because the vibrations which produce false perceptions are naturally occurring. It is not a matter of suppressing these undesirable vibrations, even though a yogi will have to suppress them from time to time. It is rather a feat for the yogi to cause the mind and feelings not to vibrate in that way. This would require a mastership of prāṇāyāma and a strong development of vigilance and acute dispassion. These aspects will be discussed in detail elsewhere in this commentary. It is mentioned by Śrī Patañjali.

SPECIAL NOTE:

Two persons in particular requested that I write this translation and commentary of Śrī Patañjali Muni's Yoga Sūtras. Those persons are Śrīla Yogeshwarananda Yogirāja who has departed from his physical body and Sir Paul Castagna, who to this date (Jan. 2003) still uses a physical form. Śrīla Yogeshwarananda, thought that I was duty bound to write such a translation and commentary and that it would benefit me. Sir Paul Castagna thought that I would further break open the meaning of the sūtras. In any case I now thank these two individuals for their pushing and tugging.

Śrī Patañjali Maharshi is not an ordinary person. And though I was reluctant to translate and comment on this classic work on Yoga and its practice, still I benefited from this task which my teacher Śrīla Yogeshwarananda and my colleague Sir Paul Castagna motivated me to begin and complete.

Imagination:

The curbing of the imagination faculty is the key to a successful dhāraṇā practice. This dhāraṇā is the sixth stage of yoga, that of linking the attention to a higher concentration force. The process of willful non-operation of the vibrational capacity of the mento-emotional energy has to do with curbing the impulsive nature of the imagination faculty of the buddhi organ in the head of the subtle body. Hence the checking of the impulsive operation of this faculty is the key to mastery of the dhāraṇā practice.

Śrī Krishna told Arjuna that for those living entities who are embodied, this technique is hard to attain:

kleśo 'dhikataras teṣām avyaktāsakta-cetasām
avyaktā hi gatih duḥkhaṃ dehavadbhir avāpyate

The mental exertion of those whose minds are attached to the invisible existence is greater. The goal of reaching that invisible reality is attained with difficulty by the human beings. (Gītā 12.5)

For a person who is used to gross and subtle mundane objects and who is sensually inclined to enjoying such objects, a preliminary procedure is given by the yogi masters. This is the process of focusing on sanctified objects in this world. After some time when the student develops detachment from this world, he is introduced to the method of directly shifting his attention from this world to the chit akash, the sky of consciousness. This begins with the naad sound kriyā which was given to Uddhava in the eleventh canto of Śrīmad Bhāgavatam:

hr̥dy avicchinnaṃ oṃkāraṃ ghaṇṭā-nādaṃ bisorṇa-vat
prāṇenodīrya tatrātha punaḥ samveśayet svaram

In the heart chakra, the Om sound which is like the continuous peal of a bell, resonates continually, like a fibre in a lotus stalk. Raising it by using the vitalizing energy, one should blend that sound with the musical tones. (Śrīmad Bhāgavatam 11.14.34)

When the imagination faculty is fully curbed, it develops into the eye of consciousness, which is called jñāna chakrus or jñāna dipah. When this eye opens one sees into the chit akash, the sky of consciousness. When one is steady in using this eye, one's spiritual life is sealed. That is an objective of yoga practice.

Sleep:

The vibration of sleep cannot be eliminated altogether but its negative aspects may be curtailed by a yogin through mastery of prāṇāyāma and expertise in the dhāraṇā linkage of the attention to higher concentration forces. According to Śrīla Yogeshwarananda, sleep is a permanent requirement for the subtle and causal forms. These bodies require sleep for rejuvenation. Even the cosmic god, the Hiranyagarbha personality, has to sleep from time to time, thus shutting down his energies which flow into this material world.

However, a yogin should curtail the negative aspects of sleep by learning how to keep his subtle body fully charged with fresh prāṇa and with energies which come in from higher dimensions.

Memory:

The vibration of memory is ever-active and functions automatically on the basis of promptings which come to it from the mento-emotional chamber. Memory circuits are triggered by impressions which arise in the imagination, as well as from the other three vibrational powers of true perception, false perception and sleep. A yogin has to learn how to shut off the automatic switch which causes the memory to be activated. If he fails to do this, he will be unable to reach the stage of samādhi which is the highest level of yoga practice.

Verse 7

प्रत्यक्षानुमानागमाः प्रमाणानि

pratyakṣa anumāna āgamāḥ pramāṇāni

pratyakṣanumānāgamāḥ = pratyakṣa – direct but correct perception + anumāna – correct analysis + āgamāḥ – correct reference; pramāṇāni – true perception, correct perception.

Correct perception may be acquired directly,
by correct analysis or by correct reference.

Commentary:

Even though this is obvious, Śrī Patañjali alerts us in this verse, that we have to learn how to recognize when our intellect functions in this mode of operation. Everyone understands that when false information is used there will be incorrect conclusions. Analysis, when applied to false information, results in false conclusion, which leads to incorrect insight. It is the same with reference. A reference may be the wrong one, or it may be inaccurate, hence the use of it will lead to false conclusions. Direct perception may be incorrect. Pratyakṣa is a combination of prati and akṣah, but akṣah means perception. When that perception is correct, it is prati-akṣah, pratyakṣa. For true perception a yogin must have an accurate intellect and also have accurate information from outside his intellect. It is not just reliant on his intellect. It is reliant on getting accurate information outside the intellect. However, if the yogin's intellect is sufficiently surcharged with higher concentration forces, he will recognize the incorrect and unreliable information. He will not use such information to produce wrong conclusions. A yogi must be in the right position to get the right information. This is achieved by mystic maneuvers. This all means that there is more for accurate perception; more is required besides the purity of the psyche of the yogi. He has to get himself into a position from which he can use his accurate buddhi organ to perceive correctly.

An astronomer may have an accurate telescope but still he cannot take an accurate reading on a very cloudy night unless he can go beyond the cloud formations. He has to put himself in the proper positions to use the accurate instrument. Correct perception may be acquired directly only if the yogin has a reality-perceiving intellect and is in the proper position to use it.

Correct perception can be acquired directly by insight developed by correct analysis after getting some facts but this is solidified only after the yogin can take that analysis to the point of getting the direct sight of it. Furthermore, by correct reference, a yogin may form certain correct conclusions but that is not sufficient because it is not direct sensual observation. Therefore it is incomplete. He will have to develop himself further to reach the stage of true direct sensual perception of the supernatural and spiritual realities.

Finally, a yogin has to develop himself in such a way as to sort out the various true and erroneous perceptions of his intellect. Then he may suppress and gradually eliminate the faulty parts and the motivations which support defective perception.

Verse 8

विपर्ययो मिथ्याज्ञानमतद्रूपप्रतिष्ठम्

viparyayah mithyājñānam atadrūpa pratiṣṭham

viparyayah – incorrect perception; mithyājñānam = mithyā – false + jñānam – information; atadrūpa = atad – not this + rūpa – form; pratiṣṭham – positioned, based.

Incorrect perception is based on false information
and on perception of what is not the true form.

Commentary:

The vibrational mode which produces a firm conviction about something that is incorrect is caused by the perception of false information and on perceiving what is not the true form (atadrūpa).

The willingness of the buddhi organ in accepting the information given to it by the senses is the root of this problem. The reliance of the buddhi on the sensual energies must be broken by the yogin. This can be achieved by perfecting the pratyāhār 5th stage of yoga practice, where the sensual energies are withdrawn from their interest into the subtle and gross mundane world. The strength of the senses which is their ability to keep the buddhi organ under subjugation is based on the extrovert tendencies of the organ. Thus if that tendency is squelched, the senses lose their authority over the organ and it becomes independent of them. This is mastered by pratyāhār practice.

The perception of the sensual energies is operated with the energy of fuel of the prāṇa which is subtle air. When the yogi practices prāṇāyāma and is able to take in a higher grade of prāṇa, his senses become purified and they no longer make so many erroneous judgments which they force the buddhi to accept. Thus the yogi becomes freed from incorrect perceptions.

Verse 9

शब्दज्ञानानुपाती वस्तुशून्यो विकल्पः

śabdajñāna anupātī vastuśūnyaḥ vikalpaḥ

śabdajñāna – written or spoken information; anupātī – followed by;
vastuśūnyaḥ – devoid of reality, without reality; vikalpaḥ – imagination.

Verbal or written information which is followed by concepts which are devoid of reality, is imagination.

Commentary:

It is important to understand that the same imagination faculty which can mislead the living entity or cause him to come to the wrong conclusion, is the very same psychic organ which he must use to see into the superphysical world. Even though Śrī Patañjali listed only five modes of operation for this tool, still, when it is shifted off from this world it can be used for superphysical perceptions. Therefore it can be used in the mode of correct perceptions for spiritual insights.

When it is used as motivated by false verbal or written information, it develops ideas, conceptions and the like, which cause an imagination which has no basis in reality. But since the living entity is dependent on it, he accepts its picturizations, sounds and impressions as if such notions were a reality. Thus he makes mistakes. He has to learn to recognize when his buddhi organ has adopted a submissive acceptance of incorrect information.

Verse 10

अ-वप्रत्ययालम्बना वृत्तिर्निद्रा

abhāva pratyayaḥ ālambanā vṛtṭiḥ nidrā

abhāva – absence of awareness; pratyayaḥ – conviction or belief as mental content; ālambanā – support, prop, means of conversion; vṛtṭiḥ – vibrational mode; nidrā – sleep.

Sleep is the vibrational mode which is supported
by the absence of objective awareness.

Commentary:

There are various types of sleep but the true sleep is when the mind has no content, such that one feels as if one was barely existing during the sleep. This is realized not during that state but after it. During such sleep the living entity becomes disconnected from his buddhi organ. But when he is connected to it again, he realizes that he was barely connected to his discrimination and sense of objectivity.

We may consider that the vṛtṭis or vibrational modes of the mental and emotional energy are fivefold in normal consciousness. It is like a car which has a set of five gears, with a neutral function. The reverse function is comparable to the operational mode of memory. Memory has to do with recalling something from the past. The other modes or gears are all forward vibrations, which Śrī Patañjali gave as correct perception, false perception, imagination, and sleep.

Verse 11

अनुभूतविषयासम्प्रमोषः स्मृतिः

anubhūta viṣaya asaṁpramoṣaḥ smṛtiḥ

anubhūta – the experience; viṣaya – the object; asaṁpramoṣaḥ – retention; smṛtiḥ – memory.

Memory is the retained impression of experienced objects.

Commentary:

Memory has to do with the past and therefore it might be compared to the reverse gear in an automobile. In reverse, the driver travels on the path traversed before. Memory must be curbed by a yogin, because otherwise he would never be free from the mental impressions which have formed in his conscious and subconscious mind. These impressions vent themselves into the conscious mind and are appropriated by the buddhi intellect organ for usages in further imaginations, which lead to actions of interference in the material world. This interference brings on liabilities for which the yogin is held responsible. If one does not quell, or quiet off completely the memory and disconnect from it, he cannot become liberated. Thus a yogin has to get a method for neutralizing this function in the mento-emotional energy.

Verse 12

अभ्यासवैराग्याभ्यां तन्निरोधः

abhyāsa vairāgyābhyāṁ tannirodhaḥ

abhyāsa – effective yoga practice; vairāgyābhyāṁ = non-interest, a total lack of concern, non-interference; tan = tat – that; nirodhaḥ – cessation, restraint, non-operation.

That non-operation of the vibrational modes is achieved by effective practice in not having an interest in the very same operations.

Commentary:

Śrī Patañjali Mahamuni Yogirāja gave me a hint regarding this verse. By telepathy he sent this clarification:

“Those who are advanced should continue practicing with firm faith so that their connection with the lower operational modes of the mental and emotional energies decreases daily. They need not read any more of these sūtras which I wrote down so long ago.

“However those who are not so advanced should read further and take hints according to their particular progressions. In this verse twelve, these sūtras are concluded, but dull students need to hear more from the teacher. They should listen to more of the verses. This book ends in this verse twelve for those who are advanced, but others should read on for more hints on practice.”

To wipe out one's connection with the vṛttis or the operational modes, we need to be detached from the very same operations or modes. That is all we need to do. However, for those of us who are not so advanced we need to hear more. Basically speaking we have to enter into the neutral mode and from there into higher concentration energies which cause sensual perception into the chit akash, the sky of consciousness.

Vairāgya has come to be translated as detachment or non-attachment. However it is more than that. It is a total lack of interest and an attitude of non-interference in cultural activities. One gets hints about this as one progresses in yoga. One is shown the way by other great yogins like Śrī Patañjali.

Verse 13

तत्र स्थितौ यत्नोऽभ्यासः

tatra sthitau yatnaḥ abhyāsaḥ

tatra – there, in that case; sthitau – regarding steadiness or persistence; yatnaḥ – endeavor; abhyāsaḥ – practice.

In that case, practice is the persistent endeavor (to cultivate that lack of interest).

Commentary:

The related practice is hereby defined. It must be persistent and requires endeavor (yatnaḥ). One has to cultivate that lack of interest because by nature, the mind and emotions are extroverted and have self-conceited mentality. The self-conceited mentality is used to enjoy privately in the psychology in a perverted and harmful way. All this must be curbed effectively.

Verse 14

स तु दीर्घकालनैरन्तर्यसत्कारासेवितो दृढभूमिः

sa tu dīrghakāla nairantarya

satkāra āsevitaḥ dṛḍhabhūmiḥ

sa = sah – that; tu – but; dīrgha – long; kāla – time; nairantarya – uninterrupted continuous; satkāra – reverence, care attention; āsevitaḥ – sustained practice, aggressive interest; dṛḍha – firm; bhūmiḥ – ground, foundation, basis.

But that is attained on the firm basis of a continuous reverential sustained practice which is executed for a long time.

Commentary:

What was acquired over millions and millions of births will take some time for its removal from the psyche. It will not go away overnight. Thus this yoga course is not the same as the easy paths of salvation.

Verse 15

दृष्टानुश्रविकविषयवितृष्णस्य वशीकारसञ्ज्ञा वैराग्यम्
dr̥ṣṭa ānuśravika viṣaya vitṛṣṇasya
vaśīkārasamjñā vairāgyam

dr̥ṣṭa – what is seen or perceived directly; ānuśravika – what is conjectured on the basis of scripture or valid testimony; viṣaya – an attractive object; vitṛṣṇasya – of one who does not crave; vaśīkāra – through control; samjñā – consciousness, demeanor, mind-set; vairāgyam – non-interest.

The non-interest in the operations of the mento-emotional energy is achieved by one who has perfect mastery in consciousness and who does not crave for what is perceived or what is heard of in the mundane existence.

Commentary:

To silence the mento-emotional energy one has to stop craving the subtle and gross existence. Any craving triggers a renewed interest in this world and its activities. That activates the five vibrational operations, which were listed before as correct perception, incorrect perception, imagination, memory and sleep.

Verse 16

तत्परं पुरुषख्यातेर्गुणवैतृष्णाम्
tatparam puruṣakhyāteḥ guṇavaitṛṣṇyam

tat – that; param – highest (non-interest); puruṣa – of the spiritual person; khyāteḥ – of a thorough awareness; guṇa – features of material nature; vaitṛṣṇyam – freedom from desire.

That highest non-interest occurs when there is freedom from desire for the features of material nature and thorough awareness of the spiritual person.

Commentary:

This does not come about easily. This is why Śrī Patañjali alerted the student yogis that it will take a long time (dīrgha kāla) for them to attain success. This cultivation of non-interest is said to be part of rāja yoga, but that does not mean that one can get it by avoiding āsana and prāṇāyāma practice.

Puruṣa, the spiritual personality and prakṛti, the gross and subtle material nature, display a liking for one another. It is not an easy task for anyone to nullify this affinity. A complete transformation in the psychology would be required for one to develop the full non-interest in the subtle or gross mundane energy.

Verse 17

वितर्कविचारानन्दास्मितारूपानुगमात् सम्प्रज्ञातः

vitarka vicāra ānanda asmitārūpa

anugamāt saṁprajñātaḥ

vitarka – analysis; vicāra – deliberation, reflection; ānanda – introspective happiness; asmitārūpa – I-ness self-consciousness; anugamāt – by accompani-ment, occurring with; saṁprajñātaḥ – the observational linkage of the attention to a higher concentration force.

The observational linkage of the attention
to a higher concentration force occurs with analysis, reflection and introspective happiness or with focus on self-consciousness.

Commentary:

Suddenly and without warning, Śrī Patañjali jumped from the cultivation of non-interest in the mundane world to the observational linkage of the attention to higher concentration force. If a yogin is successful at stopping the ordinary functions of his mento-emotional energies, he will enter a neutral stage from which his attention will be linked to or fused to higher concentration forces in the sky of consciousness, the chit akasha.

In the beginning the yogi will be affected by four other forces from this side of existence. These are the analytical power of the intellect, the reflective mood of it, the introspective happiness which is felt during pratyāhār sensual withdrawal practice and the I-ness or self-consciousness which has directed the attention to be linked to the higher concentration force.

Some other commentators categorized saṁprajñāta as a type of samādhi. In other words it has come down in the yogic disciplic succession that saṁprajñātaḥ is a type of samādi or a lower stage of the eighth and final level of yoga practice. However, this writer wants to inform readers that saṁprajñāta is part of dhāraṇā practice which is the sixth stage of yoga. In that stage the linkage is deliberate and is done by the yogi by the mystic force applied. In the next stage, that of dhyāna, the yogi is able to realize his sense of identity and its forceful application. He finds that his will power is drawn into the higher concentration force of it's own accord. In the eighth stage, that of samādhi, his will is not only effortlessly drawn but it is continually pulled like that for a long time, for over half hour or so.

In the stage of samādhi, he loses himself more and more, because he does not have to exert his will or deliberation. Thus he becomes relaxed. His mystic power loses tension and application because it is effortlessly pulled into and fused to the higher concentration force.

In the saṁprajñāta observational linkage, the yogin sometimes finds that he must analyze what he is linked to. This is preliminary. All yogis go through these stages one by one as they progress and one does not move from lower to a higher stage until one has integrated the lower progression. At first when the deliberate linkage occurs, there is an analysis of what one is linked to, as to what level it is on and as to its value, as to what it will evolve into and as to the extent of transcendence.

After this one reflects on it, for the purpose of integrating it fully for the sake of being able to explain it to others at a later date. Many of the writings of this writer were made on the basis of due reflection in this stage. It is for the integration of the writer himself and use later on in teaching and explaining. After one advanced beyond this, one reaches a stage of introspective happiness. This is due to full pratyāhār when one loses interest in others and totally pulls in all sensual energies and is able to direct oneself purely without looking back for others.

When this stage is completed, one reaches a stage of self-awareness in feeling the limits of one's spiritual radiation. At this stage one links up with the cosmic buddhi and the cosmic sense of identity, which are bright lights on the supernatural planes of existence. This causes an enrichment of one's personality and a surcharging of one's spirituality. If one is not careful at this stage, one may attract many disciples, thus bring one's spiritual practice to an end.

Student yogins must remember that saṁprajñāta absorption is observational. That is its flaw. However it is part of the course of development. One must perform it and do so carefully so that one can reach a higher stage. On any stairway, some steps might be slippery, some might be rough, some might have partial treaders, but regardless one has to use all of them if one is to go higher. Thus one should not feel that he can bypass the saṁprajñāta stage of absorption. If one completes it properly one will progress upward without having to come down again.

Verse 18

विरामप्रत्ययाभ्यासपूर्वः संस्कारशेषोऽन्यः

virāmapratyayaḥ abhyāsapūrvaḥ saṁskāraśeṣaḥ anyaḥ

virāma – losing track of, dropping; prayaya – objective awareness, opinions and motives of mind content; abhyāsa – practice; pūrvaḥ – previous, before; saṁskāraśeṣaḥ + saṁskāra – impression in the mento-emotional energy = śeṣaḥ – what is remaining; anyaḥ – other.

The other state is the complete departure
from the level where the remaining impressions lie
in the mento-emotional energy.

Commentary:

The previous practice of losing track of one's opinions and motives, results in the other state which is awareness of remaining impressions left in the mento-emotional energy.

Most commentators agree that this is the stage of asaṁprajñāta samādhi or a state of fusion to a higher plane without maintaining any opinions or motivations.

Provided that one has had a previous practice of repeatedly losing track of one's opinions and motivations, one can attain this other state in which there is awareness of the remaining impressions in their seed form as they exist in the mind compartment and in the emotions. The yogi must repeatedly practice to attain this, as Śrī Patañjali told us of the long practice (dīrgha kāla) required. In this state there is no foothold on any form or forms, and therefore the yogi has to be very determined, patient and persistent.

Verse 19

-वप्रत्ययो विदेहप्रकृतिलयानाम्

bhavapratyayaḥ videha prakṛtilayānām

bhava – inherent nature, psychology; pratyayaḥ – mental content, objective awareness; videha – bodiless persons; prakṛtilayānām – of those who are diffused into subtle material nature.

Of those who are diffused into subtle material nature
and those who are existing in a bodiless state,
their psychology has that content.

Commentary:

This is another jolt put to us by Śrī Patañjali, as he explained why one yogi gets a certain advancement, which is different from another and why without any current practice, some persons attain the benefits of yoga. In this case, those who are diffused into the subtle material nature without any effort on their part, without endeavor, are able to do so because of their inherent nature. A question remains as to whether this is the inherent nature of the spirit or of the psyche which is allied to it.

Śrī Patañjali answered that question by throwing at us the word pratyayaḥ, which means their mental content, the psychological make-up. However, even though it is not their spirits, still they have to adhere to that nature.

Certain other individuals attain the bodiless state and remain in material nature. They sometimes take birth but are unable to remain tied down to a material body due to their inherent tendency to be bodiless.

Bengali Baba, in his commentary on these sūtras stated that the videhas, the bodiless ones, are the persons who after performing virtuous actions such as Agnihotra ceremonies of the Vedas, attain the state of freedom, which is similar to absoluteness. He referred to Māṇḍūkopaniṣad, Chapter 2 Part 1. He wrote that they are not to return to human life but they will become presiding officers in future creations. He cited King Suratha who will be the eighth Manu after the reign of the current Manu who is Vaivasvata.

Such persons attain a permanent status as small-time gods of these worlds. They have no need at all to take a gross body. They either use a subtle body or no type of material body at all, but their energy affects this creation.

Verse 20

श्रद्धावीर्यस्मृतिसमाधिप्रज्ञापूरुवक इतरेषाम्
śraddhā vīrya smṛti samādhiprajñā
pūrvakaḥ itareṣām

śraddhā – confidence; vīrya – vigor, stamina; smṛti – introspective memory; samādhi – continuous effortless linkage of the attention to a higher concentration force; prajñā – profound insight; pūrvakaḥ – previously practiced; itareṣām – for others.

For others, confidence, stamina, introspective memory,
 the continuous effortless linkage of the attention
 to a higher concentration force, and profound insight,
 all being previously mastered, serve as the cause.

Commentary:

These are the requirements for those who want full success in attaining what Śrī Patañjali described in the second sūtra.

yogaḥ cittavṛtti nirodhaḥ

The skill of yoga is demonstrated by the conscious non-operation of the vibrational modes of the mento-emotional energy. (Yoga Sūtra 1:2)

One must have confidence in the practice of yoga and be satisfied with it to such an extent that one becomes attached to it above everything else and will do it to completion. If one does not have such confidence one will be stalled at the lower stages, one will give up the practice and take a position here or there in the material world, or one might become detached from gross existence but remain attached to subtle mundane life.

One must have stamina which arises with sufficient vigor to spur one to practice. There are many energies which contravene, or undermine yoga practice. If one does not have the stamina, one will be influenced by a negative force and will give up the practice.

One must practice samādhi repeatedly. Samādhi is the continuous effortless linkage of the attention to any of the higher concentration forces, which a yogi experiences. He must practice repeatedly.

The yogin must have profound insight gained through development of the buddhi intellect organ which sees beyond the material world into the superphysical planes and beyond.

Śrī Patañjali though acknowledging those persons who are natural mystics, wrote these sūtras expressively for those yogis who are endeavoring with such stamina that they will adhere to yoga, life after life until they reach the culmination. There are many people who without any record of yoga practice in their current or perhaps even in their past lives, are able to switch themselves to psychic or supernatural levels. But these persons rely on their inherent nature either to be accustomed to being bodiless, or to being diffused into particular subtle phases of material nature (prakṛtilāya).

Verse 21

तीव्रसंवेगानामसन्नः

tīvrasaṁvegānām āsannaḥ

tīvra – very intense; saṁvegānām – regarding those who practice forcibly;
āsannaḥ – whatever is very near, what will occur soon.

For those who practice forcefully in a very intense way,
the skill of yoga will be achieved very soon.

Commentary:

Even though Śrī Patañjali stated that yoga is attained after a long time, he qualified that statement by saying that it is achieved shortly by those who have intense speedy practice. In fact one cannot conclude yoga practice in any life without intensity and persistence. It is impossible otherwise.

Verse 22

मृदुमध्याधिमात्रत्वात्ततोऽपि विशेषः

mṛdu madhya adhimātratvāt tataḥ api viśeṣaḥ

mṛdu – slight; madhya – mediocre; adhimātratvāt – from intense; tataḥ – then; api – even; viśeṣaḥ – rating.

Then there are even more ratings,
according to intense, mediocre, or slight practice.

Commentary:

Yoga practice yields results according to the intensity of correct practice. One person might practice intensely with the wrong methods. His result will be the realization of the incorrect practice. Another person might practice very little with the correct method but he too might not get the results because his practice does not have much forcefulness.

Śrī Patañjali Maharshi gave four rates. Very intense (tīvra saṁvega), intense (adhimātratvā), mediocre (madhya), and slight (mṛdu).

Verse 23

ईश्वरप्रणिधानाद्वा

Īśvara praṇidhānāt vā

īśvara – The Supreme Lord; praṇidhānāt – derived from profound religious meditation; vā – or.

Or by the method of profound religious meditation
upon the Supreme Lord.

Commentary:

Śrī Patañjali in an abrupt statement gave an alternative method (vā - or), which is the profound religious meditation upon the Supreme Lord. Readers who want to inquire further into the meaning and application of this verse may check on the root words in Sanskrit to find out what that word praṇidhāna means. One should first check the root word dha, which meant to put, to lay upon, to fix upon, to hold, to contain, to seize. Then check nidhāna, which means putting down, depositing, or a place where anything is placed. Then check praṇidhāna.

This indicates very profound and a deep laying of the mind upon the Supreme Lord. This is very deep meditation. If one can achieve that without doing yoga practice, one would be demonstrating that culmination of yoga, or one would have the mastery of yoga, even without practice.

Verse 24

क्लेशकर्मविपाकाशयैरपरामृष्टः पुरुषविशेष ईश्वरः

kleśa karma vipāka āśayaiḥ aparāmṛṣṭaḥ puruṣaviśeṣaḥ Īśvaraḥ

kleśa – affliction, troubles; karma – action; vipāka – developments; āśayaiḥ – by subconscious motivations; aparāmṛṣṭaḥ – unaffected; puruṣa – person; viśeṣa – special; Īśvaraḥ – Supreme Lord.

The Supreme Lord is that special person
who is not affected by troubles, actions, developments
or by subconscious motivations.

Commentary:

Less there be argument about it, Śrī Patañjali clarified what he meant by the Supreme Lord, the Īśvara, as the person who is ever free from all afflictions, actions and developments in the material world and from subconscious motivations. Such a person wherever he may be found, would cause the devotee to enter into the higher consciousness for being free from the normal operations of the mento-emotional energy provided the devotee could do as instructed in the previous verse:

īśvara praṇidhānāt vā

"Or by the method of profound religious meditation upon the Supreme Lord." (Yoga Sūtra 1:23)

Verse 25

तत्र निरतिशयं सर्वज्ञबीजम्

tatra niratiśayaṁ sarvajñabījam

tatra – there, in Him; niratiśayaṁ – unsurpassed; sarvajña – all knowing; bījam – origin.

There, in Him, is found the unsurpassed origin of all knowledge.

Commentary:

This is a further description of the Supreme Lord. Śrī Patañjali has carefully not named this Lord as Krishna or Shiva or Brahma, or anyone else. He gave that Lord's special characteristics through which He may be identified.

Verse 26

पूर्वेषामपि गुरुः कालेनानवच्छेदात्

sa eṣaḥ pūrveṣām api guruḥ kālena anavacchedāt

sa = sah – He; eṣaḥ – this particular person; pūrveṣām – of those before, the ancient teachers; api – even; guruḥ – the spiritual teacher; kālena – by time; anavacchedāt – unconditioned.

He, this particular person, being unconditioned by time
is the guru even of the ancient teachers,
the authorities from before.

Commentary:

In case there is doubt about this Supreme Person, Śrī Patañjali informs us that God is the teacher even of the ancient authorities from before. He is ever-existing and is ever the supreme master and supreme teacher of everyone.

Verse 27

तस्य वाचकः प्रणवः

tasya vācakaḥ praṇavaḥ

tasya – of him; vācakaḥ – what is denoted or named; praṇavaḥ – the sacred syllable āum (Om̐).

Of Him, the sacred syllable āum (Om̐) is the designation.

Commentary:

Om̐ is the standard designation given to the Supreme Being by the Vedic sages, who went beyond this world before. In the Bhagavad-gītā, Śrī Krishna identified Himself with this āum (Om̐).

Verse 28

तज्जपस्तदर्थ-िवनम्

tajjapaḥ tadarthabhāvanam

taj = tat – that sound = japaḥ – murmuring; tadarthabhāvanam = tat = that + artha – value + bhāvanam – with deep feelings.

That sound is repeated, murmured constantly
for realizing its meaning.

Commentary:

A whimsical repetition of āum (Om̐) will not serve the purpose. The japa murmuring has to be done with deep feeling and intense concentration. This leads into a deeper state of mind and to a quietude in which reverberates the sounds which come in from the supernatural world. These sounds are the actual āum (Om̐) and the yogi recognizes them after purifying his mento-emotional energy through prāṇāyāma and a lack of interest in the material world.

A key factor is to disengage the gears of memory from the engine of the buddhi organ. For so long as the memory runs on automatically, the yogi cannot be free from the chatter and picturizations of the mind. Thus he will not experience what comes from the supernatural and spiritual world.

Verse 29

ततः प्रत्यक्केतनाधिगमोऽप्यन्तराया-वश्च tataḥ pratyakcetana adhigamaḥ api
antarāya abhāvaḥ ca

tataḥ – thence, what is resulting; pratyak – backwards, inwards, in the opposite direction; cetana – sense consciousness; adhigamaḥ – accomplishment; api – also; antarāya – obstacle; abhāvaḥ – not existing; ca – and.

As a result there is inwardness of the sense consciousness
 and the disappearance of obstacles to progress.

Commentary:

The result of chanting Omkāra is given here as the attainment of the stage of pratyak (pratyāhāra), which is the internalization of the sense consciousness. Usually this consciousness courses outward into the subtle and gross material world. If āum (Om) is repeated properly, one may develop introspection so that the same outward going sense energy turns back and begins to flow inwards.

This causes conservation of psychological energy in the realms of thinking and feeling. Thus the mento-emotional energy is restrained and conserved. The yogi then gets a boost of pranic charge and experiences supernatural and spiritual realities. This leads into dhāraṇā practice which is the sixth stage of yoga.

As soon as one has mastered the internalization of the sense consciousness, many obstacles goes away, because one is lifted out of the dimension where such hindrances exist. One transcends them. The obstacles remain for others who have not advanced to that stage.

Verse 30

व्याधिस्त्यानसंशयप्रमादालस्याविरतिभ्रान्तिदर्शनालब्ध
 भिक्त्वानवस्थितत्वानि चित्तविक्षेपास्तेऽन्तरायाः vyādhi styāna saṁśaya pramāda ālasya avirati bhrāntidarśana alabdhabhūmikatva anavasthitatvāni cittavikṣepaḥ te antarāyāḥ

vyādhi – disease; styāna – idleness; saṁśaya – doubt; pramāda – inattentiveness; ālasya – lack of energy; avirati – proness to sensuality; bhrāntidarśana – mistaken views; alabdhabhūmikatva – not being able to maintain the progress made, not holding the ground (bhumi); anavasthitatvāni – unsteadiness in the progression; cittavikṣepaḥ – scattered mental and emotional energy; te – these; antarāyāḥ – obstacles.

These obstacles are disease, idleness, doubt, inattentiveness,
lack of energy and prone to sensuality, mistaken views,
not being able to maintain the progress attained,
unsteadiness in progression,
scattered mental and emotional energy.

Commentary:

Pratyāhār practice which was described in the previous verse as being the main benefit from the murmuring of the āum̐ (Om̐) sound, is the turning point in the practice of a yogi. If he masters that, there is really no turning back for him. He will thereafter consolidate the progress. Those who do not master pratyāhār are subjected to numerous types of discouragement in yoga practice. It is mainly because they did not master prāṇāyāma.

Under a false notion (bhrāntidarśana), a neophyte gets an idea that he does not have to do any painstaking strenuous prāṇāyāma. Thus he neglects a very important stage and is unable to change out the lower pranic energies in his subtle body.

Let me go over the obstacles one by one.

Disease (vyādhi)

Disease is an obstacle to any yogi who acquires a gross body for the practice of yoga. That body is our means of deliverance but if it is unhealthy, our minds and emotions will be disturbed in such a way as to cause us to desist from practice for sometime. However a yogi should be realistic. He is a limited being and he should not expect that his human form will always be free from disease.

Some yogis, the advanced ones, maintain the practice even with disease. This is to maintain the habit of the practice. If one passes on from a diseased body and does not attain liberation, one will carry to the next human body the tendency to do yoga, which will be an asset in the new form. Thus even if there is disease, a yogin should maintain whatever portion of the practice he can do with the diseased form.

One who has passed the seventh stage of yoga, that of dhyāna; effortless linkage of the attention to the higher concentration forces, is not put down by disease, but others definitely are. Since one's liberation is reliant on the status of one's human body, one should do as much as possible to protect the body from disease.

Laziness / Idleness (styāna)

By constitution some persons do not have much determination. Their minds are fickle. Such persons come to a yoga class for quick liberation. Without understanding the requirement, they adopt the view that everyone can attain liberation in a jiffy or that a great yogin should be able to liberate everybody.

The truth is that everyone cannot become liberated because by constitution some spirits do not have the gomsha or inner drive to work for liberation.

However a person who is by nature idle-minded might become liberated if his atma or spirit is connected existentially to a great yogin. By proximity to that great yogin, an idle-minded person might become liberated. If a boat has got too small of an engine, then a tug which is a small boat with an overly-powerful engine can pull it along. Similarly if another boat has a large enough engine which is defectively operating, it too can be pulled by a powerful tug. It is a question of how long such a tug would pull the powerless boat. How long can a great yogi drag an idle-minded disciple?

Idle mindedness can be overcome after long long practice, especially in prāṇāyāma and pratyāhār, which are breath infusion and sensual restraints. It is the outpouring of the sensual energies which cause a person to have a scattered mind. This is why in the last sūtra, Śrī Patañjali indicated that if one chants the Omkāra one could develop internalization.

Doubt (saṁśaya)

Doubt is removed by personal experience of spiritual truths. Such experience comes after persistent practice. Some student yogis are doubtful by instinct. Even after having a few experiences, they remain troubled about the aim of yoga. This stresses their minds and causes them to go slower in the progressions.

A doubtful student will leave the path unless he or she is sustained in the practice by the association of a great yogin.

Inattentiveness (pramāda)

This is related to idleness, and is based on innate tendencies having to do with the scattering energies of the mind. It is by mastery of pratyāhār, the fifth stage of yoga, that this is achieved. Inattentiveness is a state of mind which is driven by certain types of pranic forces which latch on to a particular living entity. If he or she can change that pranic energy, taking in a more concentrated type, the inattentiveness goes away.

Lack of energy (ālasya)

In yoga one has to endeavor. If there is a lack of energy, there will be no progress.

Proneness to sensuality (avirati)

This is also driven by the type of pranic energy in the mind. Hence the need for prāṇāyāma and pratyāhār practice to change the nature of the mind by changing the energy content. The mental and emotional energy which we use has certain inherent capabilities.

Mistaken views (bhrāntidarśana)

Mistaken views come about according to the status of the buddhi organ which is used for analyzing. That organ, regardless of its accurate or inaccurate deductions, is prone to receiving information from the senses. The senses in turn accept information in a prejudiced way, depending on the type of sensual energy used and on the basis what come up in the memory circuits. Purification of the buddhi brings about a dismissal of the mistaken views and that process is called buddhi yoga which is described in detail in chapter two and three of the Bhagavad-gītā.

One must purify the life-force, the kuṇḍalini chakra, as well as all parts of the subtle body. One must be celibate by practicing the yoga austerities. Then the buddhi organ assumes a brighter glow and becomes capable to avoiding mistaken views. The sensual energies are purified by prāṇāyāma and pratyāhār practice.

Not being able to maintain the progress made (alabdhabhūmikatva)

A person who takes to yoga and who by association with a great yogi, makes some progress, may not be able to maintain the advancement. He or she might digress into a lower stage after sometime. This is due to the assertion of the lower nature. It is due also to the distractions which come by virtue of the power of the memory. Instead of shedding off previous negative tendencies, the person is motivated by these, because of the probing and prompting of the memory circuits. Thus the person becomes distracted from yoga and is driven to live a life which is similar to the one used by non-yogis. Thus whatever progress is made is lost for the time being, when the lower tendencies take over the psyche and force it to their way of operation.

Unsteadiness in progress (anavasthitatvāni)

Unsteadiness in progression occurs because of the force of cultural activities. These acts force their way into the life of an aspiring yogi and cause him to abandon yoga altogether or to see it as being a side feature. When the cultural activities assert themselves as the priority, the yogi is unable to maintain a consistent practice. His progression becomes sporadic and he loses faith in yoga, thinking that it will not give him the results intended.

A yogi in such a position needs to consult with a person who understands karma yoga as it is taught in the Bhagavad-gītā to Arjuna. If one works under the direction of the Universal Form in helping with His duties in karma yoga, then one can ultimately be free from cultural acts, even from those which are enforced in this world by the Universal form of Śrī Krishna. But one must be directed by a great yogi or alternately by Lord Shiva, Lord Balarāma, or Lord Krishna.

Scattered mental and emotional energy (cittavikṣepaḥ)

There is only one way to get rid of the scattered mental and emotional energy. That is the method of prāṇāyāma and pratyāhār practice. Pratyāhār practice causes one not to need much association from others because by it one conserves the sensual powers and enriches oneself being less and less dependent on whimsical social associations. Prāṇāyāma practice makes the yogin see that it is possible to change out the lower pranic energies in the psyche for higher ones which accelerate yoga.

Verse 31

दुःखदौर्म्मनस्याङ्गमेजयत्वश्वासप्रश्वासा विक्षेपसहृवः

*duḥkha daurmanasya aṅgamejayatva
śvāsapraśvāsāḥ vikṣepa sahabhuvah*

duḥka – distress; daurmanasya – of mental depression; aṅgamejayatva – nervousness of the body; śvāsapraśvāsāḥ – labored breathing; vikṣepa – distraction; sahabhuvah – occurring with the symptoms.

Distress, depression, nervousness and labored breathing
are the symptoms of a distracted state of mind.

Commentary:

Physical distress, mental distress, emotional distress causing nervousness of the body and labored breathing, occur as symptoms of a distracted mind. These manifest in old age as a matter of course. To decrease these occurrences consistent āsana and prāṇāyāma practice is required.

These distractions and the obstacles mentioned in the previous verse must be avoided by a yogin. He must recognize how these come about and stay away from their causes. He must know how to side-step the human association which bring on or aggravates these.

Verse 32

तत्प्रतिषेधार्थमेकतत्त्वाभ्यासः

tatpratiṣedhārtham ekatattva abhyāsaḥ

tat – that; pratiṣedha – removal; ārtham – for the sake of; eka – one; tattva – standard method in pursuit of reality (tattva); abhyāsaḥ – practice.

For the removal of the obstacles,
there should be the practice of a standard method
used in the pursuit of the reality.

Commentary:

One has no alternative but to practise, using methods which yogis in the past were successful in applying. Each yogin has to use a method that applies to his state of development. In the Bhagavad-gītā also there is a similar statement about the practice:

śrī-bhagavān uvāca
asaṁśayaṁ mahā-bāho
mano durnigrahaṁ calam
abhyāsenā tu kaunteya
vairāgyeṇa ca gṛhyate

The Blessed Lord said: Undoubtedly, O powerful man, the mind is difficult to control. It is unsteady. By practice, however, O son of Kunti, by indifference to its responses, also, it is restrained. (Gītā 6.35)

मैत्रीकरुणामुदितोपेक्षाणां सुखदुःखपुण्यापुण्यविषयाणाम्-वनातश्चित्तप्रसादनम् maitrī karuṇā muditā upekṣānām
sukha duḥkha puṇya apuṇya
viṣayāṇām bhāvanātaḥ cittaprasādanam

maitrī – friendliness; karuṇā – compassion; muditā – joyfulness, cheerfulness; upekṣānam – indifference, neutrality, non-responsiveness; sukha – happiness; duḥkha – distress; puṇya – virtue; apuṇya – vice; viṣayāṇām – relating to attractive objects; bhāvanātaḥ – abstract meditation; citta – mento-emotional energy; prasādanam – serenity.

The abstract meditation
resulting from the serenity of the mento-emotional energy
comes about by friendliness, compassion, cheerfulness
and non-responsiveness to happiness, distress, virtue and vice;

Commentary:

This reverts back to the second verse where the skill of yoga is defined:

yogaḥ cittavṛtti nirodhaḥ

"The skill of yoga is demonstrated by the conscious non-operation of the vibrational modes of the mento-emotional energy."

(Yoga Sūtra 1:2)

The turbulence in the mental and emotional energies cause the living entity to be unsettled in the material creation and to strive after that which is temporary. This causes stress and ends in frustration, because the temporary manifested energy always changes either in a favorable or unfavorable way.

For stability of that energy, one has to practise yoga for a long time, but most persons are disinclined to the austerities and do not regard yoga as the priority. This is because they are given over to the sensual energies and the promises transmitted to them by such powers, promises that are not to be fulfilled in fact.

By cultivating friendliness, by administering compassion, by maintaining a cheerful demeanor and by an overall attitude of neutrality in non-responsiveness to the movements of the lower energies, the yogin develops serenity of nature, which allows him to practice the abstract meditation through which he is allowed to break away from here and enter into the supernatural and spiritual dimensions.

Verse 34

प्रच्छद्नविधारणाभ्यां वा प्राणस्य
pracchardana vidhāraṇābhyām vā prāṇasya

pracchardana – exhalation; vidhāraṇābhyām – by inhalation; vā – or; prāṇasya – of the vital energy.

or by regulating the exhalation and inhalation of the vital energy.

Commentary:

This is the practice of prāṇāyāma, the fourth stage of yoga practice. This must be learned from a knowledgeable yogin who practices and knows the benefits of the methods he teaches. It may be discovered by a few fortunate students of yoga.

Verse 35

विषयवती वा प्रवृत्तिरुत्पन्ना मनसः स्थितिनिबन्धनी
viṣayavatī vā pravṛtṭiḥ utpannā
manasaḥ sthiti nibandhanī

viṣayavatī – like normal sensuality, something different but similar to a normal object; vā – or; pravṛtṭiḥ – the operation; utpannā – produced, brought about; manasaḥ – of the mind; sthiti – steadiness; nibandhanī – bond, fusion.

Or fusion and steadiness of the mind is produced
 by the operation of the mento-emotional energy
 towards an object which is different to but similar to a normal thing;

Commentary:

This refers to the supernatural and or spiritual perception, which is developed in the psyche of a yogi, especially in his buddhi organ through the curbing of the imagination faculty. Then the yogi sees objects which are not of the gross and subtle material energy but which are superphysical and spiritual. Perceiving such objects brings steadiness of mind and fusion of the attention of the yogi into the higher level of reality, the chit akash.

Viṣaya is a normal sense object of this world, something to which our normal senses are usually attracted to, either for attaching itself or for repulsing itself from. Vatī means something that is similar, something like that. Objects in the sky of consciousness are also objects but they do not cause the self to be degraded as the objects in this world do.

The term pravṛtṭi means operation, for active function. Even though the mastership of yoga is to stop the conventional operation of the mental and emotional energies, still this means that they must be stopped on this side of existence. Hence the functioning of that energy for perception of spiritual objects causes the fusion of the mental-emotional force to a higher reality.

Verse 36

विशोका वा ज्योतिष्मती
viśokāh vā jyotiṣmatī

viśokāh – sorrowless; vā – or; jyotiṣmatī – spiritually-luminous.

or by sorrow-less and spiritually-luminous states;

Commentary:

The experience of various student yogis differ, but the similarity is that the experiences cause them to have faith in the practice of yoga, and it increases their drive for progress. It is not stereotyped. One person might see beyond this physical world into the sky of consciousness. Another might feel a sorrowless energy or experience sheer spiritual light.

Any of these experiences which are valid alternatives to this subtle and gross material existence, will result in the stability of mind required to put a halt to the operations of the mental and emotional energy, thus leading to personal experiences of the transcendence, and to mastership of one's interaction with this material world.

Verse 37

वीतरागविषयं वा चित्तम्

vītarāga viṣayaṁ vā cittam

vīta – without; rāga – craving; viṣayaṁ – an object or person; vā – or; cittam – mento-emotional energy.

or by fixing the mento-emotional energy
on someone who is without craving;

Commentary:

One may, by association with a great yogi who is free from craving, develop stability to stop the razy dazy operations of the mental and emotional energies. Such associations can definitely cause this.

Verse 38

स्वप्ननिद्राज्ञानालम्बनं वा

svapna nidrā jñāna ālambanaṁ vā

svapna – dream; nidrā – dreamless sleep; jñāna – information; ālambanaṁ – taking recourse; vā – or.

or by taking recourse to dream or dreamless sleep.

Commentary:

Some yogis gain steadiness of mental and emotional energy by keeping track of their dreams and by remaining objectively conscious in dreamless sleep. Through these mystic observations they study the movements of consciousness and are able to discern reality and non-reality and to situate themselves in the state which is detached from the normal operations of the mental and emotional force. For success in this course a yogi must distance himself from his memory, because its impressions aggravate the instability of the mind and motivate the emotional energies to create picture sensations for further cultural activity in the material world.

Verse 39

यथा-मितध्यानाद्वा

yathābhimata dhyānāt vā

yatha – as, according; ābhimata – what is dearly desired; dhyānāt – from effortless linkage of the mind to a higher concentration force; vā – or.

Or it can be achieved from the effortless linkage of the mind to a higher concentration force which was dearly desired.

Commentary:

This gives the hint that through love and endearment, one may attain the cessation of the undesirable operations of the mental and emotional energy. The process of bhakti or devotion is mentioned in this verse under the term ābhimata which means agreeable, beloved and endearing.

Verse 40

परमाणुपरममहत्त्वान्तोऽस्य वशीकारः

paramāṇu paramamahattvāntaḥ asya vaśīkāraḥ

paramāṇu = parama – smallest + aṇu – atom; parama – greatest; mahatva – largeness, cosmic proportions; āntaḥ – ending, extending to; asya – of his, him; vaśīkāraḥ – mastery of the psyche.

The mastery of his psyche results in control of his relationship to the smallest atom or to cosmic proportions.

Commentary:

Some commentators explain that this means the yogi gains control over what is atomic (aṇu) and what is cosmic (mahatva). However, on a close check of the Sanskrit term vaśīkāraḥ, this does not tally with what Śrī Patañjali indicated. He means that the yogi is able to control not the atomic and cosmic but rather his relationship to the same. By controlling the forces in his psyche, his psychological energies, he acquires a greater degree of control over his response to what is cosmic and atomic. Those aspects remain the same in the universe he inhabits, but his response to them changes in such a way as to set him in a position of relative immunity to their negative or spiritually detrimental influences. This occurs because of the yogin's detachment, his lack of interest as described in text 12 and 15.

While a human being is almost compelled to react in a preset way to a set of circumstances or to a type of energy, the yogin, because he has switched his energy intake to a higher concentration force, can side-step most influences and remain in an unbiased status as conferred on him by his yoga practice.

क्षीणवृत्तेरि-जातस्येव मणेर्ग्रहीतृग्रहणग्राह्येषु तत्स्थतदञ्जनता समापत्तिः

*kṣīṇavṛtteḥ abhijātasya iva maṇeḥ grahīṭṛ
grahaṇa grāhyeṣu tatstha tadañjanatā samāpattiḥ*

kṣīṇa – great reduction; vṛtteḥ – concerning the mento-emotional operations; abhijātasya – of what is produced all around or transparent; iva – like; maṇeḥ – of a gem; grahīṭṛ – perceiver; grahaṇa – flow perception; grāhyeṣu – in what is perceived; tatstha – basis foundation; tad = tat – that; añjanatā – assuming the nature of or characterization of (añj – to smear with, to mix with); samāpattiḥ – linkage fusion.

In regards to the great reduction
of the mento-emotional operations,
there is fusion of the perceiver, the flow of perceptions
and what isperceived,
just like the absorption of a transparent jewel.

Commentary:

This happens also in ordinary experiences, when a person becomes totally preoccupied as it were with gross objects or an endearing feeling. Thus what is so special about a yogin who achieves this after much practice at greatly reducing the impulsive operations of his mento-emotional energy?

There must be a difference in the accomplishment of the yogi. For one thing, the ordinary person is driven impulsively. He has not practiced to stop the automatic operations of his mental and emotional energies. He has no control over the fusion of his consciousness with various forces to which his mind and emotions are impulsively attracted. He does not have the purity in psyche, which the yogi earned by higher yoga practice. The yogin's linkage with higher concentration forces is quite different to the ordinary man's absorption with subtle and gross energy, which is perceived by an impure psyche.

Verse 42

शब्दार्थज्ञानविकल्पैः सङ्कीर्णा सवितर्का समापत्तिः

*tatra śabda artha jñāna vikalpaiḥ
saṅkīrṇā savitarkā samāpattiḥ*

tatra – there, in that case; śabda – word; artha – meaning; jñāna – knowledge concerning something; vikalpaiḥ – with option, alternative, doubt, uncertainty; saṅkīrṇā – blending together, mixed; savitarkā – thoughtfulness, reasoning, deliberation; samāpattiḥ – fusion linkage.

In that case, the deliberate linkage
of the mento-emotional energy
to a higher concentrating force occurs when a word, its meaning and the knowledge of the object
alternate within the mind, blending as it were.

Commentary:

There are various types of linkage between the yogin's partially or fully purified attention and some other person or force. It might be a person or force residing in his psyche or one that is exterior to it. When that linkage occurs with the analytical organ being operative, then it is called deliberative linkage or vitarkā samāpattiḥ. Śrī Patañjali defined each type of higher linkage to clarify the various levels of accomplishment of a yogi and to remove any vagueness regarding lower accomplishment and higher yoga.

Verse 43

स्मृतिपरिशुद्धौ स्वरूपशून्येवार्थमात्रनिर्सा निर्वितर्का
smṛtipariśuddhau svarūpaśūnya iva
arthamātranirbhāsā nirvitarka

smṛti – memory; pariśuddhau – on complete purification; svarūpa – essential nature of something; śūnya – devoid of; iva – as if; artha – meaning; mātra – only; nirbhāsā – shining; nirvitarka – fusion or linkage without deliberation of analysis.

Non-analytical linkage of his attention
to a higher concentration force
occurs when the memory is completely purified
and the essential inquiring nature disappears as it were,
such that the value of that higher force shines through.

Commentary:

This is a description of what a yogi experiences when he engages in non-analytical linkage of his attention to a higher concentration force with a purified memory and when he finds that the analytical urges of the buddhi organ cease functioning, then he discovers the value of the higher concentration force or person to which he is linked.

Readers should not get frustrated because these are very complicated explanations given by Śrī Patañjali. After all, what he describes has to do with very subtle superphysical and spiritual phenomena. This is not easy to understand. It gives us an appreciation of the accomplishments of the great yogins.

Shudda means purity but pari shudda means complete, all around purity. When the memory is cleaned by a consistent and thorough practice, which results in stopping its impulsive activations and silencing its influences and biases, then the yogi is able to disarm the buddhi organ. This is the important clue in this verse.

Because the buddhi carries the weapon of analysis, it is able to blackmail and intimidate the self into cooperating with the plan of the impulsive but blind life force and the sensible but shortsighted senses. Thus when the yogin silences the weapon of analysis, he becomes freed from its harassments.

At that time the senses become powerless to bother him, because they lose the protective support of their powerful friend, the analytical intellect organ (buddhi). Thus the yogin no longer has to fight with the memory to stop it from whimsically and impulsively showing him so many impressions in their visual and audial forms. With such distractions reduced to nil, he progresses quickly and is able to move his attention into the realm of the chit akash, the sky of consciousness.

Verse 44

एतयैव सविचारा निर्विचारा च सूक्ष्मविषया व्याख्याता etayaiva savicāra nirvicāra ca
sūkṣmaviṣayā vyākhyātā

etaya – by this; eva – only; savicāra – investigative linkage of one’s attention to a higher concentration force; nirvicāra – non-investigative linkage; ca – and; sūkṣma – subtle; viṣayā – object; vyākhyātā – explained.

By this, the investigative linkage and non-investigative linkage of one’s attention to a higher concentration force consisting of subtler objects, was explained.

Commentary:

There is a difference between an analytical linkage and an investigative one. There is a slight difference. It depends on the yogi’s interest in particular subtle phenomena as well as on the influence of the higher concentration force to which he is linked. At a higher stage, he regards the subject of interest without the bias of analytical or investigative approach. This is called surrender to the higher concentration force, person or thing.

Verse 45

सूक्ष्मविषयत्वं चालिङ्गपर्यवसानम्
sūkṣmaviṣayatvaṁ ca aliṅga paryavasānam

sūkṣma – subtle; viṣayatvaṁ – what is concerning the nature of gross objects; ca – and; aliṅga – without characteristics; paryavasānam – termination.

The insight into the subtle nature of gross objects, terminates when one becomes linked to the higher concentration force which has no characteristics.

Commentary:

As far as matter is concerned, a yogin has to research into it by linking his attention to its subtle states. Ultimately, he will reach a stage where he connects with the undifferentiated status of matter, which is its ultimate stage. At that point, his research into it terminates. Yet he still has to discover the role played by the Supreme Lord (īśvara) in activating and manifesting matter.

Śrī Patañjali has graciously informed all student-yogins that when they reach the featureless state of the subtle material energy, they have reached the end of their research into it. But this must be discovered by each yogin during the linkage of his attention to higher concentration forces.

Verse 46

ता एव सवीजः समाधिः
tā eva sabījaḥ samādhīḥ

tā – they; eva – only; sabījaḥ – with motivation from the mento-emotional energy; samādhīḥ – effortless continuous linkage of the attention to a higher concentration force.

The previous descriptions concern the effortless and continuous linkage of the attention
to a higher concentration force,
as motivated by the mento-emotional energy.

Commentary:

After making so much progress in higher yoga, a yogin realizes that what he was engaged in, was being motivated by the same mental and emotional energy which he endeavored to transcend. This is because he discovered that besides himself, there was a force in his psyche which derived fulfillments from the endeavors. He traces and discovers that these were a psychic motivational force which derived a pleasure from his practice.

At that stage the practice begins in earnest and the purpose of the material energy in the life of the yogi is revealed. Bowing to the mental and emotional mundane energy in his psyche he moves on in appreciation. The purpose for which the Supreme Being caused the limited self, His eternal partner, to come in contact with a mundane life force and an investigative organ called a buddhi, now becomes evident to the yogin.

Verse 47

निर्विचारवैशारद्येऽध्यात्मप्रसादः
nirvicāra vaiśāradye adhyātmaprasādaḥ

nirvicāra – non-investigative linkage of one's attention to a higher concentration force; vaiśāradye – on gaining competence; adhyātma – relationship between the Supreme Soul and the limited one; prasādaḥ – clarity and serenity.

On gaining competence in the non-investigative linkage of one's attention to the higher concentration force, one experiences the clarity and serenity which results from the linkage
of the Supreme Soul and the limited one.

Commentary:

When the yogin passes beyond the realm of material nature, his attention links up with spiritual energy in total. Then he may, if he continues to progress, gain the competence described in this verse. That causes his limited spirit to link up with the Supreme Personality. From that connection a serenity of spirit as well as a clarity of the relation between him and that Supreme Person develops.

Verse 48

ऋतम्-रा तत्र प्रज्ञा

ṛtambharā tatra prajñā

ṛtambharā – reality-perceptive, truth discerning; tatra – there, at that time; prajñā – insight.

There with that competence,
the yogin develops the reality-perceptive insight.

Commentary:

The ṛtambharā buddhi is called by different terms elsewhere in the Vedic literatures like the Bhagavad-gītā. It is termed as jñāna-dipena and jñāna chaksusa. This means the lighted (dipena) insight (jñāna) or the vision (chaksusa) of insight (jñāna). In yoga parlance it is sometimes called the cleansed brow chakra, or third eye. However this comes after much practice, when the mental and emotional energy (citta) is silenced, when it stops vibrating in reference to the subtle and gross material energy and when it becomes stabilized and converts the imagination orb into exacting visual insight.

Śrīla Yogeshwara of Gangotri, that great yogin, rated this ṛtambharā buddhi highly. He recommended its development. Śrī Patañjali clarified that until one reaches the stage of nirvicara samādhi, that of non-investigative linkage of one's attention to a higher concentration force in the chit akash, one cannot develop this ṛtambharā buddhi.

Verse 49

श्रुतानुमानप्रज्ञाभ्यामन्यविषया विशेषार्थत्वात्

śruta anumāna prajñābhyām

anyaviṣayā viśeṣārthatvāt

śruta – what is heard; anumāna – what is surmised or reasoned out; prajñābhyām – from the two methods of insight; anya – other; viṣayā – object; viśeṣa – particular aspect; arthavāt – because of an object.

It is different from the two methods of insight which are based on what is heard and what is reasoned out, because that is limited to a particular aspect of an object.

Commentary:

Direct perception with the reality-perceptive insight is different to conventional perception which is based on what is heard or read of and what is surmised or reasoned out on the basis of lower sense perception. This is because in lower sense perception, the mind can only deal with one aspect at a time. It then presents this to the buddhi organ for analysis and comparison. Then through prejudiced notions one forms opinions. This is haphazard.

Verse 50

तज्जः संस्कारोऽन्यसंस्कारप्रतिबन्धी

tajjah saṁskāraḥ anyasaṁskāra pratibandhī

taj = tat – that; jah – which is produced from; saṁskāraḥ – the impressions; anya – other; saṁskāra – impression; pratibandhī – the preventer, that which effectively suppresses something else.

That impression which is produced from the reality-perceptive insight,
acts as the preventer of the other impressions.

Commentary:

Śrī Patañjali's Sanskrit language and dissection of yoga practice is precise. Let us say for example that a car shifts into second gear at 25 miles per hour. The driver might never realize the fact. However, the engineer who designed the transmission or another observant person would know of the 25 mile per hour speed shifting requirement. Some persons who have mastered higher yoga to a degree are to an extent ignorant of the details of higher yoga practice. Unfortunately some of these persons took up the task of translating and commenting on these sūtras. They gave opinions that are at variance with what Patañjali intended.

Śrī Patañjali composed a Sanskrit grammar which means that he was very knowledgeable of the language. To deal with his Sanskrit, one has to know Sanskrit grammar thoroughly. Patañjali was very observant of his own yoga practice and had good schooling in it. Besides he is a mahayogin from his previous births. Thus to translate and comment on his sūtras is a challenge for anyone. In any case, he did us a great favor by explaining the stages of higher yoga, a process which to say the least, is vague even to many of the yogins who reached the higher practice. This is because of the subtlety of the experiences and the failure of yogins to observe the minute details as Śrī Patañjali did. By a careful study of the information, any yogi can get some idea of where he is located on the path.

Śrī Patañjali informed us, that the impression derived from the reality-perceptive insight acts as a preventer to the other impressions in the psyche which were formed by the lower buddhi organ and which bother a student yogi.

This information is significant, because in higher yoga one wonders when and where, one will get rid of the impressions which arise repeatedly in the mind and jar one loose from the prescribed focus. The answer is that until one develops the reality-perceptive insight as stipulated here, one will not be able to completely suppress the distracting impressions. One will have to tolerate them to a degree and use other partial controlling methods. This clears misconceptions and gives the student yogi hope that a time will come when the bothersome memories will be suppressed.

Verse 51

तस्यापि निरोधे सर्वनिरोधान्निर्विजस्समाधिः

tasyāpi nirodhe sarvanirodhāt nirbījaḥ samādhiḥ

tasya – of that (preventative impression); āpi – also; nirodhe – on the non-operation; sarva – all; nirodhāt – resulting from that non-operation; nirbījaḥ – not motivated by the mento-emotional energy; samādhiḥ – continuous effortless linkage of the attention to the higher concentration force.

The continuous effortless linkage of the attention
to the higher concentration force which is not motivated by this mento-emotional energy, occurs when there is a non-operation,
even of that preventative impression
which caused the suppression of all other lower memories.

Commentary:

When all the impressions cease to be activated, when they all seem to be finished for good, then the highest contemplation occurs. That is a contemplation which is not motivated from this end of existence. It is controlled by and operated by the spiritual level of existence, from the other side of life, the chit akash.

Traditionally this first chapter is called samādhi pāda, which means the chapter defining Samādhi. The Second chapter is usually called sādhana pāda, which deals with the practice of yoga. That is of special interest to the student yogis. After describing the higher yoga, the so-called rāja yoga, Śrī Patañjali described the practice of yoga as it is. Anyone who calls himself a yogi or aspires for that honor, should pay close attention to the second chapter.

Chapter 2

Sādhana Pāda:

Practice Accomplishment

Verse 1

तपःस्वाध्यायेश्वरप्रणिधानानि क्रियायोगः

tapah svādhyāya Īśvarapraṇidhānāni kriyāyogaḥ

tapah – austerity; svādhyāya – study of the psyche; Īśvarapraṇidhānāni = Īśvara – Supreme Lord + praṇidhānāni – profound religious meditation; kriyāyogaḥ – dynamic yoga practice.

Austerity, study of the psyche, profound religious meditation on the Supreme Lord is the dynamic kriyā yoga practice.

Commentary:

There are many Vaiṣṇava teachers who deride Śrī Patañjali as an impersonalist. This is because they misunderstand these sūtras and have a negative bias towards yoga. Even though Śrīla Vyāsadeva, his son Shuka and others like Nārada, themselves being leading Vaiṣṇavas, did perfect the dynamic kriyā yoga practice, still today many Vaiṣṇava leaders who hail in their name, denounce the very process as being devoid of bhakti or devotion to Īśvara. Thus they ridicule it as being useless.

However, it is clear that this dynamic kriyā yoga practice was taught to Uddhava by Śrī Krishna in their final conversation. The three aspects mentioned, namely austerity (tapah), study of the psyche (svādhyāya) and profound religious meditation upon the Supreme Lord (Īśvarapraṇidhānāni) are absolutely essential for the liberation of a living being. Whether one cultivates this by long practice, as Śrī Patañjali described or one does so effortlessly as Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu did, it will still be necessary in one way or the other. There is no avoiding this. Ultimately it must be done.

Those who do the dynamic kriyā practice and who avoid the profound religious meditation upon the Supreme Lord, must substitute a profound type of religious meditation toward the yogi guru who gives them techniques. Ultimately, the offering of devotion to that person reaches the Supreme Lord, either directly or through the chain of siddhas, who ultimately must be connected to that ultimate teacher, the spiritual master of the ancient yogis. The profound religious meditation cannot be avoided in the course of dynamic kriyā yoga. This explains why someone may become a siddha even though he is not an avowed devotee of that Supreme Lord. It is because that person has an indirect but very effective connection to the Godhead.

Verse 2

समाधि-वन्नार्थः क्लेशतनूकरणार्थश्च

samādhi bhāvanārthaḥ kleśa tanūkaraṇārthaś ca

samādhi – continuous effortless linkage of the attention to a higher concentration force or person; bhāvana – producing; arthaḥ – for the value or purposes of; kleśa = mento-emotional afflictions; tanū – thinking reducing; karaṇa – cause, causing; arthaś = arthaḥ – for the value of purpose; ca – and.

It is for the purpose of producing continuous effortless linkage of the attention to a higher concentration force and for causing the reduction of the mental and emotional afflictions.

Commentary:

Without the reduction of the mental and emotional afflictions, there can be no samādhi or continuous effortless linkage of the attention to a higher concentration force or person. This is because the afflictions serves as effective distractions which keep the buddhi organ engaged in lower pursuits, effectively barring it from focusing into higher places of consciousness. The dynamic kriyā yoga is necessary. It is the only process, which systematically reduces the mental and emotional botherations and gradually puts the psyche at a distance from them. It does not postpone them nor put them into dormancy nor drown them out with sounds and picturizations. It brings them to an end.

Verse 3

अविद्याऽस्मितारागद्वेषानिवेशः पचक्लेशः

avidyā asmitā rāga dveṣa abhiniveśaḥ kleśāḥ

avidyā – spiritual ignorance; asmitā – misplaced identity; rāga – a tendency of emotional attachment; dveṣa – impulsive emotional disaffection; abhiniveśaḥ – strong focus on mundane existence which is due to an instinctive fear of death; kleśāḥ – the mental emotional afflictions.

The mental and emotional afflictions are spiritual ignorance, misplaced identity, emotional attachment,
impulsive emotional disaffection
and the strong focus on mundane existence,
which is due to an instinctive fear of death.

Commentary:

The prime cause of the mental and emotional afflictions is spiritual ignorance (avidyā). Unfortunately this ignorance is primeval for many of the living entities who end up in the material creation. They have no idea of their spiritual whereabouts. They assume that their existence is mundane. By not understanding their essential self (sva-bhāva), they are subjected to endless mis-identities, on and on and on. It is by the grace of a guru that one gets some idea about the essential self. It is by the example of a guru that one makes the endeavor to release the self.

The misplaced self identity (asmitā) causes numerous afflictions in the day to day existence. By it, one attaches one's psychological energy to persons and things in a harmful way. It is by yoga discipline that one develops the power to control the sense of identity, so that it may focus only on higher realities and ultimately cause one to be situated in a permanent non-painful condition.

The tendency for emotional attachment (rāga) is an impulse which is curbed after one has mastered the pratyāhār fifth stage of yoga practice, consisting of withdrawing the sensual energies from their external pursuits and conserving that energy within the psyche for application to higher realities.

The impulsive emotional disaffection occurs on the basis of justified or unjustified biases acquired in the present and past lives. It is impulsively performed and is hard to control. By higher yoga, one can bring this to an end.

The strong focus on mundane existence, which is due to an instinctive fear of death (abhiniवेश) is removed by the realization of the self. One must gain mystic experiences whereby one finds oneself in one's subtle body when it is separated from the gross one. Gradually by repeated experiences of this sort, one loses the instinctive fear of death and finds that it is no longer necessary to maintain a strong focus on material existence, since one will definitely survive the perishable body. These five causes of the mental and emotional afflictions must be removed before one can enter samādhi on a regular basis.

Verse 4

अविद्या क्षेत्रमुत्तरेषां प्रसुप्ततनुविच्छिन्नोदाराणाम्
*avidyā kṣetram uttareṣāṃ prasupta
 tanu vicchina udārāṇām*

avidyā – spiritual ignorance; kṣetram – field, existential environment;
 uttareṣāṃ – of the other afflictions; prasupta – dormant; tanu – reduced;
 vicchina – alternating, periodic; udārāṇām – expanded.

Spiritual ignorance is the existential environment
 for the other afflictions, in their dormant, reduced,
 periodic or expanded stages.

Commentary:

Spiritual ignorance (avidyā) is the root cause of the mental and emotional distresses which come upon a living entity, and which is perceived as an impediment by aspiring yogins. The other afflictions form on the basis of spiritual ignorance. These four others arise in the psychological environment of a person who is spiritually-ignorant of his self-identity, due to having not experienced it objectively and due to having a strong focus on gross existence.

Verse 5

अनित्याशुचिदुःखानात्मसु नित्यशुचिसुखात्मख्यातिरविद्या

*anitya aśuci duḥka anātmasu nitya
śuci sukha ātma khyātiḥ avidyā*

anitya – not eternal, temporary; aśuci – not clean, not pure; duḥka – distress; anātmasu – in what is not the spirit; nitya – eternal; śuci – pure; sukha – happiness; ātma – spirit; khyātiḥ – what is known or identified; avidyā – spiritual ignorance.

Spiritual ignorance is exhibited
when what is temporary, impure, distressful and mundane, is identified as being eternal, pure, joyful and spiritual respectively.

Commentary:

This exhibition is rooted in the strong focus on gross existence which is due to an instinctive fear of death (abhiniveśaḥ, verse 3). By that focus one mistakes what is temporary, feeling that it is or can be permanent, if it is maintained by one's interest in it. One feels that what is impure can be purified by external means and by decorations. One does not recognize what is distressful but instead feels that it is joy-yielding. One mistakes what is not the spirit for the spirit. For example, one feels that one's body is oneself, and that it might be possible for one to live as the body forever.

Verse 6

दृग्दर्शनशक्त्योरेकात्मतेवाऽस्मिता

dr̥g darśanaśaktyoḥ ekātmatā iva asmitā

dr̥g = dr̥k – supernatural vision; darśana – what is seen; śaktyoḥ – of the two potencies; ekātmatā – having one nature, identical; iva – as if, seems to be; asmitā – mistaken identity.

Mistaken identity occurs when the supernatural vision and what is seen through it, seems to be identical.

Commentary:

The dr̥g shakti or drik shakti is the supernatural visionary power which emits from the spirit itself. It is not what is seen, even though it is the medium which is used directly or in conjunction with other perceiving instruments. Hence it is mistaken identity when one feels that what is seen is identical to his own vision.

First of all, the supernatural vision is experienced as one's attention on this level of existence. On this level one uses a subtle and gross instrument for focusing one's attention. The subtle instrument is the buddhi which is the brain of the subtle body. The gross instrument is the brain, and its auxiliary nerves. When the attention is focused through the subtle reality, it suffers from inaccuracy. Therefore it is a mistake to think that it is true vision or direct perception.

Verse 7

सुखानुशयी रागः
sukha anuśayī rāgaḥ

sukha – happiness; anuśayī – connected to, devotedly attached to; rāgaḥ – craving.

Craving results from a devoted attachment to happiness

Commentary:

A yogin must study his own psychology to see how it operates. He should take steps to curb it for success in yoga. Every yogi is required to pay attention to his own nature, to find its defects and to alter it in the interest of progress.

Human nature develops cravings by being devotedly attached to happiness. Happiness is derived from sensual contact in terms of smelling, tasting, seeing, touching and hearing. In the pratyāhār sensual withdrawal stages, a yogi gets to understand how he becomes attached to various types of happiness and how his attachments develops into craving, which forms compulsive habits. Each yogi must systematically review his own conduct to understand this. Then he should correct himself.

Verse 8

दुःखानुशयी द्वेषः
duḥkha anuśayī dveṣaḥ

duḥkha – distress; anuśayī – connected to, devotedly attached to; dveṣaḥ – impulsive emotional disaffection.

Impulsive emotional disaffection
results from a devoted attachment to distress.

Commentary:

Impulsive emotional disaffection is manifest as an instinctive dislike for something or someone. One can become habituated to such disaffection. This results in a cynical attitude and abhorrence towards one object or the other. It destroys yoga practice.

Distress, though painful on the emotional level, maybe liked by someone. Thus the person is drawn into distressful situations again and again to derive the emotional satisfaction caused by linking the emotions to painful situations. All this should be discovered by a yogin, so that he can wean himself from distress and its causes.

Verse 9

स्वरसवाही विदुषोऽपि तथारूढोऽभिवेशः

svarasavāhī viduṣaḥ 'pi tatha rūḍho 'bhiveśaḥ

svarasavāhī = sva – own + rasa – essence + vāhī – flow current, instinct for self-preservation (svarasavāhī – it's own flow of energy of self preservation); viduṣaḥ – the wise man; 'pi = api – also; tatha – just as, so it is; rūḍho = rūḍhah – developed produced; 'bhiveśaḥ = abhiviveśaḥ – strong focus on mundane existence which is due to instinctive fear of death.

As it is, the strong focus on mundane existence,
which is due to the instinctive fear of death,
and which is sustained by its own potencies,
which operates for self-preservation,
is developed even in the wise man.

Commentary:

Even though wise, a person has to curb his instinctive life force. This is why the mastership of kuṇḍalini yoga is necessary before one can attain salvation. It is due to the natural sense of self-preservation, which is present in the subtle body, which is instinctively fearful of not having a gross form and of having to leave such a form permanently.

Unless one effectively resists the life force in the subtle body, his wisdom or knowledge can do nothing to remove the strong fear of death. The resistance is acquired by intake of higher pranic energies, through prāṇāyāma and other methods which form parts of the kriyā yoga practice.

Mastery of the life force, the kuṇḍalini chakra, gives the yogin the ability to infuse the subtle body with a lack of fear, due to its conscious experiences in the subtle world. When the subtle body takes a footing in the subtle existence it releases itself from dependence on this gross manifestation, and the fear of death (abhiviveśaḥ) departs from it.

In his translation, the Raj Yogi I.K. Taimni gave riding and dominating as the meaning of rūḍhah. His translation reads that abhiviveśa is the strong desire for life which dominates even the learned (or the wise). In his purport, he stated that the universality of abhiviveśaḥ shows that there is some constant and universal force inherent in life which automatically finds expression in this “desire to live”.

In higher yoga one realizes this when one traces that urge to the life force in the subtle body and then to the cosmic life force which dominates or rides on the back of the psyche, dictating by urges and motivations, how it should procure gross existences, maintain these and fight to remain rooted in these.

It is only when a yogin has developed a yoga siddha body that he becomes totally free of that life force impulse which forces him to procure a foot hole in the gross existences for participation in the struggle for survival in lower worlds.

Verse 10

ते प्रतिप्रसवहेयाः सूक्ष्माः
te pratiprasavaheyāḥ sūkṣmāḥ

te – these, they; prati – opposing, reverting back; prasava – expressing, going outwards; heyāḥ – what is fit to be left or abandoned; sūkṣmāḥ – subtle energies.

These subtle motivations are to be abandoned
 by reverting their expressions backwards.

Commentary:

This means the practice of rāja yoga or mystic actions which effectively curb and end off what is unwanted in the psyche and what deters the objectives of yoga.

Pratiprasava is known otherwise as the fifth stage of yoga which is pratyāhāra (prati-āhāra) reverting the sensual expressions back into the psyche, so that they do not express themselves outwards. This causes conservation of valuable psychic energy through which one develops supernatural perception.

There are many subtle motivations which are quite fit to be abandoned or left aside, to be made powerless so that they do not motivate the psyche of the yogi in a counter productive way. However one must develop the power to shut down or squelch such energies, otherwise one can say what he likes and believe whatever suits his fancy and he will still be motivated by these energies to his detriment.

Verse 11

ध्यानहेयास्तद्वृत्तयः
dhyānaheyāḥ tadvṛttayah

dhyāna – effortless linking of the attention to the higher concentration force or person; heyāḥ – what is fit to be abandoned or left aside; tad = tat – that; vṛttayah – vibrational modes of the mento-emotional energies.

Their vibrational modes are to be abandoned or ceased
 by the effortless linkage of the attention
 to a higher concentration force or person.

Commentary:

This advice is direct. It does not state that there are alternate methods for dealing with the vibrational motivations which spring from the abhiniveśaḥ urges which cause a yogi and others to pursue mundane life with a wanton passion which usually cannot be controlled. This is because there are no other methods but the attempt at effortless linkage of the attention to higher concentration forces or persons. This is the only method that reveals to the yogin the various parts of the psyche and the complications he faces in trying to purify his nature. The vibrational modes which apply to the lower psychic level and to the physical planes, are not to be silenced except by causing the mind to abandon those lower planes. The techniques are realized by practicing higher yoga.

Verse 12

क्लेशमूलः कर्माशयो दृष्टाद्दृष्टजन्मवेदनीयः

*kleśamūlaḥ karmāśayaḥ dṛṣṭa
adrṣṭa janma vedanīyaḥ*

kleśa – mento-emotional distress; mūlaḥ – root, cause; karma – cultural activities; āśayaḥ – storage, reservoir; dṛṣṭa – perceived, realized; adrṣṭa – not perceived, not realized; janma – birth; vedanīyaḥ – what is experienced or realized.

The psychological storage of the impressions
left by performance of cultural activities
which is itself the cause of the mental and emotional distress,
is experienced in realized and non-realized births.

Commentary:

This karma āśayaḥ or psychological storage-compartment which holds the compacted impressions which are left by the performance of cultural activities, is manifested to us in meditation as memory. It is very troublesome and stalls the yogi in his attempts to master pratyāhār, dhāraṇā and dhyāna. A yogi may be stalled for years by motivations which come out of the memory compartment. When the memory emits impressions, they are translated when they hit the mento-emotional energy, the citta. Then the buddhi organ takes possession of the pictures and sounds and creates further impressions, causing the psyche to create desires and motivations to act. This is the bane of higher yoga. Until a yogin can control this, he does not progress in the dhāraṇā and dhyāna practice.

Some translators have innocently translated dṛṣṭa adrṣṭa janma as present and future births, but this is a mistake. Dṛṣṭa does not mean what is present in terms of time and adrṣṭa does not mean what is not present today. Dṛṣṭa means observing or seeing, perceiving. Adrṣṭa is the opposite, meaning births that a yogi does not objectively realize. In other words, in some births one can realize that it is a temporary circumstance one has entered into and in other births due to limited perception one does not realize this. As for instance, in the case of souls who take animal or vegetative forms. They have no idea that they are in a birth for a limited amount of time. Still, as Śrī Patañjali stated, the person will experience the impressions which were in his psyche, and which were left behind by his past acts in the cultural worlds. He cannot avoid those experiences even though he may not make any sense of why the impressions go through his mind.

The impressions are experienced even by animals and trees but they do not understand what they perceive. The spiritually-ignorant human beings do not understand the impressions either. They try to rationalize all of it in terms of what they remember in the present life. A yogi, by higher practice, has a big advantage, because according to his level of advancement, he may understand the impressions to a lesser or greater degree. He may also get help from his teachers, who are conversant with the forces in the psyche.

Verse 13

सति मूले तद्विपाको जात्यायु-र्गोः

sati mūle tadvipākaḥ jāti āyuh bhogāḥ

sati – there is existing; mūle – in the cause; tat – that, it; vipākaḥ – what is resulting; jāti – species, status of life; āyuh – duration of life; bhogāḥ – type of experience.

In the case aforementioned, there exists the resulting effects
which manifest as a particular species of life
with certain duration of body and type of experiences gained in that form.

Commentary:

One develops a certain type of body with a duration for it's existence along with the experience gained through that form, on the basis of the impressions which were formed before by the performance of cultural activities. All species of life are engaged in cultural acts. The human is more deliberate. This is his only advantage. Even though one forgets the cultural acts from past lives still one's life is to a greater degree, determined by the type of cultural acts one performed previously. The psychological storage compartment holds the impressions of the past cultural acts, as motivations to take advantage of certain situations. This is done impulsively.

Verse 14

ते ह्लादपरितापफलाः पुण्यापुण्यहेतुत्वात्

te hlāda paritāpa phalāḥ puṇya apuṇya hetutvāt

te – they; hlāda – happiness; paritāpa – distress; phalāḥ – results; puṇya – merits; apuṇya – demerits; hetutvāt – that which causes.

They produce happiness and distress as results,
on the basis of merit and demerits.

Commentary:

The impressions from previous cultural activities form happy or unhappy times according to the laws of nature, not according to what human beings believe. The rationalization of human beings, particularly the fundamental religious ones, do not necessarily tally with the laws of nature.

The merits are those which are approved by nature. The demerits form from Her disapproval. However, a living being must sometimes wait for many years, or even many thousands of years before he can enjoy or suffer for breaking or confirming to a law of nature.

His past cultural acts which left impressions in his subconscious memory (karmāśayaḥ) remains there until it senses a favorable circumstance for its conformity to the matching meritorious or demeritorious reaction.

Verse 15

परिणामतापसंस्कारदुःखैर्गुणवृत्तिविरोधाच्च दुःखमेव सर्वं विवेकिनः

*pariṇāma tāpa saṃskāra duḥkhaiḥ guṇavṛtti
virodhāt ca duḥkham eva sarvaṃ vivekinaḥ*

pariṇāma – circumstantial change; tāpa – strenuous endeavor; saṃskāra – impulsive motivations; duḥkhaiḥ – with distress; guṇa – quality, features of material nature; vṛtti – vibrational mode of the mento-emotional energy; virodhāt – resulting from confrontation or clashing aspects; ca – and; duḥkham – distress; eva – indeed; sarvaṃ – all; vivekinaḥ – the discriminating person.

The discriminating person knows
that all conditions are distressful
because of circumstantial changes, strenuous endeavor, impulsive motivations, clashing aspects
and the vibrational modes of the mento-emotional energy.

Commentary:

This is discrimination gained by virtue of yoga practice. It is an insight into the nature of the material world and is not a theoretical understanding of it. By this, a yogi sees the complications in the cultural activities. Thus he becomes reluctant to participate. One cannot control the features of material nature. If one does not advance into higher yoga, one cannot control the vibrational modes of one's mental and emotional energies.

Therefore a yogi has no alternative but to back away from the cultural world and harden-up himself by performing higher yoga, mastering it and then applying it while performing any remaining cultural obligations efficiently, and in a way that causes a breaking-off from the cultural circuit.

The conditions in these lower existences are always distressful either in the short or long range. That is the nature of it. There are too many circumstantial changes which a limited being can not control. He cannot at all times regulate his mind's entry into or admittance of emotional distresses. And he cannot always side-step the involuntary motivations which lead to further distress. Therefore there is no alternative but to perfect the higher yoga practice of dhyāna effortless linkage of his attention to higher concentration forces and persons. That is the method for getting rid of the psychological disturbances which cause instability, anxiety and emotional distress.

Verse 16

हेयं दुःखमनागतम्

heyam duḥkham anāgatam

heyam – that which is to be avoided; duḥkham – distress; anāgatam – what has not manifested.

Distress which is not manifested is to be avoided.

Commentary:

For liberation, a yogin will have to reach a stage where he can side-step all the merits and demerits which are due to him from providence but which he may side-step. Both happiness and distress which are coming on the basis of cultural activities from the past are to be avoided at all costs. However a yogin has to advance sufficiently before he can side-step these. It requires insight as to the psychological receptacles which are submissive towards the manifestation of the merits and demerits. A yogin has to close off the opening to such receptacles by practicing kriyā yoga.

Verse 17

द्रष्टृदृश्ययोः संयोगो हेयहेतुः

draṣṭṛdṛśyayoḥ saṁyogo heyahetuḥ

draṣṭṛ – the observer; dṛśyayoḥ – of what is perceived; saṁyogo – the indiscriminate association; heya – that which is to be avoided; hetuḥ – the cause.

The cause which is to be avoided is the indiscriminate association of the observer
and what is perceived.

Commentary:

When we identify wholly and solely with what we perceive, we lose objectivity and become attached, rather than detached. This causes a misplaced identity with things which are not in our interest and which make us lose objectivity. Then we experience an impulsive interaction between the new impressions received through the senses and the old impressions stored in the memory (karmāśayaḥ). The analytical part of the buddhi organ then hashes over the matter and comes to a conclusion which is shown to us internally in the mind through the magical imagery of the imagination orb. Thus we again come under the spell of the function of that psychic organ.

If a yogi reaches a stage of control, whereby he stops the impulsive sensual intakes or puts a damper on them as soon as they enter the psyche, he realizes himself as being the perceiver or observer. Then he sees the operations of the senses and the machinations of his memory as being counterproductive. These interact to produce new images which he usually identifies with, to his detriment.

In higher yoga, one is trained in how to distinguish the various parts of the buddhi organ subtle mechanism and the citta mento-emotional energy gyrations. Then one puts an end to the impressions and their varied motivations which destroys one's ability to see beyond the material world.

प्रकाशक्रियास्थितिशीलं तूत्तेन्द्रियात्मकं भोगापवर्गार्थं दृश्यम्
prakāśa kriyā sthiti śīlam bhūtendriyātmakam
bhogāpavargārtham dṛśyam

prakāśa – clear perception; kriyā – action; sthiti – stability; śīlam – form, disposition; bhūta – mundane elements; indriya – sense organs; ātmakam – self, nature; bhoga – experience; apavarga – liberation; artham – value or purpose; dṛśyam – what is perceived.

What is perceived is of the nature of the mundane elements and the sense organs
and is formed in clear perception, action or stability.
Its purpose is to give experience or to allow liberation.

Commentary:

Whatever we perceive in the subtle or gross mundane energy depends on the condition of the seeing instrument, which is the buddhi organ in the subtle body. According to how it is influenced by and powered by the modes of material nature, it allows either clear perception, impulsive action, or inertia. The purpose behind the interaction of the seer and what is seen, is experience for involvement or experience which results in either consumption or liberation.

Material nature has a purpose, either to give more and more varied pleasurable or harmful experiences or to allow liberation from both. While others hustle after what is pleasurable and try to avoid what might render pain, the yogin strives for liberation by curbing his intellect organ so that he can remain in clear perception (prakāśa).

Verse 19

विशेषाविशेषलिङ्गमात्रालिङ्गानि गुणपर्वणि
viśeṣa aviśeṣa liṅgamātra aliṅgāni guṇaparvāṇi

viśeṣa – that which is specific; aviśeṣa – what is regular; liṅgamātra – a mark, that which is indicated; aliṅgāni – that which has no indication; guṇa – influences of material nature; parvāṇi – phases stages parts.

The phases of the influences of material nature
are those which are specific, regular, indicated or not indicated.

Commentary:

By higher yoga, a yogin gets to see all this clearly: how material nature has certain over-riding phases which it shifts into by its own accord, and which the yogi can enter once he mastered dhāraṇā linkage of his attention to higher concentration force, either in or beyond material nature.

The specific objects are those which are perceivable on the gross plane of existence and which are highlighted to our senses because of strong attraction. The non-specific are those gross objects which exhibit mild attraction.

These are regular items like dirt. Even though a gem is a form of dirt, still it is specific. While a speck of mud or a grain of sand are regular, being non-specific. These all have subtle counterparts, which are categorized in the same way and which can be seen through the perception of the subtle body when it is highly energised.

That which is indicated is the subtle matter which we may detect with electronic instruments or discover by mystic techniques in higher yoga. That which has no indication at all is the material energy in it's quiescent stage where it has no differentiation. It is as it were, just nothing at that stage. In higher meditation, one perceives each of these.

Verse 20

द्रष्टा दृशिमात्रः शुद्धोऽपि प्रत्ययानुपश्यः

draṣṭā dṛśimātraḥ śuddhaḥ api pratyayānupaśyaḥ

draṣṭā – the perceiver; dṛśi – perception, consciousness; mātraḥ – measure or extent; śuddhaḥ – purity; api – but; pratyayaḥ – conviction or belief as mental content; anu – following along, patterning after; paśyaḥ – what is perceived.

The perceiver is the pure extent of his consciousness
but his conviction is patterned by what is perceived.

Commentary:

In actuality the dṛśi or consciousness which spiritually emanates from the individual self, is itself that self and that self alone. However, due to it's absorbent nature, the self loses tract of itself and instead adopts patterns which form in its consciousness as conviction. On the assumption of these convictions one is motivated into cultural activities.

Śrī Patañjali Maharshi used the technical term mātra which means a measure of or to an extent. The individual soul is limited. His consciousness radiates only to a certain extent, before it becomes attenuated or is linked to lower or higher concentration forces which help to off-set its limited range.

In the material creation, with a psychic body, the perceiver, the individual self, is itself the pure extent of its own consciousness. That is its very form. However it functions following along behind what is perceived, thus it is influenced not to realize itself by itself, but to accept itself as its perceptions. These perceptions occur when its pure consciousness is linked to a sensing mechanism. The spirit derives a correct or erroneous notion by sensual influence. By that he transmigrates from one situation to another and is implicated.

Verse 21

तदर्थ एव दृश्यस्यात्मा
tadarthaḥ eva dṛśyasya ātmā

tad = tat – that; arthaḥ – purpose; eva – only; dṛśyasya – of what is seen; ātmā – individual spirit.

The individual spirit who is involved in what is seen exists here for that purpose only.

Commentary:

As it is, as we experience it in ourselves, and as we hear from others, this existence is meant for experiencing either ourselves as we are or ourselves as we are connected to various other sensing mechanisms. Basically speaking, a person transmigrates perceiving this or that in the material world. A person's existence here is reduced to that.

Verse 22

कृतार्थं प्रति नष्टमप्यनष्टं तदन्यसाधारणत्वात्
*kṛtārthaṁ prati naṣtam api
anaṣtam tadanya sādharmaṇatvāt*

kṛt – fulfilled done; ārthaṁ – purpose; prati – toward; naṣtam – destroyed, non-existent, non-effective; api – although, but; anaṣtam – not finished, still existing, effective; tat – that; anya – others; sādharmaṇatvāt – common, normal, universal.

It is not effective for one to whom its purpose is fulfilled
but it has a common effect on the others.

Commentary:

The material world loses its effectiveness on a realized yogin. For him its purpose is fulfilled. It no longer operates on him. He no longer reacts to it as others do. For the others however it remains in effect. The others agree on its potency and place stress on it. They accept the convictions derived from it and carry on their social lives.

In a sense this statement of Śrī Patañjali is a denial about mass liberation. Here the liberation is individual and only for those who have retracted their spiritual energy from linkage into the subtle mundane sensing energy.

Others will remain in the material world, because its effects hold them here, utilizing their attention.

Śrī Krishna in the Bhagavad-gītā did not profess any mass liberation of many living entities, neither by an act of faith nor by belief or confidence. He too singled out individual yogis for liberation.

This is what he said:

manuṣyānāṁ sahasreṣu
kaścīd yatati siddhaye
yatatām api siddhānām
kaścīn mām vetti tattvataḥ

Someone, in thousands of human beings, strives for psychological perfection. Of those who endeavor, even of those who are perfected, someone knows Me in truth. (Gītā 7.3)

Verse 23

स्वस्वामिशक्तयोः स्वरूपोपलब्धिहेतुः संयोगः

sva svāmiśaktyoḥ svarūpa upalabdhi hetuḥ saṁyogaḥ

sva – own nature, own psyche; svāmi – the master, the individual self; saktyoḥ – of the potency of the two; svarūpa – own form; upalabdhi – obtaining experience; hetuḥ – cause, reason; saṁyoga – conjunction.

There is a reason for the conjunction of the individual self and his psychological energies.

It is for obtaining the experience of his own form.

Commentary:

This states indirectly that the living entity who has a psychological make-up can only realize his essential or spiritual nature, by first coming in contact with the subtle material nature and then differentiating himself from that mundane power.

The conjunction (saṁyoga) is enforced, because no limited being has the power to join himself with material nature nor to disconnect himself from it. This is why Śrī Patañjali acknowledged that special person who taught even the ancient yogis.

kleśa karma vipāka āśayaḥ
aparāmr̥ṣṭaḥ puruṣaviśeṣaḥ Īśvaraḥ
tatra niratiśayaṁ sarvajñabījam

sa eṣaḥ pūrveṣāṁ api guruḥ kālena anavacchedāt

He, this particular person, being unconditioned by time, is the guru even of the ancient teachers, the authorities from before.

The Supreme Lord is that special person who is not affected by troubles, actions, development or by subconscious motivations.

There, in Him, is found the unsurpassed origin of all knowledge.

(Yoga Sūtra 1:24 - 26)

The ultimate purpose of the conjunction is for the limited beings to objectively realize their spiritual selves, apart from and distinct from the subtle material nature which they accept initially as their personal psychology.

The individual self is supposed to be the master, the swami of his psychological powers but initially he is overtaken, influenced and dominated by them. Thus he has the task of realizing what happened to his autonomy.

Verse 24

तस्य हेतुर्विद्या

tasya hetuḥ avidyā

tasya – of it; hetuḥ – cause; avidyā – spiritual ignorance.

The cause of the conjunction is spiritual ignorance.Commentary:

Besides the fact that there is a forced conjunction between the individual limited spirits and the mundane sensing energies, there is also an underlying reason for this, which is innate spiritual ignorance of the limited beings. They did not understand themselves initially. The Supreme Being may be blamed for putting the limited beings in peril by forcing them into conjunction with the mundane psychology, but the reason for His action is stated in this verse; being the spiritual ignorance of these limited dependents of His.

As far as the Supreme Being was concerned, the only way to free us from that ignorance was to put us in conjunction with the mundane psychology. From that position we may derive disgust (nirvedaḥ) with that energy and then through introspection study ourselves and our linkage with it and with His assistance, work for emancipation.

The blame placed on the Supreme Being is lifted from Him as soon as we understand we were with an innate and primeval spiritual ignorance of our true nature. The contrast between ourselves and the mundane energy is the only aspect that motivates us to realize ourselves.

Verse 25

तद-त्वात् संयोगा-त्तो हानं तद्दृशेः कैवल्यम्

tad abhāvāt saṁyogā abhāvaḥhānaṁ taddṛśeḥ kaivalyam

tad = tat – that spiritual ignorance; abhāvāt – resulting from the elimination; saṁyogā – conjunction; abhāvaḥ – disappearance, elimination; hānaṁ – withdrawal, escape; tad = tat – that; dṛśeḥ – of the perceiver; kaivalyam – total separation from the mundane psychology.

The elimination of the conjunction which results from the elimination of that spiritual ignorance
is the withdrawal that is the total separation
of the perceiver from the mundane psychology.

Commentary:

Yogis should take care in studying this verse, to get Śrī Patañjali's definition of kaivalyam. This term has come down to us as meaning various forms of liberation, all depending on the spiritual sect which advocated it. However, to understand Śrī Patañjali, we must stick to his definitions. Clearly, kaivalya is defined in this verse, within the context of what Śrī Patañjali spoke of, which is the saṁyogā or conjunction between the individual spirit and his subtle mundane psychology (sva). This psychology is hinted at in the second verse of chapter one, as operational vṛttis:

yogaḥ cittavṛtti nirodhaḥ

The skill of yoga demonstrated by the conscious non-operation of the vibrational modes of the mento-emotional energy. (Yoga Sūtra 1:2)

There is no definition here of kaivalyam being union with God or oneness with God or anything like that. It does not mean here that one has become God or that one has merged into the Absolute Truth. Śrī Patañjali in the context spoke of the complete isolation of the individual limited spirit from his psychological sensing mechanisms which are derived from material nature and his situating himself and realizing himself as his own spiritual nature in its purity by restricting himself to it and to its pure extent.

draṣṭā dṛṣimātraḥ śuddhaḥ api pratyañānupaśyaḥ

The perceiver is the pure extent of his consciousness but his conviction is patterned by what is perceived. (Yoga Sūtra 2:20)

Verse 26

विवेकख्यातिरविप्लवा हानोपायः

vivekakhyātiḥ aviṣlavā hānopāyaḥ

viveka – discrimination; khyātiḥ – insight; aviṣlavā – unbroken, continuous; hānopāya = hana – avoidance + upāyaḥ – means, method.

The method for avoiding that spiritual ignorance
is the establishment of continuous discriminative insight.

Commentary:

Vivekakhyātiḥ is discriminative insight, gained through higher yoga practice or naturally occurring as a result of actively using a yoga siddha form or a spiritual body. It is not book knowledge nor concepts derived from authoritative teachers. Most persons will have to do yoga to develop this, even though a rare few might have this naturally occurring in their yoga siddha or spiritual forms.

Spiritual ignorance (avidyā) which is the ignorance of the difference between one's spiritual energy and its linkage or mixture with mundane psychology, is removed by no other method besides the development of the discriminative insight.

Verse 27

तस्य सप्तधा प्रान्त-ूमिः प्रज्ञा

tasya saptadhā prāntabhūmiḥ praññā

tasya – of his; saptadhā – seven fold; prānta – boundary or edge + bhūmiḥ – territory, range (prāntabhūmiḥ – stage); praññā – insight.

Concerning the development of his discriminative insight,
there are seven stages.

Commentary:

Śrī Patañjali clarified that in developing the discriminative insight, one moves through seven stages. It does not come overnight. One develops it step-by-step.

Verse 28

योगाङ्गानुष्ठानादशुद्धिक्षये ज्ञानदीप्तिराविवेकख्यातेः

*yogāṅgānuṣṭhānāt aśuddhikṣaye
jñānadīptiḥ āvivekakhyāteḥ*

yogāṅgānuṣṭhānāt = yoga – yoga process + āṅga – part + anuṣṭhānāt – from consistent practice; aśuddhiḥ – impurities; kṣaye – on the elimination; jñānadīptiḥ – radiant organ of perception; āvivekakhyāteḥ = a – till, until, up to + viveka – discrimination + khyāteḥ – insight.

From the consistent practice of the parts of the yoga process,
on the elimination of the impurity,
the radiant organ of perception becomes manifest,
until there is steady discriminative insight.

Commentary:

There is really no short cut, except to practice steadily and persistently with attention from day to day. From that, the impurities gradually diminish, until they fade altogether. Then the organ of perception, the buddhi organ in the subtle body, becomes radiant. It emits a light and sees supernaturally and spiritually. This is the jñāna dīpaḥ or jñānadīptiḥ. It is also called jñānachakshuh. When there is consistent practice in using this vision in dhyāna and samādhi yoga, then there is steady consistent discriminative insight for the yogi, not otherwise.

Verse 29

यमनियमासनप्राणायामप्रत्याहारधारणाध्यानसमाधयोऽष्टावङ्गानि

*yama niyama āsana prāṇāyāma pratyāhāra
dhāraṇā dhyāna samādhayaḥ aṣṭau aṅgāni*

yama – moral restrains; niyama – recommended behaviors; āsana – body postures; prāṇāyāma – breath enrichment of the subtle body; pratyāhar – sensual energy withdrawal; dhāraṇā – linking of the attention to higher concentration forces or persons; dhyāna – effortless linkage of the attention to higher concentration forces or persons; samādhayaḥ – continuous effortless linkage of the attention to higher concentration forces or persons; aṣṭau – eight; aṅgāni – parts of a thing.

Moral restrains, recommended behaviors, body posture,
breath enrichment, sensual energy withdrawal,
linking of the attention to higher concentration forces or persons, effortless linkage of the attention to higher concentration forces or persons, continuous effortless linkage of the attention
to higher concentration forces or persons
are the eight parts of the yoga system.

Commentary:

Śrī Goraksnath in his writings gave six parts to yoga, leaving out the preliminary parts of yama, moral restraints and niyama, recommended behaviors. This is because those two are preliminary. A person who has not integrated those, must instill them in himself as he practices the advanced portions. I experienced many students who are not masterful at the preliminary stages. They should master these as they proceed or find that their lack of skill in cultural dealings causes impediments. According to the advisories and warnings issued by Śrī Krishna to Arjuna in the Bhagavad-gītā, a person who does not have an exemption from cultural activities, cannot succeed fully in yoga. Actually the sooner that a yogi can realize this, the better and more advanced he will be. If he does not cooperate with the central person in the Universal Form, with Śrī Krishna, he will not be able to get to the samādhi stage. It will be impossible.

Śrī Gorakashnath did not want the Haṭha yogis, his students, to waste their time and energy in the moral field, in trying to perfect righteous living, but nevertheless, if one does not work his way cautiously through the cultural world, one will fail at yoga practice. We must understand that Śrī Goraksnath is a birth taken by Śrī Skanda Kumara, the celibate son of Lord Shiva. As such he never advocates grhasta ashram but that does not mean that it has no value. We have to understand its value, just in case we require another human form. The moral restraints and recommended behaviors have their usage to keep us on the good side of King Dharma, the supernatural person who sponsors righteous life style.

Verse 30

अहिंसासत्यास्तेयब्रह्मचर्यापरिग्रहा यमाः

ahimsā satya asteya

brahmacarya aparigrahāḥ yamāḥ

ahimsā – non-violence; satya – realism; asteya – non-stealing; brahmacarya – sexual non-expressiveness which results in the perception of spirituality; aparigrahāḥ – non-possessiveness; yamāḥ – moral restraints.

Non-violence, realism, non-stealing, sexual non-expressiveness
which results in the perception of spirituality (Brahman)
and non-possessiveness are the moral restraints.

Commentary:

Some authorities list other moral restraints, but these given by Śrī Patañjali cover the entire listing of the negative qualities which are to be avoided. This is the list of qualities which should be cultivated if they are not innate to one's character.

Ahimsā is the attitude of genuine harmlessness towards other creatures, not just human beings. Of course a yogi has to know that the human form of life is comparatively more valuable than other species, but he should know as well that creatures who are in other life forms must fulfill their gratifications there before they could be permanently transformed to higher forms. Their lives should not be underrated. A yogi should not assume a master-of-the-species attitude. He should not harm any other creature willfully. He should situate himself circumstantially so that occasions for killing do not arise.

According to Lord Mahavira and other Tirthankaras in the Jain disciplic succession, we have no business killing other creatures. A yogin should be non-violent. If one finds that he has a violent nature or that a part of his psyche takes pleasure in harming others or in seeing others being hurt, then he should work to purify that part. Each yogin has to realize defects and work to remove them by the relevant yoga kriyās.

Satya or realism includes truthfulness, but for the yogin it is more than conventional honesty. It has to do with developing the deep insight described by Śrī Patañjali in the previous verse as jñāna-dīptiḥ and as vivekakhyaṭiḥ. This gives one deep insight into reality, even to perceive past lives and to properly interpret the saṃskāra subconscious impressions which are buried deep in memory and which surface from time to time.

Asteya or non-stealing is a must for a yogin. The tendency for stealing is innate in the subtle body. A yogin has to work with himself to eliminate it. This requires vigilance.

Brahmacarya has a conventional meaning as celibacy but it is more than that. It is an active or dynamic celibacy which is assisted by yoga practice and which results in the perception of brahman or spiritual reality. This means mastership of celibacy yoga, so that even in an adult body, the sexual urge is sublimated and does not arise to disturb the psyche. A celibate yogi should not have sexual intercourse unless he or she desires to have a child. He should ideally only have as many intercourses as there are children produced from his or her body. This is the ideal behavior. Failing in this a yogin has to work with his psyche to improve its sexual outlook, so that eventually its sexual needs are eliminated by the practice of celibacy yoga and kuṇḍalini yoga. Without attaining celibacy one cannot become liberated. It is not possible, because the energy of the subtle body will not be efficiently used if sexual expression continues through it. Thus one will not realize the subtle mundane existence which is preliminary for spiritual seekers.

Aparigrahāḥ or non-possessiveness has to do with understanding that whatever we encounter in the gross or subtle existence is the property of more powerful beings. The only real possession we have is the task of our purification. The critical nature within us which usually seeks external expression should be directed backward into the psyche. This redirected critical force improves our condition by the application of corrective tendencies.

Overall these moral restraints are necessary for a yogi, but he does not master these initially, even though this is listed as the first stage of yoga. He masters this a little and then he continues to get more control of his nature as he advances and sees more and more how subtle the defects are and how mystic and specific he must be to root them out.

Verse 31

जातिदेशकालसमयानवच्छिन्नाः सार्वभौमा महाव्रतम्
jāti deśa kāla samaya anavacchinnāḥ
sārvabhaumāḥ mahāvratam

jāti – status; deśa – location; kāla – time; samaya – condition; anavacchinnāḥ – not restricted by, not adjusted by; sārvabhaumāḥ – relating to all standard stages, being standard; mahāvratam – great commitment.

Those moral restraints are not to be adjusted
by the status, location, time and condition.

They are related to all stages of yoga,
being the great commitment.

Commentary:

Sārvabhaumā means relating to all the earth. However bhaumā, as a synonym, also means stage or foreground, as explained in verse 27 with the term prāntabhūmiḥ. In all the stages of yoga, the first stages maintain relevance. Thus the yogi never reaches a stage where he can completely ignore moral restraints, except when he is released from the material world completely.

Śrī Patañjali accredited those moral restraints as the great commitment (mahāvratam).

Verse 32

शौचसन्तोषतपःस्वाध्यायेश्वरप्रणिधानानि नियमाः
śauca saṁtoṣa tapaḥ svādhyāya
īśvarapraṇidhānāni niyamāḥ

śauca – purification; saṁtoṣa – contentment; tapaḥ – austerity; svādhyāya – study of the psyche; īśvara – Supreme Lord; praṇidhānāni – profound religious meditation; niyamāḥ – recommended behaviors.

Purification, contentment, austerity
and profound religious meditation on the Supreme Lord
are the recommended behaviors.

Commentary:

Many religious leaders ridicule Śrī Patañjali because he classified profound religious meditation to the Supreme Lord as part of an elementary stage in yoga practice, but just as the first stage remains relevant throughout the practices (sārva-bhaumāḥ verse 31), so also every other stage remains in place, and is improved upon as the yogi moves to higher levels.

According to some critics, Śrī Patañjali hawked too much about yoga and neglected the bhakti or bhakti-yoga, giving it an insignificant place in the layout of spiritual disciplines. However if one checks the Bhagavad-gītā carefully, he will discover that Śrī Krishna, who declared Himself as the Supreme Lord, gave high precedence to yoga.

The other aspect of Śrī Patañjali's treatment of devotion to God, is understood when we consider the term praṇidhānāni. Śrī Patañjali spoke of profound religious meditation. This is a mystic process of internal focus upon the Supreme Lord, to reach the Divinity in a totally different dimension. But why one may ask did Śrī Patañjali not place this as the foremost aspect of yoga practice? The reason is simple: One cannot perfect this unless one first masters yoga. The skill to do this comes only by perfecting the yoga austerities.

In the Bhagavad-gītā, the purpose of yoga is defined by Śrī Krishna in the following terms:

tatraikāgraṃ manaḥ kṛtvā
yata-cittendriya-kriyāḥ upaviśyāsane yuñjyād
yogam ātma-viśuddhaye

... being there, seated in a posture, having the mind focused, the person who controls his thinking and sensual energy, should practice the yoga discipline for self-purification. (Gītā 6:12)

Śrī Krishna also explained that a yogi should commit himself to cultural activities for the sake of psychic purification:

kāyena manasā buddhyā
kevalair indriyair api
yoginaḥ karma kurvanti
saṅgam tyaktvātma-śuddhaye

With the body, mind and intelligence, or even with the senses alone, the yogis, having discarded attachment, perform cultural acts for self-purification. (Gītā 5:11)

Śrī Patañjali does not contradict Śrī Krishna. In fact he reinforces what Śrī Krishna said.

Verse 33

वितर्कबाधने प्रतिपक्ष-वचनम्

vitarkabādhane pratipakṣabhāvanam

vitarka – doubt, argument; bādhane – in annoyance or disturbance; pratipakṣa – what is opposite or contrary; bhāvanam – manifesting, imagining, conceiving, considering.

In the case of the annoyance produced by doubts,
one should conceive of what is opposite.

Commentary:

When there are any doubts regarding the moral restraints and the recommended behavior, a yogi should counteract that state of mind by conceiving of the opposite. In other words, sometimes a yogi is pressured by the same status, location, time or condition mentioned in verse 31. Then he may cast aside the five great commitments, feeling that he is allowed to do so because of a particular status he is awarded by providence, or because of being in a certain location, or through the time of an occurrence, or because he was pressured by certain conditions. However, Śrī Patañjali objects and states that the yogi should not give-in but should hold on to the principles by considering and contemplating the opposite type of actions which conflict with the five great commitments.

If a yogi remembers this instruction his course into higher yoga would be accelerated, otherwise he will be stalled in lower stages for a very long time. Sometimes a yogi gets an idea to do something which jeopardizes his practice. He may feel that he must do it to comply with a pressure of providence which is forced into his mind. Usually, such a situation will pass on even if the yogi does not satisfy the urges, but if he is rash, he will act in the wrong way and forestall his practice. Thus Śrī Patañjali ask that there be considerations to the contrary, anytime we get some idea to do something that is against the moral principles.

Sometimes in the astral world and in parallel dimensions a yogi is circumstantially positioned for breaking moral rules, but when he gets back into this material body and recalls the incident, he regrets or thinks that for some reason he was unable to use his discrimination. Śrī Patañjali mentioned this discriminative insight before under the terms of vivekakhyaṭiḥ. Unless this is developed to the extent that it is carried everywhere the yogi may go through this and into other dimensions, he will of necessity break the moral restraints here or there, whenever his discriminative insight vanishes or is weakened.

Verse 34

वितर्का हिंसादयः कृतकारितानुमोदिता लो-क्रोधमोहपूर्वका

मृदुमध्याधिमात्रा दुःखाज्ञानानन्तफला इति प्रतिपक्ष-वचनम्

vitarkaḥ himsādayaḥ kṛta kārita anumoditāḥ lobha krodha moha pūrvakaḥ mṛdu madhya adhimātraḥ

duḥkha ajñāna anantaphalāḥ iti pratipakṣabhāvanam

vitarkaḥ – doubts; himsa – violence; ādayaḥ – and related matters; kṛta – done; kārita – cause to be done; anumoditāḥ – endorsed, approved; lobha – greed; krodha – anger; moha – delusion; pūrvakaḥ – caused by, proceeded by; mṛdu – minor; madhya – mediocre; adhimātraḥ – substantial; duḥkha – distress; ajñāna – spiritual ignorance; ananta – endless; phalāḥ – results; iti – thus; pratipakṣa – opposite type; bhāvanam – considerations.

Doubts which produce violence and related actions,
which are performed, caused to be done or endorsed,
and which are caused by greed, anger and delusion,
even if minor, mediocre or substantial,
cause endless distress and spiritual ignorance as the results.
Therefore, one should consider the opposite features.

Commentary:

Violence and related actions are those which run contrary to the moral restraints of non-violence, realism, non-stealing, sexual non-expressiveness and non-possessiveness. Any ideas which run contrary to morality and which seem to justify such immoral acts are to be abandoned. If a yogin finds that he does not have the power to abandon immoral acts, then he should think deeply of the benefit of morality. This may give him the required detachment and invoke in him sufficient patience so that he restrains from vices until the impulsions pass out of his mind or lose their impulsive force.

If a moral code is to be broken at a certain time, it will be done by someone somehow because if the energy or motivation for that act, finds the yogi to be an unwilling subject, it will move away from him and influence some other person to act. A yogi should understand this. A yogi may be tricked again and again by those compulsions to do immoral acts but then after a time, he will begin to develop a resistance to those forceful motivations, which cause him to deviate. Arjuna questioned Śrī Krishna about this in the Bhagavad-gītā:

balād iva niyojitaḥ arjuna uvāca
atha kena prayukto 'yaṃ pāpaṃ carati pūruṣaḥ
anicchann api vārṣṇeya

Arjuna said: Then explain, O family man of the Vrsnis, by what is a person forced to commit an evil even unwillingly, just as if he were compelled to do so? (Gītā 3.36)

Verse 35

अहिंसाप्रतिष्ठायां तत्सन्निधौ वैरत्यागः

ahimsāpratiṣṭhāyām tatsannidhau vairatyāgaḥ

ahimsā – non-violence; pratiṣṭhāyām – on being firmly established; tat – his; sannidhau – presence, vicinity; vaira – hostility; tyāgaḥ – abandonment.

On being firmly established in non-violence,
the abandonment of hostility occurs in his presence.

Commentary:

This charm over the violent nature of others is sometimes exhibited by great yogins. Sometimes haphazardly it is manifested in the life of student yogins. It begins in human society where people who are normally hostile to each other exhibit undue kindness even to their enemies, when they are in a presence of a yogin.

The force of the non-violent nature of the yogi may disarm and temporarily disintegrate the hostile nature of others. Sometimes this is shown when a fish-eating human being is in the presence of a great yogin. The fish-eater feels as if he cannot eat fish but must eat vegetarian or fruitarian meals. But that animal nature is again manifested when the person gets out of the range of the yogin. On the contrary however, sometimes it is seen that a great yogin has no effect on a cannibal, or flesh-eater. This is because the lower tendencies may be so strong as to resist saintly influence or it may be that the yogin assumes a sensual withdrawal attitude, intending not to adjust the life style of others.

Verse 36

सत्यप्रतिष्ठायां क्रियाफलाश्रयत्वम्
satyapraṭiṣṭhāyām kriyāphalāśrayatvam

satya – realism; praṭiṣṭhāyām – on being established; kriyā – actions; phalāḥ – results; āśrayatvam – what serves as a support for something else.

On being established in realism,
his actions serve as a basis for results.

Commentary:

It may be contested that in all cases, a person's action serve as the basis of the results he will be afforded by providence, either for good or bad, according to what was committed. However the yogi is more conscious of his actions and their potential results than others. This is because of mystic perception in the truths of how this world operates. Thus a yogi's actions, particularly his mystic actions do confirm with reality and are consistent with realism.

In these verses instead of using the term tiṣṭha, Śrī Patañjali uses praṭiṣṭhā which means to be firmly established, not just to be initially or haphazardly established. This comes after sufficient practice or in the case of the divine beings, it is from their superior nature.

Verse 37

अस्तेयप्रतिष्ठायां सर्वरत्नोपस्थानम्
asteyapraṭiṣṭhāyām sarvaratnopasthānam

asteya – non-stealing; praṭiṣṭhāyām – on firmly establishing; sarva – all; ratna – gems, precious things; upasthānam – approaching, waiting upon.

On being firmly established in non-stealing,
all precious things wait to serve a yogin.

Commentary:

Still, usually a yogin is not concerned about these things. This is because his mind is fixed on the most precious thing, which is his yoga practice. Thus many opportunities for exploitation come to a yogin but he does not take advantage of them. People often wonder why a great yogi wastes his life away, and why he does not exploit all the people and resources which are in a position to be used by him. The answer is that a yogi is too preoccupied with yoga practice. A great yogin is easily discovered if one searches for the person around whom, all sorts of wealth manifest but who does not use any of that wealth and who is indifferent to it, seemingly stupid, seemingly not realizing the worth in valuables and in the cheap labor which could be derived from others.

ब्रह्मचर्यप्रतिष्ठायां वीर्यला-:

brahmacaryapraṭiṣṭhāyām vīryalābhaḥ

brahmacarya – sexual non-expressiveness which results in the perception of spirituality; praṭiṣṭhāyām – being firmly established; vīrya – vigor; lābhaḥ – what is gained.

On being firmly established in the sexual non-expressiveness which results in the perception of spirituality, vigor is gained.

Commentary:

This means dynamic celibacy established by virtue of yoga practice in terms of āsana postures and prāṇāyāma breath nutrition methods which will be mentioned forthwith by Śrī Patañjali.

This is the urdhvareta stage where the yogi masters kuṇḍalini yoga and celibacy yoga.

Verse 39

अपरिग्रहस्थैर्ये जन्मकथन्तासम्बोधः

aparigrahasṭhairye janmakathamtā sambodhaḥ

aparigraha – non-possessiveness; sṭhairye – in the consistent; janma – birth; kathamtā – how, the reason for; sambodhaḥ – full or correct perception regarding something.

In being consistent in non-possessiveness,
there is manifested the reason
and the correct perception regarding one's birth.

Commentary:

When a yogi has mastered the quality of non-possessiveness in relation to this gross level of reality, his energy of appreciation shifts to the subtle reality. Thus he perceives the reason for the births he recently took. If he develops that clairvoyant skill, he comes to understand why others took up a certain body. He can know his past lives and that of others. However, if realizing that he has this skill, he becomes attracted to popularity and wants to be endearing and beloved, he might abuse himself. Thus, the skill will gradually leave him as he becomes more and more in the habit of appropriating fame in the material world.

Verse 40

शौचात्स्वाङ्गजुगुप्सा परैरसंसर्गः

śaucāt svāṅgajugupsā paraiḥ asamsargaḥ

śaucāt – from purification; svāṅga = sva – oneself + aṅga – limbs; jugupsā – aversion, disgust; paraiḥ = pariaḥ – with others; asamsargaḥ – non-association, lack of desire to associate.

From purification comes a disgust for one's own body and a lack of desire to associate with others.

Commentary:

True purification comes after long and hard yoga austerities. Thus the student yogi once he has earned purity of his psyche, develops a disgust for the same material body through which he worked hard to develop that purity. This is because the material body and the subtle one which caused it, has an innate tendency to absorb the pollutions which pull an ascetic down from yoga practice. As soon as a student yogi stops practice, he regresses. Even though the material body is an asset, still it always remains as a liability so long as it exists. Worse still, is the subtle body, because, until one can shed it off and take on a yoga siddha form, one is in danger of being degraded. The subtle body is worse than the gross form when it comes to adaptation and acceptance of vices.

A yogi develops a lack of desire to associate with others, except for his advanced teachers. This is because in such association he or she always runs the risks of degradation, due to susceptibility to the habits of others. People think that a yogi hates them or avoids them. Actually a yogi has no time to hate anyone because he has to attend to his practice and the energy which would be used to hate others is needed to accelerate the progress. But he develops a desire not to associate with others. This happens as a matter of course. It is a result of higher yoga practice.

Verse 41

सत्त्वशुद्धिसौमनस्यैकाग्रयेन्द्रियजयात्मदर्शनयोग्यत्वानि च
sattvaśuddhi saumanasya ekāgra indriyajaya
ātma darśana yogyatvāni ca

sattva – being, nature, psyche; śuddhi – purification; saumanasya – concerning benevolence; ekāgra – ability to link the attention to one concentration force or person; indriya – sensual energy; jaya – conquest; ātma – spirit; darśana – sight, vision; yogyatvāni – being fit for yoga or abstract meditation; ca – and.

Purification of the psyche results in benevolence, the ability to link the attention to one concentration force or person,
 conquest of the sensual energy,
 vision of the spirit and fitness for abstract meditation.

Commentary:

Purification of the psyche (sattva-śuddhi) is possible only after celibacy yoga is mastered. Then the student yogi develops benevolence towards everyone. This is a type of detachment, but in its social application it functions as benevolence or good will towards one and all.

This student yogi develops the ability to link his mind to one concentration force in the dhāraṇā sixth stage of yoga practice. He masters the sensual energy by perfecting the pratyāhār fifth stage, and is able to begin the dhyāna seventh stage, to have the vision of the spirit and a fitness for abstract meditation. This is not impersonal meditation as some profess, but it is rather meditation on levels above this physical world and above the lower astral regions.

Verse 42

सन्तोषादनुत्तमसुखला- :
sañtoṣāt anuttamaḥ sukhālābhaḥ

sañtoṣāt – from contentment; anuttamaḥ – supreme, the very best; sukha – happiness; lābhaḥ – obtained.

From contentment, the very best in happiness is obtained.

Commentary:

This is a calm type of happiness devoid of the excitations which come from the pursuit of cravings and vices. A yogi appreciates this contentment which others dislike because it lacks excitement.

Verse 43

कायेन्द्रियसिद्धिरशुद्धिक्षयात्तपसः
kāya indriya siddhiḥ aśuddhikṣayāt tapasaḥ

kāya – body; indriya – sensual energy; siddhiḥ – skill, perfection; aśuddhi – impurity; kṣayāt – from the elimination; tapasaḥ – austerity.

Austerity, resulting in the elimination of impurity
 produces perfection of the body and sensual energy.

Commentary:

This is the basic of results gained in the gruesome austerities of āsana and prāṇayam, the third and fourth stages of yoga practice. When the impurities in the subtle body are removed, one gains a skill in controlling the gross and subtle bodies as well as the sensual energy which is housed in them. This is mastered in kuṇḍalini yoga, celibacy yoga and purity-of-the-psyche yoga (sattvaśuddhi verse 41), (atmasuddha Gītā 6:12).

Tapasaḥ means austerity. One may ask which austerity? This question is answered in the term aśuddhikṣayāt, which means the austerities which result in the elimination of kṣayāt or impurities.

Verse 44

स्वाध्यायादिष्टदेवतासम्प्रयोगः
svādhyāyāt iṣṭadevatā saṁprayogaḥ

svādhyāyāt – from study of the psyche; iṣṭadevatā – cherished divine being; saṁprayogaḥ – intimate contact.

From study of the psyche,
 comes intimate contact with the cherished divine being.

Commentary:

Śrī Patañjali has not named the iṣṭadevatā, the cherished divine personality, who the student yogi aspires to be with. However for the yogi, that person might be different than He is for some other ascetic. There are many of these divine beings who serve as cherished Lords of the limited entities.

However, when the yogi has achieved complete purity of the psyche, he gets a divine vision through which he meets the cherished deity face to face and can relate with that Personality of Godhead.

Verse 45

समाधिसिद्धिरीश्वरप्रणिधानात्

samādhisiddhiḥ īśvarapraṇidhānāt

samādhi – continuous effortless linkage of the attention to a higher concentration force or person; siddhiḥ – perfection, skill; īśvara – supreme lord; praṇidhānāt – from the profound religious meditation.

From the profound religious meditation upon the Supreme Lord comes the perfection of continuous effortless linkage of the attention to that Divinity.

Commentary:

Now all accusations upon Śrī Patañjali regarding his alleged ideas of impersonalism and atheism are totally denied. Śrī Patañjali Maharshi was undoubtedly a theist of the first order. Śrī B.K.S. Iyengar in his translation and commentary on the sūtras explained that Patañjali was an incarnation of Lord Ādiśeṣa, the divine serpentine bedstead of Lord Viṣṇu. Patañjali's mother was named Goṇikā.

Verse 46

स्थिरसुखमासनम्

sthira sukham āsanam

sthira – steady; sukham – comfortable; āsanam – bodily posture.

The posture should be steady and comfortable.

Commentary:

The yoga āsana for meditation should be one that is steady and comfortable. Ideally, one should sit for meditation in the lotus posture, the padmāsana, if that posture is unsteady and uncomfortable, one should practice to improve it. During meditation one should use a posture that keeps the body steady and mind at ease. As one practices more and more, the difficult postures become easier and easier to perform.

Verse 47

प्रयत्नशैथिल्यानन्तसमापत्तिभ्याम्

prayatna śaithilya ananta samāpattibhyām

prayatna – effort; śaithilya – relaxation; ananta – endless, infinite; samāpattibhyām – meeting, encounter.

It results in relaxation of effort and the meeting with the infinite.

Commentary:

Āsana is perfected when it becomes steady and comfortable, so much so that the yogin relaxes his efforts to hold the body in the posture. He shifts his attention to link it with the infinite.

Verse 48

ततो द्वन्द्वानि-घातः

tataḥ dvandvāṅ anabhighātaḥ

tataḥ – then; dvandvāṅ – the dualities of happiness and distress, heat and cold; anabhighātaḥ – no shrinking, no attacking, no botheration.

From then on, there are no botherations from the dualities like happiness and distress, heat and cold.

Commentary:

When there is perfect posture of body in which the yogin attains continuous effortless linkage of his attention to a higher concentration force, or divine person, then the botheration of the mento-emotional energy which concerns happiness and distress cease for him. These continue in the life of the student yogins who are on a lower level of practice. They should master themselves through consistent effort.

Verse 49

तस्मिन्सति श्वासप्रश्वासयोगीतिविच्छेदः प्राणायामः

*tasmin satiśvāsa praśvāsayoḥ
gativicchedaḥ prāṅyāmaḥ*

tasmin – on this; sati – being accomplished; śvāsa – inhalation; praśvāsayoḥ – of the exhalation; gati – the flow; vicchedaḥ – the separation; prāṅyāmaḥ – breath regulation.

Once this is accomplished, breath regulation,
which is the separation of the flow of inhalation and exhalation,
is attained.

Commentary:

The prāṅyāma cannot be mastered properly until one has mastered postures or āsanas but that does not mean that preliminary prāṅyāma cannot be learned before hand. All the stages of yoga are learned one by one or even haphazardly according to one's destiny regarding availability of knowledgeable teachers. One cannot focus properly on the vital force until one has mastered a suitable posture. This is the point but one can become familiar with the various prāṅyāmas before hand.

A yogin has to learn how to separate the flow of the breath, so that the inhalation is distinct from the exhalation, so that there is a pause between these. This is why the word vicchedaḥ was used. It means separation, cleavage, or gap. Generally, mammals breathe in and out without pause because their breath is not complete or sufficient. It is usually shallow. The out breath is rushed in to speed up the next intake of air. When one reconditions his lung apparatus, so that the intake is complete, this rush for exhalations in order to inhale again, ceases. And the separation of the intake and out breath becomes evident, along with the benefits of that for meditation.

Verse 50

वाह्याभ्यन्तरस्तम्-वृत्तिर्देशकालसङ्ख्या-: परिदृष्टो दीर्घसूक्ष्मः
bāhya ābhyantara stambha vṛttiḥ deśa kāla
saṁkhyābhiḥ paridṛṣṭah dīrgha sūkṣmah

bāhya – external; ābhyantara – internal; stambha – restrained, suppressed, restrictive; vṛttiḥ – activity, movement operation; deśa – place; kāla – time; saṁkhyābhiḥ – with numbering accounting; paridṛṣṭah – measured, regulated; dīrgha – prolonged; sūkṣmah – subtle, hardly noticeable.

It has internal, external and restrictive operations, which are regulated according to the place, time and accounting, being prolonged or hardly noticed.

Commentary:

Ideally, prāṇāyāma is learned from a teacher who practiced to proficiency. Such teachers are hard to find. The first accomplishment of a student yogi is to learn how to purify the nāḍīs in the subtle form. When that is achieved, he will discover other prāṇāyāmas automatically by the grace of the force of prāṇa and by the awakening of the kuṇḍalini chakra.

Prāṇāyāma teachers usually stress a count for alternate breathing in the ratio of 1:4:2, meaning that one should inhale through one nostril for one count, then retain the air for four counts and then exhale all air through the other nostril during two counts, such that if one starts inhaling through the right nostril alone, one will hold the air, then expel it through the left nostril. Then begin the cycle by inhaling through the left nostril, holding and expelling the air through the right nostril. Eventually one should increase the duration, so that the time for a count increases. This is done without straining the lung system. If the nāḍīs are not fully charged before one begins, and if one is not a celibate yogi, one will not be successful with this practice. There are many preliminary practices required for success in yoga. One would be fortunate if he or she could learn these from an accomplished teacher.

Verse 51

वाह्याभ्यन्तरविषयाक्षेपी चतुर्थः

bāhya ābhyantara viṣaya ākṣepī caturthaḥ

bāhya – external; ābhyantara – internal; viṣaya – objective; ākṣepī – transcending; caturthaḥ – the fourth.

That which transcends
 the objective external and internal breath regulation
 is the fourth type of prāṇāyāma.

Commentary:

In the previous sūtra, Śrī Patañjali listed three types of operations, relating to internal, external and restrictive operations of the breath. Then he gave a fourth operation having to do with transcending the objective of the preliminary three operations.

Verse 52

ततः क्षीयते प्रकाशावरणम्

tataḥ kṣīyate prakāśa āvaraṇam

tataḥ – thence, from that; kṣīyate – is dissipated; prakāśa – light; āvaraṇam – covering, mental darkness.

From that is dissipated,
the mental darkness which veils the light,

Commentary:

The advanced prāṇāyāma is done after much practice. Its mastership does not come easy. The result of it is clear to a yogi because the dark mind-space is cleared off and a brilliant light is perceived. This light is illuminating (prakāśa).

Verse 53

धारणासु च योग्यता मनसः

dhāraṇāsu ca योग्यता मनसः

dhāraṇāsu – for linking the attention to a higher concentration force or person; ca – and; योग्यता – being conducive for abstract meditation; मनसः – of the mind.

. . . and from that, is attained the state of the mind
for linking the attention
to a higher concentration force or person.

Commentary:

Dhāraṇā practice requires a preliminary mastership in certain aspects of prāṇa energy control. This is why when someone sits to meditate without first doing prāṇāyāma, he cannot be successful even though he may imagine for himself in peace, happiness and light. One has to make the mind fit for yoga practice (योग्यता मनसः). The mind will prevent the attention from linking to a higher concentration force or person if the mind itself is not surcharged with a higher grade of pranic energy. It will be unable to make a higher linkage, except now and again, by a fluke, haphazardly. For consistent practice one must do the āsana with prāṇāyāma daily before meditation practice.

Verse 54

स्वविषयासम्प्रयोगे चित्तस्य स्वरूपानुकार इवेन्द्रियाणां प्रत्याहारः
svaviṣaya asaṁprayoge cittasya svarūpānukārah
iva indriyāṅām pratyāhārah

sva – their own; viṣaya – objects of perception; asaṁprayoge – in not contacting; cittasya – of the mento-emotional energy; svarūpa – own form; anukārah – imitation, patterning, assuming; iva – as if, as it were; indriyāṅām – senses; pratyāhārah – withdrawal of sensual energy and its focus on the mind.

The withdrawal of the senses, is as it were,
 their assumption of the form of mento-emotional energy
 when not contacting their own objects of perception.

Commentary:

In his word for word meanings, Śrī B.K.S. Iyengar gave as the root word for pratyāhārah. He gave the basic parts of that Sanskrit word as follows:

prati + ang + hr – meaning to draw towards the opposite.

When the mento-emotional energy, the citta, is outward bound, it is called sensual energy or indriyāni. But when it is inward bound it is called citta or emotional force. A yogin has to master that citta energy and reorient it so that it gives up its outward bound habit.

Verse 55

ततः परमा वश्यतेन्द्रियाणाम्
tataḥ paramā vaśyatā indriyāṅām

tataḥ – then, from that accomplishment; paramā – highest, greatest; vaśyatā – subdued, subjugation, control; indriyāṅām – of the sense.

From that accomplishment,
 comes the highest degree of control of the senses.

Commentary:

Pratyāhār practice when mastered, gives the student yogin, the qualification to practice higher yoga, which are mainly actions on the mystic plane.

Chapter 3

Vibhūti Pāda:

Glory Displayed

Verse 1

देशबन्धश्चित्तस्य धारणा

deśa bandhaḥ cittasya dhāraṇā

deśa – location; bandhaḥ – confinement, restriction; cittasya – of the mento-emotional energy; dhāraṇā – linking of the attention to a concentration force or person.

Linking of the attention to a concentration force or person, involves a restricted location in the mento-emotional energy.

Commentary:

For higher meditation, everything is within the mental and emotional energy fields. This is the psychological environment from which a yogin can break out of this dimension to enter other parallel worlds, which are either subtle, supernatural or spiritual. It is from within the mento-emotional energy that one breaks out of this world. The paradox of it is this: the very same mental and emotional energy, which caused us to become attached to this world, can also in turn, cause liberation. The gate for exiting this world is in the same mento-emotional energy (cittasya).

Many people feel that a yogi enters into his own psyche, develops it, feels powerful as God and then becomes perfect. Little do they understand that from within his own psyche a yogi finds entry into parallel worlds. From particular locations, desa, particular limiting or confining locations (desa bandhah), a yogi finds doorways and peep holes that give him access to other worlds, places that he might be transferred after permanently leaving his physical body.

Verse 2

तत्र प्रत्ययैकतानता ध्यानम्

tatra pratyayaḥ ekatānatā dhyānam

tatra – there, in that location; pratyayaḥ – conviction or belief as mental content, instinctive interest; ekatānatā – one continuous threadlike flow of attention = eka – one + tānatā – thread of fiber; dhyānam – effortless linking of the attention to a higher concentration force or person.

When in that location, there is one continuous threadlike flow of one's instinctive interest that is the effortless linking of the attention to a higher concentration force or person.

Commentary:

The key term in this verse is pratayayaḥ. Shivram Apte in his Sanskrit English Dictionary gave the following meanings: conviction, settled belief, trust, faith, conception, idea, and notion. I have given instinctive interest as the meaning. In any case, when that (pratayaya) flows in a continuous threadlike motion at the place of focus, then it is the dhyāna, seventh stage of yoga practice.

The Raj Yogi I.K. Taimni gave stretching or streaming unbrokenly as one, as the meaning for ekatānatā. A student yogi would do well for himself by carefully studying the Sanskrit of this verse, because it is not sufficient to say that dhāraṇā is concentration, dhyāna is contemplation or meditation as we are accustomed to. Such definitions are too vague.

Verse 3

तदेवार्थमात्रनिर्ऱसं स्वरूपशून्यमिव समाधिः tadeva arthamātranirbhāsam
svarūpaśūnyam iva samādhiḥ

tadeva = tat – that + eva – only, alone; artha – purpose objective; mātra – only, merely; nirbhāsaṁ – illuminating; svarūpa – own form; śūnyam – empty, void, lacking; iva – as if; samādhiḥ – continuous effortless linking of the attention to a higher concentration force or person.

That same effortless linkage of the attention when experienced as illumination of the higher concentration force or person,
while the yogi feels as if devoid of himself,
is samādhi or continuous effortless linkage of his attention to the special person, object, or force.

Commentary:

Samādhi is not defined here as it is popularly described by so many meditation authorities, by those who dislike it or shun it as being impersonal. There is no word here that says that samādhi is a void or that it is sunya. The word sunya occurs in reference to the svarupa or form of the yogi, and only in the sense that while he is in contact with the force, object or person of his interest, he is so much connected to it that his own form seems as if it were not there and that only the force, object or other person being contacted was there. The Sanskrit article iva means 'as if'.

When there is continued effortless linkage of the attention to a higher concentration force, object or person, the yogi's attention is completely or near completely given over to that higher reality, so that it feels as if he is not there (iva sunya) and that only the higher reality is present with illumination (nirbhasam). This gives him a thorough insight into the said force, object or person.

Verse 4

त्रयमेकत्र संयमः

trayam ekatra saṁyamah

trayam – three; ekatra – in one place, all taken together as one practice; saṁyamah – complete restraint.

The three as one practice is the complete restraint.

Commentary:

In Bhagavad-gītā, saṁyama is mentioned in chapter four.

śrotrādīnī 'ndriyāni anye saṁyamāgniṣu juhvati
śabdādīn viṣayān anye indriyāgniṣu juhvati sarvānī 'ndriya karmāni prānakarmāni capare
ātmasaṁyama yogāgnau juhvati jñānadīpīte

Other yogis offer hearing and other sensual powers into the fiery power of restraint. Some offer sound and other sensual pursuits into the fiery sensual power.

Some ascetics subject the sensual actions and the breath function to self-restraint by fiery yoga austerities, which are illuminated by experience.

(Gītā 4.26, 27)

Sam means very, quite, greatly, thoroughly, very much, all, whole, complete. Yamah means restraint, control.

It is obvious that one has to understand the word according to how it is defined by the particular writer. Śrī Krishna's use of the term is similar to what Śrī Patañjali meant, but Śrī Patañjali is specific in saying that saṁyama is the combining of the three practices of higher yoga into one discipline. When dhāraṇā, dhyāna and samādhi are made into one technique, that is called saṁyamah in Śrī Patañjali's vocabulary.

From that perspective, there would be only 6 stages to yoga, namely yama, niyama, āsana, prāṇāyāma, pratyāhār, and saṁyamah. In that case saṁyamah means that one has to do the three higher stages of yoga as one practice. This actually happens when one masters dhyāna yoga. Sometimes in dhyāna, one slips back to the dhāraṇā stages and sometimes it progresses automatically to the Samādhi stage. Thus Śrī Patañjali is correct in bridging the three higher stages. When there is success in this, the mento-emotional energy is completely restrained from its involvement in this world and in the lower subtle world.

Verse 5

तज्जयात्प्रज्ञालोकः

tajjayāt prajñālokaḥ

taj = tad = tat – that; jayāt – from the mastery; prajñā – insight; ālokaḥ – illuminating.

From the mastery of that complete restraint
of the mento-emotional energy,
one develops the illuminating insight.

Commentary:

This illuminating insight is not an understanding in the mind or mere insight or intuition. It is rather the illuminated buddhi organ in action, peering into parallel dimensions and spiritual atmospheres. With that illuminating insight, one sees visually into other worlds through one's buddhi organ and also directly through a vision which is formed by one's attention.

Verse 6

तस्य भूमिषु विनियोगः

tasya bhūmiṣu viniyogaḥ

tasya – of it, of this; bhūmiṣu – in stages; viniyogaḥ – application, employment, practice.

The practice of this complete restraint occurs in stages.

Commentary:

The complete restraint which is the result of mastering the three higher states of yoga does not happen instantaneously, except for those yogis who have practiced considerably in solitude. All others attain samyama or complete restraint of the mental and emotional energy by stages while attempting to reach the culmination of the process, which is samādhi. A student yogi who has a grasp on the dhāraṇā practice does that. Then he graduates to dhyāna and then to samādhi. Even after he reaches samādhi, he must sometimes begin at dhāraṇā and wait in his psyche for a progression to dhyāna and then on to samādhi. Sometimes for one reason or other, he struggles with the dhāraṇā stages and goes further. Sometimes he progresses on the dhyāna and goes no further, at other times, he may attain to samādhi. This is why Śrī Patañjali has alerted the student yogis that its practice occurs in stages.

Verse 7

त्रयमन्तरङ्गं पूर्वेभ्यः

trayam antaraṅgaṁ pūrvebhyaḥ

trayam – three; antaraṅgaṁ = antar – internal, psychological, concerning the thinking and feeling organs + aṅgaṁ – part; pūrvebhyaḥ – in reference to the preliminary stages mentioned before.

In reference to the preliminary stages of yoga,
these three higher states concern the psychological organs.

Commentary:

Dhāraṇā, dhyāna and samādhi concern the psychological organs. These concern mystic practice as assisted by the physical and social practices which involve yama, niyama, āsana, prāṇāyāma and pratyāhāra. While in the five preliminary stages there are physical actions, in the three higher stages, it is mostly mystic actions having to do with controlling, observing and operating psychological organs in the subtle body.

Verse 8

तदपि बहिरङ्गं निर्वीजस्य

tadapi bahiraṅgam nirvījasya

tadapi = that = api – even; bahiraṅga = bahir – external + aṅgam – part; nirvījasya – not motivated by the mento-emotional energy.

But even that initial mastership
of the three higher stages of yoga,
is external in reference to meditation,
which is not motivated by the mento-emotional energy.

Commentary:

Initially a student yogi works for yoga success on the basis of disgust with the subtle and gross material energy. It is due to the impressions lodged in his mental and emotional energies. Thus in a sense he cannot strive without being motivated by those very same energies. As Śrī Patañjali told us, the purpose of that energy is to give us experience in the world and also to do the converse which is to motivate us to strive for liberation.

prakāśa kriyā sthiti śīlaṃ bhūtenḍriyātmakaṃ
bhogāpavargārthaṃ dṛśyam

What is perceived is of the nature of the mundane elements and the sense organs and is formed in clear perception, action or stability. Its purpose is to give experience or to allow liberation. (Yoga Sūtra 2:18)

While initially the student yogi practices samyama, complete restraint under motivations which comes from the mental and emotional energies, later on, as he advances, he progresses on the basis of forces, objects and persons he encounters in the spiritual atmosphere. Such motivations are free from flaws. These are termed seedless or lacking urges from this side of existence.

Verse 9

व्युत्थाननिरोधसंस्कारयोरि-वप्रादु-वौ निरोधक्षणचित्तान्वयो निरोधपरिणामः

व्युत्तहहना नरिखदहा सामसकारायख

abhibhava prādurbhāvau nirodhakṣaṇa

cittānvayaḥ nirodhapariṇāmaḥ

v्युत्थāna – expression; nirodha – suppression; samskārayoḥ – of the mento-emotional impressions; abhibhava – disappearance; prādurbhāvau – and manifestation ; nirodha – restraint, cessation; kṣaṇa – momentarily; citta – mento-emotional energy; ānvayaḥ – connection; nirodha – restraint; pariṇāmaḥ – transforming effects.

When the connection with the mento-emotional energy momentarily ceases
during the manifestation and disappearance phases
when there is expression or suppression of the impressions, that is the restraint of the transforming mento-emotional energy.

Commentary:

Śrī Patañjali is respected by all advanced yogis who are aware of these yoga sūtras. Only persons who do no yoga and who are ignorant of the techniques, make a joke of the detailed work of Śrī Patañjali. One can only admire his genius.

There are many who become masters of kriyā yoga. Most of them do not take detailed notes of the preliminary and advanced practices. This is because those yogis are to be liberated and do not see the need to keep a record for review. However Śrī Patañjali saw the need. This is a detailed study of his practices. I offer respects to him.

A student yogi should note what is emotional and what is mental energy. He should note that the two energies are interchangeable under certain psychological circumstances. Furthermore even though the mental energy hold to its own integrity, showing a distinction between itself and the emotions, still the two energies do communicate with each other. Beyond that, a student should note how impressions arise and subside. Anyone who has done concentration, contemplation or meditation, knows very well that the impressions come and go of their own accord. But Śrī Patañjali spoke of the interval (ksana) between the expression of an idea in the mind and the suppression of that very same idea. At first this sounds easy. But let us think of it again.

When an idea arises in the mind, depending on its value to the emotions, it may be expanded or it may be dissipated immediately. If it is expanded, what really takes place? If it is expanded the idea ceases for a split second. The memory in conjunction with the imagination creates another idea which is associative to the one which disappeared. Śrī Patañjali wants us to focus on that split second cessation (nirodhaksana). He wants us to extend that split second to a longer, much longer period. If we could keep the mind in that state for long we would enter into samādhi.

Of course such a feat is easier said than done. Sometimes effortlessly, the mind remains for five or ten seconds in that blank state. Expert yogis hold the mind in that state for minutes and some do so for hours at a time. This is their accomplishment of samādhi. One will find that if he can hold the mind there, the imagination faculty will change into being spiritual vision, an actual illuminating sight, an eye. With the help of Lord Krishna, Arjuna had some experiences of this at Kurukshetra. When again Arjuna wanted that insight, Śrī Krishna with mild disappointment, declined. He said, in the AnuGītā, that He could not again impart it to Arjuna because it involved a yoga siddhi which Krishna expressed at Kurukshetra for a specific purpose.

By careful study of this verse, one will get an idea of what is required for yoga success, which is the prolonging of the momentary blankness which occurs in the mind between the expression within it of one idea and another. The whole problem with meditation has to do with this.

For success, a yogi must be prepared to spend years if necessary noticing that momentarily blankness and practicing to hold the mind there. Initially, it will seem that it is impossible to stop the mind there, but by regular practice for a long time, the period for holding the mind in that state is extended.

Verse 10

तस्य प्रशान्तवाहिता संस्कारात्
tasya praśāntavāhita saṁskārāt

tasya – of this; praśānta – spiritual peace; vāhita – flow; saṁskārāt – from the impressions derived.

Concerning this practice of restraint,
the impressions derived cause a flow of spiritual peace.

Commentary:

When the yogi repeated practices to keep his mind in a condition of restraining, causing the transformations of the mento-emotional energy to cease, then his memory is accredited with quieting impressions, which bring on the uninterrupted flow of spiritual peace.

Verse 11

सर्वार्थतैकाग्रतयोः क्षयोदयौ चित्तस्य समाधिपरिणामः
sarvārthatā ekāgratayoḥ kṣaya udayau
cittasya samādhipariṇāmaḥ

sarvārthatā – varying objective; ekāgratayoḥ – of the one aspect before the attention; kṣaya – decrease; udayau – and increase; cittasya – of the mento-emotional energy; samādhi – the continuous effortless linkage of the attention to the higher concentration force, object or person; pariṇāmaḥ – transforming effects, change.

The decrease of varying objectives
in the mento-emotional energy
and the increase of the one aspect within it,
is the change noticed
in the practice of continuous effortless linking of the attention
to higher concentration forces, objects or persons.

Commentary:

We are reminded that the samādhi stage will come after long practice. It will come gradually over time of practicing samyama, as Śrī Patañjali defined, being the practice of dhāraṇā which progressed into dhyāna, which then changes into samādhi.

As one tries to practice samādhi, he will find that there is a decrease in the mind's many objectives and an increase of its tendency for one focus as dictated by the practice. This one focus is not a focus on a deity but rather it is the focus mentioned in verse 9 of this chapter, which is the restraint of the transformations of the mento-emotional energy.

It has nothing to do with any object or any person, divine or ordinary. It is a battle within the psychology of the yogi, for control of the psyche. It is an internal private war in the battlefield of the mind and emotions.

When the yogin notices that his mind's habits change, so that it desires more of that peace attained when it is in a void state, then he knows that he is making progress. This is not a void in the world nor in the subtle world but rather a void in his own psyche, whereby his memory does not discharge ideas which burst in the mind environment into impressions which trigger other impressions and thoughts and which torment the yogi and frustrate his efforts for psyche control.

Verse 12

ततः पुनः शान्तोदितौ तुल्यप्रत्ययौ चित्तस्यैकाग्रतापरिणामः

tataḥ punaḥśānta uditau tulya pratyayaḥ

cittasya ekāgratāpariṇāmaḥ

tataḥ – then; punaḥ – again; santoditau = śānta – tranquilized, settled, subsided + uditau – and agitated, emerging; tulya – similar; pratyayaḥ – conviction or belief as mental content, instinctive interest; cittasya – of the mento-emotional energy; ekāgratā – of what is in front of one aspect before the attention; pariṇāmaḥ – transforming effects, change.

Then again, when the mind's content is the same as it was when it is subsiding and when it is emerging,
that is the transformation called “having one aspect in front of, or before the attention”.

Commentary:

This condition of mind is related to everything which was described in this chapter so far. As the yogin gets to the stage where his mind content is no longer dominated by memories, he is able to keep his attention in a quiescent state, (praśānta - vāhita verse 10). However, this is maintained only by keeping the expressive and depressive restraining gyration of the mind out of contact with the memory.

At any time, when the attention is allowed to contact the memory, either by accident or as induced or deliberately, the mind content will be altered to accommodate various images and sounds (sarvārthatā, verse 11). That is counter productive, being regretted by the yogi, since it puts him at odds with his objective, which is to cease such mental operations completely.

The subsiding and emerging nature of the mind cannot be changed but a yogi can get relief from it by his assumption of a focus into other dimensions and by his freezing the mind by prāṇāyāma practice. But as soon as it is possible, the mind will be found to have reverted back to its essential nature. This is, in a sense, disgusting and it causes the yogin to feel that somehow he has got to get rid of such a mind.

It is not easy to have just one aspect in front of the attention. By nature the mind seeks to change its position by an in and out, rising and falling, creating and disintegrating function. This is the natural condition of the normal mindal stage. This is why it is necessary to do prāṇāyāma. By regulating the breath and by surcharging the mind with a high pressure charge of prāṇa, it slows down or abandons lower diversions altogether. But then again as soon as the higher pressure charge dissipates, the mind returns to its normal gyrations, except in the case of those yogins who have developed a yoga siddha body. Skeptics therefore suspect that yoga is a waste of time. They feel that no one can overcome the gyrating nature of the mind.

For the mind content to be the same when the mento-emotional energy is moving to create images as to disintegrate the same and for the mind to remain consistently blank like this for sometime, the yogin has to master the dhāraṇā, sixth stage of yoga practice, whereby he can link the mind to a consistent concentration force and at the same time hold on to or look through his attention energy.

The technique used for this is the one where the yogi keeps his attention locked to the subtle sound which comes in from the chit akash. Usually that is heard in the vicinity of the right ear. As a yogi hears this, he also focuses on diffused light in front of him (ekagrata). There is no visual object before his attention at this time. It is merely a listening to the naad sound in the vicinity of the right ear, while looking forward through his attention which makes a slight contact with the mento-emotional energy (citta). When his looking action relaxes of its own accord, he sees a diffused light before him.

Śrī Patañjali already mentioned that diffusion as a covering of light. That was in Verse 52 of the last chapter.

tataḥ kṣiyate prakāśa āvaraṇam

From that is dissipated, the mental darkness which veils the light. (Yoga Sūtra 2.52)

The diffused light which is actually light mixed with cloudy energy or misty force, will be separated such that the misty force or cloudy energy will disappear, leaving only light. When a yogi attains this practice, it is understood that he mastered the seventh state of yoga called dhyāna.

Some people think that this practice includes imagining a deity, a supernatural, or spiritual being, or imaging a subtle primal force, but that is incorrect. The yogi only needs to get his supernatural and spiritual visions to be operative. Then he sees everything in the chit akash, the sky of consciousness. He does not need to imagine any supersubtle or divine objects.

Verse 13

एतेन तूतेन्द्रियेषु धर्मलक्षणावस्थापरिणामा व्याख्याताः
etena bhūtendriyeṣu dharmalakṣaṇā avasthā
pariṇāmāḥ vyākhyātāḥ

etena – by this; bhūta – the various states of matter; indriyeṣu – by the sensual energy; dharmā – quality; lakṣaṇa – shape, characteristic; avasthā – condition; pariṇāmāḥ – changes, transformation; vyākhyātāḥ – is described.

By this description of the changes, quality and shape, the changing conditions of the various states of matter, as well as of the sensual energy, was described.

Commentary:

The whole subtle and gross material energy is effectively dealt with in this yoga practice, in the efforts of the yogi to get his psychology under control. The whole controlling effort has to do with developing a complete disinterest in the gross and subtle material energy, which is called bhutendriya in this verse. Our response to the mundane energy is our downfall. When we learn how to control that response and how to eventually cease responding altogether, we will get the control which we so desperately seek.

Verse14

शान्तोदिताव्यपदेश्यधर्मानुपाती धर्मी

śānta udita avyapadeśya dharmānupātī dharmī

śānta – collapsed; udita – emergent; avyapadeśya – what is not to be defined, what is latent; dharmā – law, sustaining force; anupātī – reach full retrogression; dharmī – most basic condition.

When the collapsed, emergent and latent forces reach full retrogression, that is the most basic condition.

Commentary:

Most commentators attribute dharmi as the prakṛti energy, or the most subtle form of material nature. This is correct. However, in the case of the yogi, his research into it has to do with finding a technique for abandoning it once and for all, for complete detachment and independence from it. Thus the assessment of it occurs within his psyche within the mento-emotional energy. Once he gets down to its most basic condition, or to the ultimate substratum of material nature, he can take a good look at it with supernatural vision and make his decisions for not responding to it anymore. Once he sees the course of its progression into manifestation, and retrogression out of manifestation, he will no longer be afraid of it or be attracted to it. Then it served its purpose for him and he becomes liberated quickly and definitely.

Obviously we have got some desire to be in touch with material energy. Thus it is necessary that we understand our attraction to it and eliminate that fondness for it or eradicate and dismember whatever it is that influenced us to embrace it.

Verse 15

क्रमान्यत्वं परिणामान्यत्वे हेतुः

karma anyatvaṁ pariṇāma anyatve hetuḥ

krama – sequence; anyatvaṁ – otherness, difference; pariṇāma – transformation change; anyatve – in difference; hetuḥ – cause.

The cause of a difference in the transformation is the difference in the sequential changes.

Commentary:

A student yogi may become preoccupied with the various changing scenes, which occur when the mento-emotional energy (citta) goes through its numerous operations. Thus he becomes bewildered, but sooner or later he will get help from a senior yogin, such that he will no longer follow the sequential changes but will instead observe the operations of the energy. The content of the operations is not important. He has to grasp this fact, if he is to acquire supreme detachment and get leverage over the transformations which occur in his mind and emotions and which keep him from achieving the supernatural and spiritual insights.

Some student yogins like infants, become spell bound by their imagination faculty and its picturizations. They make little progress in higher yoga and talk about it to their teachers. They need to understand that a fascination with the differences, in the various transformations is caused only by differences in the sequential changes and not from any thing substantial or meaningful. Whatever occurs in their silly little minds is of no consequence really. It is not the content of the mind (pratyayaḥ), nor the conviction or moody appetite of the mind that is relevant but rather the way the mind operates.

A person entering a film theater usually becomes enthralled with the images on the screen. But that is childish. He should be interested in the projector mechanism which causes the movie to be shown in the first place. It is the working of that mechanism that is important, not the content of the various movies which are shown through it. When a student yogi gets this understanding, he becomes freed. So long as one is attracted primarily to the mind content, one will not adhere to the instructions for higher yoga, but will instead, complain about the disciplines just as how a child cries if his parent takes him out of a movie theater before a film is finished.

The parent wants to show the child the projection apparatus and the operator of that mechanism, but the child finds the projection room to be dull and boring and not as stimulating as the film show it produces. He feels that it is not interactive with him. So the student yogi usually fights tooth and nail with advanced teachers who come down from siddhaloka to free them.

The difference in the sequential change of ideas and images in the mind occur because of how the memory and imagination interact with the information which comes in a compressed form from the senses from the subtle and gross world. This admixture is bewildering. Advanced yogis advise us to forgo them, to just ignore them. Their policy is that instead of looking at those impressions, we should just avoid them all together. This avoidance disempowers them and weakens their grip on us.

The analogy of the boy in the movie house would help in this case. The more and more he stays out of the movie house, the more detached and disinterested he may become. The more he goes to it, the more his nature reacts in response to it and the more attached and interested he becomes. But in that case his interest is being abused, being needlessly exploited by fiction. This is why in India, there was a period of history where many leading yogis condemned human consumption of name and forms. If we become enthralled again and again with names of things and with the forms of things, it will cause us to become more and more fascinated with this world and that will push us away from liberation.

According to the sequence of the various film slides, the movie shows in particular ways which may invoke our interest, either to cause happiness, distress or indifference, and according to how the memory, imagination, reasoning and sensual intake interact, we become fascinated with the differences in the transformation within our minds and emotions. Thus the important thing is to understand how the mind operates, not what the content of it comprises.

Even though this is the solution, this is easier said than done. When one becomes determined to follow this advice, he discovers that somehow he is enthralled by the content of the mind. That itself entraps him. At least that is how a student yogin will feel. But again, he should study the operation of the entrapment mechanism.

The boy in our analogy must study how the movie building was constructed with a small door for entry on a back street and a large attractive door for entry on a main street. The very construction of the place is bewildering and causes the body to go into the theater through the front door, which leads into the gallery where the movie is showing. Once the boy understands this he can avoid that door and find his way to the small door on the back street which leads to the projection room where he will be able to study something that is of vital importance to him, which is the way the projection apparatus operates.

Sometimes a student yogi finds that he repeatedly finds himself in front of a series of images which are projected by the imagination faculty or which were released from the memory or from the sensual organs which collect information. Before he can realize it, or be objective to it, he finds himself looking, analyzing, interacting with these images. This procedure, though impulsive must be stopped by the student yogin.

Verse 16

परिणामत्रयसंयमादतीतानागतज्ञानम्

pariṇāmatraya saṁyamāt atīta anāgatajñānam

pariṇāma – transformation change; traya – threefold; saṁyamāt – from the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy; atīta – past; anāgata – future; jñānam – information.

From the complete restrain of the mento-emotional energy in terms of the three-fold transformations within it,
the yogi gets information about the past and future.

Commentary:

This set of verses regarding the perfectional skills or siddhis gained by certain practices, have caused Śrī Patañjali to be criticized by those religious leaders who feel that the siddhi perfectional powers are a distraction either from liberation or from attaining love of God. However, the accusation is ungrounded, because Śrī Patañjali very realistically informs us about the course of our development, alerting us to what lies ahead. These perfectional skills cannot be avoided by anyone who advances in spiritual disciplines. We need training in how not to be charmed by these powers of the lower and higher subtle bodies.

Everything about the past, in microscopic and atomic impressions, is in our individual memories and in the cosmic memory pool. Any of this information can be retrieved by the Supreme Being.

śrī-bhagavān uvāca

bahūni me vyatītānījanmāni tava cārjuna

tāny aham veda sarvānīna tvam vettha parantapa

The Blessed Lord said: Many of My births transpired, and yours, Arjuna. I recall them all. You do not remember, O scorcher of the enemies.

(Gītā 4.5)

Everything about the future is potentially present in the existence right now. The parameters which will cause the formation of the future are present. The Supreme Being can look at it and accurately gauge the probabilities.

One should not interpret this verse to mean that a yogi can know everything. A yogi can know much if he applies himself sufficiently and can enter into the cosmic memory and decipher its impressions. First of all, he must be allowed to do that. This allowance is not always granted to a yogi by the Supreme Being. However a yogi does not need the permission of the Supreme Being to enter his own limited memory bank. His ability to do that relies on his expertise in the complete restrain of his mento-emotional energy.

A great yogin, Shrila Yogeshwarananda can decipher the cosmic parameters which will control what happens in the future of this universe. Therefore it is possible but only a rare yogin can do this. The complete conquest of the mento-emotional energy is a feat reserved for a select few great yogis like him. The important achievement is to get your own memory under control. When this is done one can check on the relationship between one limited memory and the cosmic reservoir of past impressions.

Some people feel that if a yogi reaches a stage of knowledge about the past and future, he would be omniscient, but that is an exaggeration. Such information will not affect the course of history nor change the probability, nor affect how the Supreme Being relates to the limited personalities. Its value is in the potency to convince the yogi to make an exit from these gross and subtle mundane histories. But that is not all, because a yogin has to acquire permission to do that. That permission must be gained from the Supreme Being, who might not grant it to a particular yogin.

Verse 17

शब्दार्थप्रत्ययानामितरेतराध्यासात्सङ्करस्तत्प्रवि-गसंयमात्सर्व-तरुतज्ञानम्
śabda artha pratyayānām itaretarādhyāsāt
saṅkaraḥ tatpravibhāga saṁyamāt
sarvabhūta rutajñānam

śabda – sound; artha – meaning; pratyayānām – pertaining to the mind content, convictions, idea; itaretara = itara + itara = one for the other; adhyāsāt – resulting from the super-imposition; saṅkaraḥ – intermixture; tat – their; pravibhāga – differentiation, sorting, classification, mental clarity; saṁyamāt – from the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy; sarva – all; bhūta – creature; ruta – sound, cry, yell, language; jñānam – information, knowledge.

From the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
 In relation to mental clarity, regarding the intermixture resulting from the superimposition one for the other, of sound, its meaning and the related mentality, knowledge about the language of all creatures is gained.

Commentary:

When a student yogin simplifies his mentality by sorting out the various parts of it, and when he detaches his imagination faculty from its involuntary connection to the memory, as well as when he consistently retracts his sensual energies from the gross and lower subtle worlds, he gains a certain mental clarity, by which his buddhi organ instantaneously sorts the sound, its meaning and related idea which was made by any other creature.

संस्कारसाक्षात्करणात्पूर्वजातिज्ञानम्

saṁskāra sāksātkaraṇāt pūrvajātijñānam

saṁskāra – the subtle impressions stored in memory; sāksātkaraṇāt – from causing to be visibly present, direct intuitive perception; pūrva – before, previous; jāti – status, life; jñānam – knowledge.

From direct intuitive perception of the subtle impressions stored in the memory, the yogi gains knowledge of previous lives.

Commentary:

A yogi may know his own or some past lives of others. He can intuit into the memory impressions and pull up from there the compressed information, which can be instantly translated by his purified buddhi organ.

Verse 19

प्रत्ययस्य परचित्तज्ञानम्

pratyayasya paracittajñānam

pratyayasya – of the mind content; para – of others; citta – of the mento-emotional energy; jñānam – information.

A yogi can know the contents of the mental and emotional energy
in the mind of others.

Commentary:

Even though a student yogi might experience this, he must check the purity of his buddhi organ to be sure that his intuition has interpreted accurately. He should not inform others that he has this ability. Unless he gets directions from Lord Shiva or from an advanced yogi, he should not disclose to others anything about his intuitions.

Generally, a yogi should not interfere with the lives of others, for he should be aware of the supervision of the supernatural persons like Lord Krishna and Lord Shiva.

Verse 20

न च तत्सालम्बनं तस्याविषयी-तत्त्वात्

na ca tat sālambanam tasya aviṣayī bhūtatvāt

na – not; ca – and; tat – that; sālambanam – leaning on, resting on, support; tasya – of that; aviṣayī – not an object of anything, imperceptible; bhūtatvāt – the actual object.

And he does not check a factor
which is the support of that content,
for it is not the actual object in question.

Commentary:

This explains the accuracy of the intuitional powers of an advanced yogin.

Verse 21

कायरूपसंयमात्तद्ग्राह्यशक्तिश्चक्षुःप्रकाशासम्प्रयोगेऽन्तर्धानम्

kāya rūpa saṁyamāt tadgrāhyaśakti

stambhe cakṣuḥ prakāśa asaṁprayoge 'ntardhānam

kāya – body; rūpa – form; saṁyamāt – from the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy; tad – that; grāhya – appropriating, grasping, sensual perceptiveness; śakti – power, potency, energy; stambhe – on the suspension; cakṣuḥ – vision; prakāśa – light; asaṁprayoge – on not contacting; 'ntardhānam = antardhānam – invisibility.

From the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
in relation to the shape of the body,
on the suspension of the receptive energy,
there is no contact between light and vision,
which results in invisibility.

Commentary:

The mento-emotional energy emanates a psychic light, which is called an aura. Now if this aura is restrained or if it loses its expressiveness, the particular form cannot be seen by another. A yogi may also suspend this energy from operating. In that case, others who send out psychic feelers to find him, discover to their dismay that he is missing. Sometimes when this happens, the persons who are trying to find that yogi know that he is in the vicinity or that he is where they think he is, therefore they become annoyed and attribute the lack of contact to his anti-social tendency.

The lack of contact (samprayoga) between the light and vision has to do with the light coming from the yogi's form and the vision beam which emanates from the person who searches psychically or physically for him. Sometimes a yogi can sit right next to a person and that person cannot realize that the yogi is by his side. One of my gurus, a certain Rishi Singh Gherwal was hired by the British Government to find himself. Being employed as a spy to find a spy he remained in the services of the British for many years. He was a mahayogi but was unknown because of his great humility and resistance to popularity.

Verse 22

एतेन शब्दादि अन्तर्धानम् उक्तम्

etena śabdādi antardhānam uktam

etena – by this; śabdādi = śabda – sound + ādi – and the related sensual pursuits; antardhānam – invisibility, non-perceptibility; uktam – described.

By this method,
sound and the related sensual pursuits, may be restrained,
which results in the related non -perceptibility.

Commentary:

A yogi may use a mystic process to cause imperceptibility in any or all aspects of sensual energy, so that he may not be detected by others. But this might only be done for the sake of yoga practice progression, and not otherwise. If a yogi uses these mystic skills for other reasons, it will distract from yoga practice and cause a long or short lapse in progression.

Sometimes people send out thoughts to attract a yogi. They do this by thinking. These thoughts are transmitted from their psyches just like radio waves being transmitted from a radio station. These thoughts are usually disruptive to yoga practice and are usually meant to engage a yogi in cultural activities which do not accelerate, but which rather decelerate yoga. Thus a yogi has to protect his practice by causing such thoughts not to reach him. There are many ways of doing this. The yogi uses a method, which he is allowed according to the level of his practice.

Just as a yogi might sit next to someone on a bus or train and travel miles with that person, without the person recognizing him, even though he is the very same person whom that searcher seeks, so a yogi might stay out of reach of the others even though he might be right next to them or even though they might know him so well that their thoughts instantly reach his psyche.

Verse 23

सोपक्रमं निरुपक्रमं च कर्म तत्संयमादपरान्तज्ञानमरिष्टेभ्यो वा

sopakramam nirupakramam ca karma

tatsaṁyamāt aparāntajñānam ariṣṭebhyaḥ vā

sopakramam – set about, undertaken, already operative; nirupakramam – dormant, destined; ca – and; karma – cultural activities; tat – that; saṁyamād = saṁyamāt – from the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy; aparānta – of the other end, of death entry into the hereafter; jñānam – knowledge; ariṣṭebhyo + ariṣṭebhyaḥ – from portents; vā – or.

Complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
in relation to current and destined cultural activities
results in knowledge of entry into the hereafter.
Or the same result is gained
by the complete restraint in relation to portents.

Commentary:

Both the current and the future cultural activities are the result of destiny, which is a combination of several forces. These destined energies work now. They worked in the past. They will work in the future. By restraining the mento-emotional energy in relation to the confusing impressions, which we take in now, and the ones which are stored in our memory we may derive intuitive or direct supernatural perceptions into the subtle world to see when it would be necessary for any of us to leave a material body. By this process, a yogi can leave his body and enter other dimensions of the hereafter where civilizations are currently taking place.

Each person who is about to leave his or her body experiences portents. Most persons cannot properly interpret the indications. A yogi can accurately gage those signs and messages.

Verse 24

मैत्र्यादिषु बलानि

maitryādiṣu balāni

maitrī – friendliness; ādiṣu – and by related qualities; balāni – powers.

By complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
in relation to friendliness, he develops that very same power.

Commentary:

When the yogi detaches himself from the cultural prejudices, which were cultivated in this and in some past lives, he develops universal friendliness which is applied evenly without biases which come up from the subconscious memory as predispositions. However, being aware of those attitudes in his memory, he can know what sort of friendly or antagonistic relationship he had with others in past lives.

Verse 25

बलेषु हस्तिबलादीनि

baleṣu hasti balādīni

baleṣu – by strength; hasti – elephant; bala – strength; ādīni – and the same for other aspects.

By complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
in relation to strength,
the yogin acquires strength of an elephant.
The same applies to other aspects.

Commentary:

A yogi develops certain mystic perfections during practice. This cannot be avoided. A yogi must stick to his objectives as shared with him by advanced teachers. Then he is not distracted by the mystic perfections, but observes their development and notes the various powers of the subtle and supersubtle bodies.

Verse 26

प्रवृत्त्यालोकन्यासात्सूक्ष्मव्यवहितविप्रकृष्टज्ञानम्

pravṛtṭi āloka nyāsāt sūkṣma

vyavahita viprakṛṣṭajñānam

pravṛtṭyālokanyāsāt = pravṛtṭi – destined activity, the force of cultural activity + āloka – supernatural insight + nyāsāt – from placing or applying; sūkṣma – subtle; vyavahita – concealed; viprakṛṣṭa – remote; jñānam – knowledge.

From the application of supernatural insight
to the force producing cultural activities,
a yogi gets information about what is subtle, concealed
and what is remote from him.

Commentary:

Sometimes it is necessary to side-step destiny and to see what will happen if one takes one kind of action or if one stays in a particular dimension or world. Then a yogi might apply supernatural vision to peer into the future, so that he can make a decision to remain in one dimension or be transcribed into another. A yogi can only find out what he is allowed to by the Supreme Being, but that allowance is very wide. He may get special insight from Lord Shiva or from some other divine being.

Verse 27

भुवनज्ञानं सूर्ये संयमात्

bhuvanajñānam sūrye saṁyamāt

bhuvana – the solar system; jñāna – knowledge; sūrye – on the sun-god or the sun planet; saṁyamāt – from the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy.

From the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
in relation to the sun god or the sun planet,
knowledge of the solar system is gained.

Commentary:

If for some reason or the other, a yogi wants to know about the jurisdictional influences of the sun-god or sun planet, he may find out if he applies his spiritual sight to the spiritual, supernatural, or gross influences of the sunlight. The sun god's influence abounds physically, supernaturally, and spiritually as well. This is why Śrī Krishna described the paths used by proficient yogis at the time of death.

yatra kāle tv anāvṛttim āvṛttim caiva yoginaḥ prayātā yānti taṁ kālaṁ vakṣyāmi bharatarṣabha agniḥ jyotiḥ ahaḥ śuklaḥ ṣaṅmāsā uttarāyaṇam tatra prayātā gacchanti brahma brahmavido janāḥ dhūmo rātriḥ tathā kṛṣṇaḥ ṣaṅmāsā dakṣiṇāyanam tatra cāndramasaṁ jyotiḥ yogī prāpya nivartate śuklakṛṣṇe gatī hyete jagataḥ śāśvate mate
ekayā yāti anāvṛttim anyayāvartate punaḥ

O bullish man of the Bharata family, I will tell you of the departure for the yogis who do or do not return.

The summer season, the bright atmosphere, the daytime, the bright moonlight, the six months

when the sun appears to move north; if at that time, they depart the body, those people who know the spiritual dimension, go to the spiritual location.

The smoky, misty or hazy season, as well as in the night-time, the dark-moon time, the six months when the sun appears to move south; if the yogi departs at that time, he attains moonlight, after which he is born again.

The night and the dark times are two paths which are considered to be perpetually available for the universe. It is considered so by the authorities. By one, a person goes away not to return; by the other he comes back again. (Gītā 8.23 - 26)

Verse 28

चन्द्रे ताराव्यूहज्ञानम्

candre tārāvyūhajñānam

candre – on the moon or moon-god; tārā – stars; vyūha – system; jñānam – knowledge.

By complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy,
in reference to the moon or moon-god,
the yogi gets knowledge about the system of stars.

Commentary:

This is in the case of a yogi who has an interest of going beyond the jurisdiction of the solar deity. To relieve himself of reliance on this person, a yogi must get permission for transference to another zone of some other deity. All places are controlled. Thus a yogi needs permission both to leave this realm as well as to enter any other.

A yogi's desire for something is no guarantee that he will acquire it. It all depends on if he is permitted and if he qualifies by the required austerities. Yogis, who are spiritually linked to a local deity like the sun-god or moon-god, cannot relinquish their spiritual connection, even though they may get permission for a change of services or for a relocation to another zone that is controlled by the same deity.

Verse 29

ध्रुवे तद्गतिज्ञानम्

dhruve tadgatiñānam

dhruve – on the Pole Star; tat – that; gati – course of heavenly planets and stars; jñānam – knowledge.

By the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
in relation to the Pole Star,
a yogi can know of the course of planets and stars.

Commentary:

Some yogis do develop whimsical interest and inquiries which satisfy their curiosity. But other yogis who are serious about it and who hope to migrate from this planet to other superior places do check on the other zones before leaving their bodies, to be sure that their conceptions of these places perfectly match the actual situations there. Such yogis use their higher astral bodies to move from sphere to sphere checking the various living conditions in the other places.

Verse 30

ना-चक्रे कायव्यूहज्ञानम्
nābhicakre kāyavyūhajñānam

nābhi – navel; cakre – on the energy gyrating center; kāya – body; vyūha – arrangement, lay out; jñānam – knowledge.

By complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
in relation to the focusing on the navel energy-gyrating center,
the yogi gets knowledge about the layout of his body.

Commentary:

It is necessary in the course of kuṇḍalini yoga to energize the energy gyrating centers or chakras. These are located on the spinal column in the subtle body. This corresponds to the central nervous system in the gross form. The navel chakra point extends to the front of the body, to the solar plexus region. In the case of student yogis, it may also point downward. But in advanced celibate yogis it points upwards.

A yogin may enter the navel chakra of his own body or that of others, from the front of the body, from the navel, where the umbilical cord was connected while that body was in the womb of its mother. From there a yogi can see the entire layout of the body, including its lifespan, its potential for disease and its maximum capacity for helping the soul in the quest for liberation.

In some cases, a person cannot be liberated in his present body. When a yogi sees this he does not waste time with that person. He directs that person to earn more conducive birth opportunities. In yogic terminology the navel chakra is called manipuraka. It is the third major chakra when counting these from the bottom of the spine. By completing the course of Haṭha yoga, a yogi curbs this chakra.

Verse 31

कण्ठकूपे क्षुत्पिपासानिवृत्तिः
kaṅṭhakūpe kṣutpipāsā nivṛtṭiḥ

kaṅṭha – throat; kūpe – on the gullet; kṣut – hunger; pipāsā – thirst; nivṛtṭiḥ – cessation, suppression.

By the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
in focusing on the gullet,
a yogi causes the suppression of hunger and thirst.

Commentary:

The practice of suppressing hunger and thirst is part of Hatha yoga. The purpose of this is to get the life force to cease its independent activities. A Hatha yogi endeavors to bring the life force under his control, not to stop it from functioning but to cease its independent activities which are counter productive to the aims of yoga. Thus, a yogi surcharges and subsequently purifies the energy gyrating centers (chakras) one by one, beginning at the base of the spine.

Some people feel that they can use rāja yoga to purify the chakras from the top downwards, from the brow or crown chakra. Actually this cannot be done, except in a person's imagination. One has to do kuṇḍalini yoga by a vigor practice like bhastrika prāṇāyāma. By charging the body with prāṇa and pushing it down into the passages which are filled with apana, one causes purification from the base chakra upwards. It takes a certain amount of practice according to the extent of impurities.

A yogi does cause his hunger and thirst to be suppressed initially when he sets out to control those urges, but over a time of practice, his subtle body changes and the urges for solid and liquid food go away. This is because the throat chakra become altered.

Of course a yogi can be degraded, because whatever low habits or vices he acquired in the past, he can again take up in the future if he is not careful, or if he is not transferred into a dimension where such sordid aspects are unavailable.

Verse 32

कूर्मनाड्यां स्थैर्यम्

kūrmanāḍyāṃ sthairyam

kūrma – tortoise, a particular subtle nerve; nāḍyāṃ – on the nadi or subtle nerve; sthairyam – steadiness.

By the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
in focusing on the kurmanadi subtle nerve,
a yogi acquires steadiness of his psyche.

Commentary:

This has to do with being ready to enter samādhi, which is continuous effortless linkage of one's attention to a higher concentration force, object or person. Unless one can keep his body in a steady pose, preferably the padmāsana lotus posture, and also have the bodily urges like hunger quelled completely, he cannot enter into samādhi. Śrī Patañjali brings this to our attention at this point.

The kurmanadi is supposed to be located below the gullet. In other words if one has not stilled the gross and subtle nerves in this area, one will not be able to enter samādhi. When those nerves are stilled, the life force gives up its effort to protect and overly maintain the lower part of the body, the part which is lower than the neck. Unless the life force can be relieved from its creature survival duties, it does not allow the person to enter samādhi.

मूर्ध्ज्योतिषि सिद्धदर्शनम्

mūrdhajyotiṣi siddhadarśanam

mūrdha – the head; jyotiṣi – on the shining light; siddha – the perfected being; darśanam – the view of.

By the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
as it is focused on the shining light in the head of the subtle body,
a yogi gets views of the perfected beings.

Commentary:

Mūrdhajyotiṣi is known otherwise as jñānadīpa or jñānādīptih or jñānachaksu. It is a light seen in the front central area of the subtle head. This light is the energized buddhi organ. In its normal stage in a human being, it is dark and cloudy, like a filament of a light bulb which gets insufficient current. The insufficient current warms the filament but does not cause it to glow noticeable. When the yogi masters prāṇāyāma and perfects himself in the disciplines of kuṇḍalini and celibacy yoga, his buddhi organ gets sufficiently charged. It glows with shining light (jyotiṣi), otherwise it remains dull but is felt as the centre of the mind, as one's ability to understand, analyse, plan and draw conclusions.

When a yogi develops himself to the extent that his buddhi organ begins to glow in his lower subtle body even, then he perceives the perfected beings, the siddhas like Śrī Babaji Mahasya, Śrī Gorakshanath, and other Mahayogins. Sometimes fortunately he sees Lord Shiva at Kailash in the other dimensions. Once a yogin sees the siddhas, it is understood that he is blessed. If he accelerates the practice further, he will develop a yoga siddha body. He can take advices and get rare kriyā yoga practices from those siddhas whom he is allowed to perceive. Such a yogin does not rely on physical contact with a yoga guru. Hence he does not have to have a guru who uses a physical form. He takes initiation either physically or subtly from these teachers.

Verse 34

प्राति-द्वा सर्वम्

prātibhāt vā sarvam

prātibhāt – resulting from samyama on the shining organ of divination; vā – or; sarvam – everything, all reality.

By complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy,
while focusing on the shining organ of divination
in the head of the subtle body,
the yogin gets the ability to know all reality.

Commentary:

This pratibha is the brahmarandra development in the head of the subtle body of a yogi. At first a yogi develops the top part of the subtle body which is known as the brahmarandra. Śrī Patañjali used the terms, pratibha which literally means relating to divination or genius. A yogi who has developed his brahmarandra is said to be liberated even while using a gross body. Such a yogi can select which of the dimensions he would live in after he sheds his material body, but of course again, since he is a limited being in the conditioned and liberated stages, he has to get approval from higher authorities like Lord Shiva or Lord Krishna.

Verse 35

हृदये चित्तसंवित्

hṛdaye cittasamvit

hṛdaye – on the samyam on the causal body; citta – mento-emotional energy; samvit – thorough insight.

By the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
as it is focused on the causal body in the vicinity of the chest,
the yogi gets thorough insight
into the cause of the mental and emotional energy.

Commentary:

For all these practices, one should have mastered the samyama procedure described before by Śrī Patañjali as a development from dhāraṇā, to dhyāna and to samādhi. Once this is mastered, one can apply himself to the practices described. Stated differently on who mastered samādhi can use samādhi.

A person whose mind is jumpy, whose emotions are reactive and who is still linked to the cultural affairs of this world, cannot develop samādhi. It is as simple as that. In fact such a person cannot go beyond attempts at dhāraṇā, which is effortful linkage of the attention to a higher concentration force, object or person. This is because the mento-emotional energy will remain unstable, locking and unlocking unto various ideas and images which emerge from the memory, come in through sensual perception or are developed by the dull darkish non-glowing buddhi organ.

Until the mento-emotional energy is established by a complete pratyāhāra sensual withdrawal procedure, the attention will not be freed to focus on the void which occurs before a split second interval between locking and unlocking of the mento-emotional energy. All these factors must be properly mastered before one can get to the dhyāna effortless linkage of the attention to higher concentration force, object or person. And when that is mastered by regular practice, then one can do samādhi which is the continuous effortless linkage of the same.

Verse 36

सत्त्वपुरुषयोरत्यन्तासङ्कीर्णयोः प्रत्ययाविशेषो -नेगः

परार्थत्वात्स्वार्थसंयमात् पुरुषज्ञानम्
sattva puruṣayoḥ atyantāsamkīrṇayoḥ
pratyayaḥ aviśeṣaḥ bhogaḥ parārthatvāt svārthasaṁyamāt puruṣajñānam

sattva – intelligence energy of material nature; puruṣayoḥ – of the individual spirit; atyanta – excessively, extremely, very; asamkīrṇayoḥ – of what is distinct or separate; pratyayaḥ – mental content, awareness within the psyche; aviśeṣaḥ – not distinct, inability to distinguish; bhogaḥ – experience; parārthatvāt – what is apart from another thing; svārtha – one own, self interest; saṁyamāt – from the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy; puruṣa – individual spirit; jñānam – knowledge.

Experience results from the inability to distinguish between the individual spirit

and the intelligence energy of material nature,
even though they are very distinct.

By complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
while focusing on self-interest distinct from the other interest,
a yogi gets knowledge of the individual spirit.

Commentary:

To understand this verse we must go back to chapter 2 verses 20 – 25 as follows:

draṣṭā dṛśimātraḥ śuddhaḥ api pratyayānupaśyaḥ
tadarthaḥ eva dṛśyasya ātma
kṛtārthaṁ prati naṣṭam api
anaṣṭam tadanya sādharmaṇatvāt
sva svāmīśaktyoḥ svarūpa upalabdhi hetuḥ saṁyogaḥ
tasya hetuḥ avidyā
tad abhāvāt saṁyogā abhāvaḥ
hānam taddṛśeḥ kaivalyam

The perceiver is the pure extent of his consciousness but his conviction is patterned by what is perceived.

The individual spirit who is involved in what is seen exists here for that purpose only.

It is not effective for one to whom its purpose is fulfilled but it has a common effect on the others.

There is a reason for the conjunction of the individual self and his psychological energies. It is for obtaining the experience of his own form.

The cause of the conjunction is spiritual ignorance.

The elimination of the conjunction which results from the elimination of that spiritual ignorance is the withdrawal that is the total separation of the perceiver from the mundane psychology.

This verse, which defines experience as being the inability to distinguish between the individual spirit and the intelligent energy of material nature, is the heart of the matter of self-realization. It causes us to bow down very low to the Maharishi Mahayogi Śrī Patañjali. In a very rare and precise declaration, he outrightly condemns our experiences (bhogah) in material nature.

They come to us because of our inability to distinguish between our spirits and the intelligent energy of material nature. The implication is this: If we could distinguish between our spirits and the intelligence energy of material nature, then we would not have to take the course of experience (bhogah) through material nature, through the various species of life, in and out of the various subtle and gross dimensions, which are produced in and are formed of subtle and gross material nature.

However, there is a way out, which is the focusing on the spirit itself apart from the other interests, which is material nature. Śrī Patañjali earmarked, not just material nature but its sattva features or its highest most sensitive and intelligent energy.

Verse 37

ततः प्राति-श्रावणवेदनाऽऽदर्शाऽऽस्वादवार्त्ता जायन्ते

tataḥ prātibha śrāvaṇa vedana

ādarśa āsvāda vārtāḥ jāyante

tataḥ – thence, therefore, from that focus; prātibha – the shining organ of divination; śrāvaṇa – hearing; vedana – touching; ādarśa – sight; āsvāda – taste; vārtāḥ – smell; jāyante – is produced.

From that focus is produced smelling, tasting, seeing, touching and hearing, through the shining organ of divination.

Commentary:

Now all of a sudden, Śrī Patañjali continues with some promising statement about yoga development. The student will have to review sūtra 36 of this chapter at a later date. It is vital that he understands the implications of it, which is nirvana or the blowing out of the subtle and gross material existence.

From complete restraint of the mental and emotional energy and the focusing on the self-interest of the spirit, leaving aside completely the interests of material nature, the yogi becomes occupied applying his organ of divination, his developed brahmarandra, to all his sensual pursuits. Then, instead of sensing through the mento-emotional energy (citta), he senses directly through spiritual energy. This was recommended before:

draṣṭṛdṛśyayoḥ saṁyogo heyahetuḥ

The cause which is to be avoided is the indiscriminate association of the observer and what is perceived. (Yoga Sūtra 2.17)

The idea that the individual spirit will merge into the absolute and will then be without senses is not given in Patañjali's sūtras, even through many yogis and yogi philosophers seem to think so.

Verse 38

ते समाधायुपसर्गा व्युत्थाने सिद्धयः

te samādhau upasargāḥ vyutthāne siddhayaḥ

te – they, those abilities; samādhau – in samādhi continues effortless linkage of the attention to a higher concentration force, object or person; upasargāḥ – impediments; vyutthāne – in expressing, going outwards, rising up; siddhayaḥ – mystic perfectional skills.

Those divination skills are obstacles
in the practice of continuous effortless linkage of the attention
to a higher concentration force, object or person.
But in expressing,
they are considered as mystic perfectional skills.

Commentary:

A yogi is stalled if he is distracted for exhibitions of the perfectional skills which are manifested as he progresses. Those student yogis who cannot resist such exhibitions are doomed. They become premature gurus of a very gullible and stupid public.

Verse 39

बन्धकारणशैथिल्यात् प्रचारसंवेदनाच्च चित्तस्य परशरीरावेशः

bandhakāraṇa śaithilyāt pracāra

saṁvedanāt ca cittasya paraśarīrāveśaḥ

bandha – bondage; kāraṇa – cause; śaithilyāt – due to relaxation, collapse; pracāra – channel flow; saṁvedanāt – from knowing; ca – and; cittasya – of the mento-emotional energies; para – another; śarīra – body; āveśaḥ – entrance, penetration.

The entrance into another body is possible
by slackening the cause of bondage
and by knowing the channels of the mento-emotional energy.

Commentary:

The slackening of the cause of bondage is done by a yogi, when he reaches the causal level mentioned in verse 35. From the causal plane, he is able to slacken the cause of his having to take his current body. Then he leaves that body temporarily while it stays in hibernation in samādhi. He enters forms of others. A spiritual master may do this after his body dies. He enters into the forms of his disciples on earth and speaks to small or large audiences, giving instructions. This prevents him from having to take a new material form. In that way he remains in the astral world for many years, avoiding physical rebirth.

Some great yogis like Śrī Adi Shankaracarya and Mahayogin Śrī Matsyendranath entered the bodies of others, while their disciples maintained their gross bodies. They did this for special purposes. Over all, a student yogi should not endeavor for this paraśārīrāveśaḥ siddhi since it is very dangerous. It is said that recently in our era, T. Lobsang Rampa who was a Tibetan mystic yogi in his past life, entered into an Englishman's body after the said occupant agreed to give over his body in exchange for some merits of Lobsang. Generally such a course is not recommended for a student yogin.

If one gets in the causal plane and stays there long enough one may develop an ability to adjust one's resultant reactions which are left in a particular dimension and which would forestall one's liberation. Thus one may do so and not have to exhibit the paraśārīrāveśaḥ siddhi. It is not recommended.

If one enters the form of another, one has to go through the channels of that person's mento-emotional energy. That entails adopting part of his nature and assuming some of his responsibilities. That is dangerous since one may forget oneself, and begin to feel as if one is the other person, all because of becoming too familiar in identity to that person's psyche. Śrī Matsyendranath even though he was a siddha at the time, was rescued by his most advanced disciple, the mahayogin Śrī Goraksnatha. Matsyendranatha entered the body of another person and forgot his identity after adopting the stranger's psyche. In the case of Śrī Adi Shankaracarya, he did not forget himself, but the queen of the King's body whom he adopted, wanted to kill Shankara's yogi body. She wanted him to stay on as her husband and not to return to his body. There are dangers in adopting the body of another.

It is interesting that a great yogin as Śrī Adi Shankara had to enter the almost dead body of a king, just to experience sexual intercourse with a female, because after all a yogi can get such experiences on the astral planes which are near to this world or he may enter a parallel world and get such experiences. It is not necessary to enter any other person's physical body to get such experiences. We must conclude therefore that destiny plays hard cards against a certain yogin at specific stages of his advancement, in order to force him to do certain dangerous and risky things.

Śrī Adi Shankaracharya is rated as an incarnation of Lord Siva. From what I learned in the association of the siddhas in the higher astral world, he is Skanda Kumara, the celibate son of Lord Shiva. They claimed that due to his insubordination to Devi, Lord Shiva's wife, he had that difficulty in that incarnation. If one plans to be celibate, one should not expect much help from Goddess Durga, but all the same, She is in a position to cause disruptions in one's practice.

Verse 40

उदानजयाज्जलपङ्ककण्टकादिष्वसङ्ग उत्क्रान्तिश्च

udānajayāt jala paṅka kaṅṭakādiṣu asaṅgaḥ utkrāntiḥ ca

udāna – air which rises from the throat and enters the head; jayāt – from the conquest of; jala – water; paṅka – mud; kaṅṭaka – thorns; ādiṣi – and similar aspects; asaṅgaḥ – non contact; utkrāntiḥ – rising above; ca – and.

By mastery over the air
which rises from the throat into the head,
a yogi can rise over or not have contact
with water, mud or sharp objects.

Commentary:

Udana vayu is the air which moves up from the throat area to the top of the head. Initially a yogi controls that in kuṇḍalini yoga practice, when he is able to force the apana air, the lowest most polluted air in the body, up and out of the body through the spinal column. Sometimes for convenience sake, one is able to cross water or mud or sharp objects, miraculously even though one may not willfully exhibit such perfectional power, which was demonstrated by many great yogis before and by Lord Jesus Christ.

Certain animals have the natural power since their spirit use forms which are able to suppressed and regulate the udana vayu. Of course, a yogi's exhibition of that siddhi is something different. The expression of miracles, even though it helps a yogi on occasion, can cause impediments under other conditions. These exhibitions are not recommended. Śrī Patañjali lists these not to encourage their use but to alert student yogis of the landmarks of yoga practice.

Verse 41

समानजयाज्ज्वलनम्

samānajayāt jvalanam

samāna – digestive energy; jayāt – conquest; jvalanam – shining, burning, blazing, with firey glow.

By conquest of the samana digestive force,
a yogi's psyche blazes or shines with a fiery glow.

Commentary:

Conquest of the samana digestive force comes by the practice of kuṇḍalini yoga which entails various āsanās combined with prāṇāyāma, especially bhastrika prāṇāyāma. By that a yogi gets control over diet. He purifies the navel region of the body. This sets the stage for purification of the sexual functions which opens a gate for the yogi to attack the muladhara anal region. After this is achieved in the downward course, it must be achieved in the upward course, as the prāṇa is pushed down and forces the apana energy to move upwards through a subtle tubing called the sushumna nadi. When a yogi on the upward purification course, purifies his navel region, he experiences frontal kuṇḍalini. It is then that he achieves conquest over the samana digestive fire. His subtle body then appears with an orangish fiery glow.

Verse 42

श्रोत्राकाशयोस्सम्बन्धसंयमाद्दिव्यं श्रोत्रम्

śrotra ākāśayoḥ sambandha saṁyamāt divyaṁ śrotram

śrotra – hearing sense; ākāśayoḥ – of space; sambandha – relationship; saṁyamāt – from the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy; divyaṁ – divine, supernatural; śrotram – hearing sense.

By the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy,
while focusing on the hearing sense and space,
a yogin develops supernatural and divine hearing.

Commentary:

Each yogi masters a particular mystic skill, all depending on the force of practice, on association while progressing and because of his cultural background from many previous lives. By this, particular skills attract his attention. However, if he has the superior association of Lord Shiva, and other maha-yogis, he will not invest time in using the mystic skills but will stay focused on the objective of psyche purification; something from which he could quickly gain spiritual perfection.

Verse 43

कायाकाशयोस्सम्बन्धसंयमाल्लघुतूलसमापत्तेश्चाकाशगमनम्

kāya ākāśayoḥ sambandha saṁyamāt

laghutūlasamāpatteḥ ca ākāśagamanam

kāya – body; ākāśayoḥ – of the sky, atmosphere; sambandha – relation; saṁyamāt – from the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy; laghu – light; tūla – cotton fluff; samāpatteḥ – of meeting, of linking; ca – and; ākāśa – atmosphere; gamanam – going through, passing through.

By the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy,
while linking the mind
to the relationship between the body and the sky and linking the attention to being as light as cotton fluff,
a yogi acquires the ability to pass through the atmosphere.

Commentary:

This does not necessarily mean levitation of the physical body. It can mean that usage of the subtle body. Since every user of a physical body, already has a subtle form which can pass through the atmosphere with ease, it is not necessary to focus on making the physical body as buoyant as a cotton fluff which can float easily in the air, as if to deny the power of gravity. In addition, a yogi who can see or hear from afar, would not require that his gross body be moved from one place to another merely to perceive through it, what he can divine from a distance.

Verse 44

वहिरकल्पिता वृत्तिर्महाविदेहा ततः प्रकाशावरणक्षयः
bahih akalpitā vṛtṭiḥ mahāvidehā tataḥ
prakāśa āvaraṇakṣayaḥ

bahih – outside, external; akalpitā – not manufactured, not artificial, not formed; vṛtṭiḥ – operation; mahā – great; videhā – bodiless state; tataḥ – thence, from that, resulting from that; prakāśa – light; āvaraṇa – covering, mental darkens; kṣayaḥ – dissipation, removal.

By the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy
 which is external, which is not formed,
 a yogi achieves the great bodiless state.

From that the great mental darkness which veils the light,
 is dissipated.

Commentary:

The great bodiless state, mahāvidehā, is a special accomplishment of great yogis, who go beyond the causal plane but who do not get an exception to leave this solar system. Because they fail to obtain the exemption for whatever reason, they remain in the unformed, untapped pure mental energy which was not parceled out to individual spirits. They remain free of involvements. Such yogins hardly interact in the cultural world which is so important to a human being. For those great yogis the mental darkness which human beings consistently experience, do not exist. They moved beyond the subtle negative influences of material nature.

Verse 45

स्थूलस्वरूपसूक्ष्मान्वयार्थवत्त्वसंयमाद्भूतजयः
sthūla svarūpa sūkṣma anvaya arthavatva
saṁyamāt bhūtajayaḥ

sthūla – gross form; svarūpa – real nature; sūkṣma – subtle; anvaya – following, connection, distribution; arthavatava – purpose, value; saṁyamāt – from the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy; bhūta – states of matter; jayaḥ – conquest.

By the complete restraint of the mento-emotional energy,
 while linking the attention to the gross forms, real nature,
 subtle distribution and value of states of matter,
 a yogi gets conquest over them.

Commentary:

Some yogins are diverted from their progression by too much research into the material nature. However, for them that diversity is necessary, until they reach a stage of greater resistance. The main asset of a yogi is to keep in touch with more advanced yogins so that even if the student yogin becomes fascinated or stalled somewhere in the practice, his advanced teachers can guide him away from degradation.

Verse 46

ततोऽणिमादिप्रादु-र्विः कायसम्पत्तद्धर्मानि-घातश्च tataḥ aṇimādi prādurbhāvaḥ kāyasam̐pat
taddharma anabhighātaḥ ca

tataḥ – thence, from that; aṇandi = aṇima – minuteness + ādi – and the related mystic skills; prādurbhāvaḥ – coming into existence, manifesting; kāya – subtle body; sam̐pat – wealth, prosperity, perfection; tad – tat = of that; dharma – attributes, functions; anabhighātaḥ – non-obstruction; ca – and.

From minuteness and other related mystic skills
 come the perfection of the subtle body
 and the non-obstructions of its functions.

Commentary:

When the yogi develops the mystic skills, he finds that the subtle body is perfected to such a degree that the nadis, subtle tubes within it carry a subtle fluid which is as crystal clear as pure water. From certain dimensions this appears to be liquid light traveling through the subtle body of the yogi. Some of this purity filters into the gross body and the yogi is said to perform miracles.

The obstructions a common man experiences, and those a neophyte yogi are fascinated with, are removed from the perfected yogin, because his subtle form is completely purified. The way of operation of the subtle body is obstructed by impurities which arise by attachments to the material energy. When a yogi completes this pratyāhār, fifth stage of yoga and when he ceases interactions with the citta mento-emotional energy, thus resting his buddhi organ from involvements and calculations regarding cultural activities, then he reaches the required purity.

Verse 47

रूपलावण्यबलवज्रसंहननत्वानि कायसम्पत्
rūpa lāvaṇya bala vajra sam̐hananatvāni kāyasam̐pat

rūpa – beautiful form; lāvaṇya – charm; bala – mystic force; vajra – diamond-like, infallible; sam̐hananatvāni – definiteness, hardness; kāya – subtle body; sam̐pat – perfection.

Beautiful form, charm, mystic force, diamond-like definition
 come from the perfection of the subtle body.

Commentary:

Most commentators give kāya as the physical body. However, in advanced yoga practice, kāya is the subtle body, the temporary but long lasting body which the yogin must perfect before he can attain liberation.

When the subtle body is upgraded by the practice of kuṇḍalini yoga, it attains beauty of form, mystic force and diamond-like definition. It attains clarity in it. Its colors become free from cloudiness and vagueness. It moves into the higher pranic force. It is experienced as a sattva guna body, a form of the mode of pure goodness.

Verse 48

ग्रहणस्वरूपास्मितान्वयार्थवत्त्वसंयमादिन्द्रियजयः
grahaṇa svarūpa asmitā anvaya arthavattva
saṁyamāt indriyajayaḥ

grahaṇa – sensual grasping; svarūpa – own form; asmitā – identification; anvaya – connection, association; arthavattva – value, worth; saṁyamāt – from the continuous effortless linkage of the attention; indriyajayaḥ – the mastery of the sensual energy by psychological control.

From the continuous effortless linkage of the attention
to sensual grasping, to the form of the sensual energy,
to its identifying powers, to its connection instinct
and to its actual worth,
a yogi acquires conquest over his relationship with it.

Commentary:

It is important to understand and to accept for oneself, that these achievements occur after prolonged practice. Those who feel they can achieve these overnight will definitely be frustrated. Yoga practice matures and remains firm only after long practice, and not just for one life but through a succession of lives, until the practice becomes an instinct.

A yogin must study his own sensual energy. He must also take hints from the way others use their sensual powers. It takes time to accomplish this. The sensual energy is subtle and moves at a rapid rate to execute its functions. It is mostly involuntary, which means that it operates on its own. This makes it difficult to track. However, after long practice, a yogin gets a foothold in these achievements described by Śrī Patañjali. One must study how the sensual energy appropriates or grasps subtle phenomena. This is indicated by the term anvaya. One must study how the energy connects with and associates with various types of subtle and gross objects. One must know the form of the sensual energy, its svarūpa. This is its form when it does not assume the identity of other objects. One should understand its nature for identification as well as its worth to the self. When all this is achieved, then the yogi gains mastery over his relationship to that sensual force.

Verse 49

ततो मनोजवित्वं विकरण-त्वः प्रधानजयश्च

tataḥ manojavitvaṁ vikaraṇabhāvaḥ pradhānajayaḥ ca

tataḥ – subsequently; manojavitvaṁ = manah – mind + javitvaṁ – swiftness, rapidity; vikaraṇabhāvaḥ = vi – parting away from, dispersing + karana – creating, making + bhāvaḥ – mento-emotional energy, feeling; pradhānaḥ – subtle matter; jayaḥ – conquest; ca – and.

Subsequently, there is conquest over the influence of subtle matter and over the parting away or dispersion
of the mento-emotional energy,
with the required swiftness of mind.

Commentary:

These aspects are on the mystic plane. This is attained after long practice at dhāraṇā. At first a yogi practices dhāraṇā, feeling that he mastered the pratyāhār sensual restraint. Thereafter he discovers that he only mastered particular phases of such restraint. Under direction of higher yogis, he goes back to his restraint practice. Then he again returns to dhāraṇā. This occurs frequently, until at last his perception of the subtle realities develop fully. What was subtle becomes gross; what was gross fades away completely. He purifies himself even further and grasps more higher reality which used to affect him in lower stages.

Verse 50

सत्त्वपुरुषान्यतारख्यातिमात्रस्य सर्व-वाधिष्ठातृत्वं सर्वज्ञातृत्वं च

sattva puruṣa anyatā khyātimātrasya

sarvabhāva adhiṣṭhātṛtvam sarvajñātṛtvam ca

sattva – clarifying perception of material nature; puruṣa – the spiritual personality; anyatā – other than distinct from; khyātimātrasya = khyāti – the discriminating faculty of the intellect + mātrasya – only; sarva – all; bhāva – states of feelings and perceptions; adhiṣṭhātṛtvam – authority, complete disaffection; sarvajñātṛtvam = sarva – all + jñātṛtvam – knowledge, intuition; ca – and.

Only when there is distinct discrimination
between the clarifying perception of material nature
and the spiritual personality,
does the yogi attain complete disaffection
and all-applicative intuition.

Commentary:

Khyati means the well-developed truth-yielding discrimination of the buddhi organ. But this is attained after long practice only. When this is developed, then the yogi sees clearly at all times the distinction between his spiritual person and the clarifying influences of material nature, influences from which he took assistance all along.

In advanced yoga, or kriyā yoga, one has to maintain the distinction between oneself and the perceiving instruments of the subtle body, even through initially one must take help from those truth-yielding perceptions. Adhiṣṭhātṛtvaṁ means complete or full disaffection from the subtle influence of material nature, even from the clarifying powers which are so helpful.

Verse 51

तद्वैराग्यादपि दोषबीजक्षये कैवल्यम्

tadvairāgyāt api doṣabījakṣaye kaivalyam

tadvairāgyāt = tad (tat) – that + vairāgyāt – from a lack of interest; api – also, even; doṣabījakṣaye = doṣa – fault, defect + bīja – seed, origin, source + kṣaye – on elimination; kaivalyam – the absolute isolation of the self from what is lower than itself, isolation of the self from the lower psyche of itself.

By a lack of interest, even to that (discrimination between the clarifying mundane energy
and the self) when the cause of that defect is eliminated,
the absolute isolation of the self from the lower psyche of itself,
is achieved.

Commentary:

Kaivalyam, which is a popular word in yoga and meditation circles, is greatly mistranslated and misinterpreted. Its meaning is not that the yogi would become one with God. For Patañjali, the master of yoga, never says that in these verses. Kaivalya is the isolation of the self from its lower psyche, such that the subtle mundane instruments of the psyche are separated from the self or atma. The atma becomes freed from its reliance to those useful and domineering subtle tools.

Previously Śrī Patañjali described kaivalyam in this way :

tad abhāvāt saṁyogā abhāvaḥ
hānaṁ taddr̥ṣeḥ kaivalyam

"The elimination of the conjunction which results from the elimination of that spiritual ignorance is the withdrawal that is the total separation of the perceiver from the mundane psychology." (Yoga Sūtra 2.25)

It is amazing how so many translators, following the one-ness craze completely distorted Śrī Patañjali by giving so many misleading and totally out-of-context meanings for the term kaivalyam. Vaman Shivram Apte in his practical Sanskrit-English dictionary gives the following plain meaning for these terms; perfect isolation, soleness, exclusiveness, individuality, detachment of the soul from matter, identification with the Supreme Spirit, final emancipation or beatitude.

Verse 52

स्थान्युपनिमन्त्रणे सङ्गस्मयाकरणं पुनरनिष्टप्रसङ्गात्
sthānyupanimantrāṇe saṅgasmayākaraṇam
punaraniṣṭa prasāṅgāt

sthāni – person from the place a yogi would then attain if his material body died; upanimantrāṇe – on being invited; saṅga – association; smaya – fascination, wonderment; akaraṇam – non-responsiveness; punaḥ – again; aniṣṭa – unwanted features of existence; prasāṅgāt – due to association, due to endearing friendliness.

On being invited by a person from the place one would attain if his body died, a yogi should be non-responsive, not desiring their association and not being fascinated,
 otherwise that would cause unwanted features of existence
 to arise again.

Commentary:

A perfect example of a person who implemented this advice of Śrī Patañjali, long before Patañjali took his material body to write the yoga sūtras, is Mudgala, who in the Mahabharata rejected proposals for transference to the Swarga angelic world. Mudgala had reached a stage of progression where he was eligible to live in a special palace of the lord of the angelic world. He was visited by Matali the lord's charioteer, but when questioned by Mudgala, Matali admitted that there were defects in the angelic world, even for great yogins who would go there. They would again (punaḥ) have to revert back to this world after sometime of enjoying paradisiacal enjoyments. Thus Mudgala said that he did not want to go to such a place but would continue his austerities to go somewhere which was devoid of all unwanted features of existence (aniṣṭa).

For others, who are not as strong and determined as Mudgala, it is easier said than done. They may not avoid the temptation of the angelic world. By developing endearing friendless (prasāṅgāt), they will succumb to angelic association and the fascinations of such a world. Just as governments of the developed countries skim off the intelligent people from the lesser-developed lands, so the angelic people attract the higher minds of the earthly planets.

Verse 53

क्षणतत्क्रमयोः संयमाद्विवेकजं ज्ञानम्
kṣaṇa tatkramayoh saṁyamāt vivekajam jñānam

kṣaṇa – moment; tat – that; kramayoḥ – on the sequence; saṁyamāt – due to the continuous effortless linkage of the attention; vivekajam – the distinction caused by subtle discrimination; jñānam – knowledge.

By the continuous effortless linkage of the attention
 to the moment and to the sequence of the moments,
 the yogi has knowledge caused by the subtle discrimination.

Commentary:

Every word in these texts must be understood within the context of Patañjali and not just for our own fancy according to our stage of development or agenda of spiritual mission. To understand Patañjali and to get the most benefit from his sūtras, we have to stay with his meanings, and then try to see where we have progressed to and where we should advance onwards.

When a yogi can observe subtle mystic moments and see how they flow on one to another, he develops a very subtle insight which gives definite knowledge of things. Viveka means very subtle insight and jam means what is caused or produced from the super knowledge of that yogi.

Verse 54

जातिलक्षणदेशैरन्यतानवच्छेदात्तुल्ययोस्ततः प्रतिपत्तिः
jāti lakṣaṇa deśaiḥ anyatā anavacchedāt
tulyayoḥ tataḥ pratipattiḥ

jāti – type genius, genus, general category; lakṣaṇa – individual characteristics; deśaiḥ – by what location; anyatā – otherwise, in a different manner; anavacchedāt – due to or resulting from lack of definition; tulyayoḥ – of two similar types; tataḥ – hence, subsequently; pratipattiḥ – perception.

Subsequently, the yogi has perception of two similar realities
 which otherwise could not be sorted due to a lack of definition in terms of their general category, individual characteristic and location.

Commentary:

Persistence in higher yoga brings on more definition. Things which before, seemed to be one or seem to be merged, appear clearly by their category, individual characteristics and locations. This begins by his sorting out his buddhi intellect organ, its various parts, as well as the sense of identity. A yogi thus develops mystic clarity.

Verse 55

तारकं सर्वविषयं सर्वथाविषयमक्रमं चेति विवेकजं ज्ञानम्
tāraṇam sarvaviṣayaṁ sarvathāviṣayaṁ
akramaṁ ca iti vivekaḥ jñānam

tāraṇam – crossing over transcending; sarva – all; viṣayaṁ – subtle and gross mundane objects; sarvathā – in all ways; viṣayaṁ – subtle and gross mundane object; akramaṁ – without sequential perceptions; ca – and; iti – thus, subsequently; vivekaḥ – the distinction caused by subtle discrimination; jñānam – knowledge.

The distinction caused by subtle discrimination is the crossing over or transcending of all subtle and gross mundane objects
in all ways they are presented,
without the yogi taking recourse
to any other sequential perceptions of mind reliance.

Commentary:

Śrī Patañjali highlights the culmination of yoga, so that as a yogi we can gage ourselves to know where we are on the course of crossing over the mundane reality which keeps us so occupied when we try to transcend it.

Verse 56

सत्त्वपुरुषयोः शुद्धिसाम्ये कैवल्यमिति

sattva puruṣayoḥ śuddhi sām्यe kaivalyam iti

sattva – intelligence energy of material nature; puruṣayoḥ – of the spirit;
śuddhi – purity; sām्यe – on being equal; kaivalyam – total separation from the mundane psychology; iti – thus.

When there is equal purity between the intelligence energy of material nature and the spirit, then there is total separation
from the mundane psychology.

Commentary:

Readers should check verses 2:25 and 3:36 to understand Śrī Patañjali's use of the terms sattva, puruṣayoḥ and kaivalyam. Obviously the key term in this verse is sattva. What is sattva? It is clear however that for the aspiring yogi, he must use sattva to become self-realized. This being established, all questions as to why he is to depend on nature are irrelevant. It is not why he has to depend, but rather how he can protect himself or cause himself to be situated in alliance with the material nature in its primal purity (śuddhi-sām्यe). What will happen to him thereafter? Is there something higher? Where will he go after that? What will be his status? Is there a world to which he will escape if he attains that? Will that world have the same purified sattva-energy (intelligence energy of material nature)? Is there any place or world where he could encounter only energy like his spirit (puruṣah). These are the questions to be considered by the yogin.

Chapter 4

Kaivalya Pāda:

Segregation Accomplished

Verse 1

जन्मौषधिमन्त्रतपःसमाधिजाः सिद्धयः

janma auṣadhi mantra tapaḥ samādhijāḥ siddhayaḥ

janma – birth, particular species; auṣadhi – drugs; mantra – special sound; tapaḥ – physical bodily austerities in Haṭha Yoga; samādhī – continuous effortless linkage of the attention to a higher concentration force, object or person; jāḥ – what is produced from; siddhayaḥ – mystic skills.

The mystic skills are produced
through taking birth in particular species,
or by taking drugs, or by reciting special sounds,
or by physical bodily austerities or
by the continuous effortless linkage of the attention
to a higher concentration force, object or person.

Commentary:

The mystic skills are inherent in the subtle body of each creature but the manifestation of these depends on particular circumstances. Taking birth in a particular species either as an animal, angel, or human being, can cause one to express unusual powers. Taking narcotic drugs or stimulants may cause shifts in pranic force in the subtle body. This would activate some paranormal powers. Repeating special sounds or having these recited on one's behalf might affect the pranic arrangement in one's subtle body, resulting in paranormal powers. And of course yoga austerities in Haṭha Yoga would definitely cause the development of psychic powers. Samādhī, which is listed last by Śrī Patañjali, is definitely yielding of paranormal perceptions.

Verse 2

जात्यन्तरपरिणामः प्रकृत्यापूरात्

jātyantara pariṇāmaḥ prakṛtyāpūrāt

jātyantara = jāti – category + antara – other, another; pariṇāmaḥ – transformation; prakṛiti – subtle material nature; āpūrāt – due to filling up or saturation.

The transformation from one category to another
is by the saturation of the subtle material nature.

Commentary:

Modern authorities like Timothy Leary and Aldous Huxley, preferred the use of drugs for the development of higher perception. But Śrī Gorakshanath wanted us to use the Haṭha Yoga austerities. Śrī Babaji Mahasaya recommended the Samādhi continuous effortless linkage of the attention to a higher concentration force, object or person. However modern spiritual masters from India usually hawk the mantra special sounds as the means of perfection. And some psychics say that a person should be gifted from birth with mystic abilities.

When a living entity develops a higher quality and when that expression becomes saturated in his nature, he is automatically transferred into a higher species of life, either as an elevated human being, an angelic personality or a divine being.

Śrī Babaji Mahasaya gave me a notation for verse one:

“Each of the methods for developing or manifesting the mystic skills are listed in order of the particular efforts made by the yogi. The first is janma or birth opportunity. That is based on efforts in the past lives. Thus in the current life, no effort is required. Some might take the janma or appearance in higher realms like in siddhaloka. There, taking a siddha yoga body, one experiences the result of his previous austerities. Others take an earthly body again and by the force of their past penance, experience mystic skills even in another gross body.”

....Auśadhi means herbs, drugs or chemical means of adjusting the gross and subtle body. This used to be a method in the Vedic period. This is why one might read about the soma plant. This does not require much endeavor, only the acquirement of the particular plant species. By ingesting that plant in its concentrated form, pranic energy in one’s subtle body is affected and certain abilities of the subtle body become manifested. Herbs were used by shamans, the religious leaders of primitive people.

The herbal method is a risky one, since the dosage may be wrong. It might be too high or too low, too concentrated or too diluted. It might kill or disable the body.

Mantra, special sounds is the general method preferred by most human beings. This operates the confidence energy of the person, but he may or may not succeed in experiencing something about the subtle body. This is an easy method requiring only the working of the vocal chords or silent mental sounding. This method remained popular for thousands of years due to human tendency for relying on hope for calling on superior authority for assistance.

Tapah means the Haṭha Yoga austerities which purify both the gross and subtle bodies. This includes kuṇḍalini yoga for displacing bad subtle energy. This is the classic method for attaining purity of the intelligence energy of material nature; an energy mentioned in verse 56 of the last chapter:

sattva puruṣayoḥ śuddhi sām̐ye kaivalyam iti

When there is equal purity between the intelligence energy of material nature and the spirit, then there is total separation from the mundane psychology. (Yoga Sūtra 3.56)

If that energy is not purified, then the progress will be erratic causing the yogi to fall to a lower level sooner or later. The Haṭha Yoga austerities are the definite way for such purity. Study what Krishna said in the chapter 6 verse 12 of His Bhagavad-gītā discourse.

The last method which is the best is samādhi, the continuous effortless linkage of the attention to a higher reality. This is the choice method. However this is merely an advancement of the tapah or Haṭha Yoga austerity method. It does not stand alone. One cannot attain Samādhi without doing the Haṭha Yoga austerities proficiently.

In summary, janma means efforts in a past life. Auśadhi means eating, drinking, smelling or otherwise ingesting chemicals which affects the subtle body. Mantra means using one's faith or confident energy. Tapah means physical austerities which eradicate impurities in the subtle form. Samādhi means using one's psychic force to reach higher realities.

Verse 3

निमित्तमप्रयोजकं प्रकृतीनां वरणेदस्तु ततः क्षेत्रिकवत्
nimittam aprayojakam prakṛtīnām
varaṇabhedah tu tataḥ kṣetrikavat

nimittam – cause, motive, apparent cause; aprayojakam – not used, not employed, not causing; prakṛtīnām – of the subtle material energy; varaṇa – impediments, obstacles; bhedaḥ – splitting, removing, disintegrating; tu – but, except; tataḥ – hence; kṣetrikavat – like a farmer.

The motivating force of the subtle material energy
is not used except for the disintegration of impediments,
hence it is compared to a farmer.

Commentary:

Even though a yogin is assisted by material nature, which exhibits powerful motivating forces from time to time, still his spiritual progress is not really caused by nature. It is just that sometimes nature removes its own forces which acted as impediments to the efforts of the yogi. Even though a farmer does so many things to facilitate the growing of seeds, still that does not mean that any of his actions are the real causes of plant growth. The development from seeds to plant has more to do with the potential within the seed that it does with the farmer's efforts. Similarly material nature does not cause a yogi's development, even though nature may facilitate that progression.

Verse 4

निर्माणचित्तान्यस्मितामात्रात्
nirmāṇacittāni asmitāmātrāt

nirmāṇa – producing, creating, measuring, fabricating; cittāni – regions within the mento-emotional energy; asmitā – sense of identity which is developed in relation to material nature; mātrāt – from that only.

The formation of regions within the mento-emotional energy,
 arises only from the sense of identity
 which is developed in relation to material nature.

Commentary:

Even though the spirit's attention is one only, still because of the mento-emotional energy, there appears to be various regions within the mind and feelings of a personality. A yogi by mystic research in kriyā yoga, within his psyche, traces all these mental regions and emotional moods to the sense of identity which he experiences anytime his attention goes in the direction of the gross or subtle material nature. Thus eventually he develops a disgust (nirvedaḥ), and becomes very serious about spiritual progression. He no longer wants to be entertained by the various imaginings within the mind.

Verse 5

प्रवृत्ति-दे प्रयोजकं चित्तमेकमनेकेषाम्
pravṛtti bhede prayojakam cittam ekam anekeṣām

pravṛtti – frantic activity, dispersal of energy; bhede – in the difference; prayojakam – very, much used or employed; cittam – the mento-emotional energy; ekam – one; anekeṣām – of what is numberless.

The one mento-emotional energy is that which is very much used
 in numberless different dispersals of energy.

Commentary:

With this in mind, a yogi takes steps to stop the innumerable impulsive operations of the mind.

Verse 6

तत्र ध्यानजमनाशयम्
tatra dhyānajam anāśayam

tatra – there, in that case; dhyānajam – produced by the effortless linkage of the attention to a higher reality; anāśayam – without harmful emotions.

In that case, only subtle activities which are produced from the effortless linkage of the attention to a higher reality are without harmful emotions.

Commentary:

Āśayam is the seat of feelings, the place in the mento-emotional energy from which is derived endearing but harmful emotions. This location is difficult to track since it is in a mystic domain. Until a yogi gets clarity of consciousness he cannot transcend his feelings. He is continually fooled by them. When he masters the effortless linkage of the mind to higher realities, then he gains objectively and can sort out the endearing but harmful feelings, even the memory which is a storehouse of these.

Verse 7

कर्माशुक्लाकृष्णं योगिनस्त्रिविधमितरेषाम्

karma aśukla akṛṣṇam yoginaḥ trividham itareṣām

karma – cultural activity; aśukla – not white, not rewarding; akṛṣṇam – not black, not penalizing; yoginaḥ – of the yogis; trividham – three-fold; itareṣām – for others.

The cultural activity of the yogis
is neither rewarding nor penalizing,
but others have three types of such action.

Commentary:

An advanced yogi, who has mastered the dhyāna effortless linkage of the mind to a higher reality, may perform cultural activities just as others do, but for him, these do not result in rewarding, penalizing nor fruitless results.

What then does the yogi gain from cultural activities? He gains absolutely nothing, because his detachment allows the reactions to fall back into material nature without a claimant.

Verse 8

ततस्तद्विपाकानुगुणानामेवाव्यक्तिर्वासनानाम्

tataḥ tadvipāka anuḡaṇānām

eva abhivyaktiḥ vāsanānām

tataḥ – subsequently; tad – that, those; vipāka – development, fruition; anuḡaṇānām – of the corresponding features; eva – only, alone; abhivyaktiḥ – manifestation; vāsanānām – of tendencies within the mento-emotional energy.

Subsequently from those cultural activities
there is development according to corresponding features only, bringing about the manifestation of the tendencies
within the mento-emotional energy.

Commentary:

Everything in the material creation works according to innate tendency, manifesting according to time and place. Sometimes it takes thousands of years before something can manifest or be given any type of satisfaction.

In terms of the time of the earth, modern civilization is very recent. Still we see that the majority of people feel comfortable within the modern world. This is due to latent desires, which are being fulfilled under the present circumstances.

Because a yogi has mystic insight, he understands how numberless different dispersals of energy arise in the mento-emotional force by its proximity to the spirit's sense of identity. Thus he withdraws that sense and deactivates the mundane consciousness, freeing himself from being a slave to desires which arise in the seat of feelings. Others however must comply with the urges

Verse 9

जातिदेशकालव्यवहितानामप्यानन्तर्यं स्मृतिसंस्कारयोरेकरूपत्वात्
jāti deśa kāla vyavahitānām api ānantaryam smṛti saṁskārayoḥ ekarūpatvāt

jāti – status; deśa – location; kāla – time; vyavahitānām – of what is placed apart or separated; api – even, also; ānantaryam – timeful sequence; smṛti – memory; saṁskārayoḥ – of the impressions formed of cultural activities; ekarūpatvāt – due to one form.

Even though circumstances are separated
 by status, location and time,
 still the impressions which form cultural activities
 and the resulting memories, are of one form
 and operate on a timeful sequence.

Commentary:

This has to do with why past lives affect the present one, even though the individual may or may not recall his past. A different status, a different place and a different time, though separated from a cultural activity of the past, is in fact timeful and in sequence according to how it was laid into the memory within the mento-emotional energy of the individual concerned. Something that makes sense subjectively may seem totally inappropriate to the conscious mind which takes into account only what it can grasp about the present. Irrespective of the present circumstances, the memory and the urges from past lives, operate in timeful sequence.

Verse 10

तासामनादित्वं चाशिषो नित्यत्वात्
tāsām anādityam ca āśiṣaḥ nityatvāt

tāsām – those; anādityam – what is without beginning, primeval; ca – and; āśiṣaḥ – hope and desire energies; nityatvāt – what is eternal.

Those memories and impressions are primeval,
without a beginning.
The hope and desire energies are eternal as well.

Commentary:

When a yogi sees that the hope and desire energy is eternal, he makes a decision to let it be and to detach himself from the urges. He must, by all means, get himself separated from the mento-emotional force or remain a victim of it. The memories and the circumstance-forming impressions will be there for all eternity. A yogin has no choice but to extract his existence from the realm of it.

Verse 11

हेतुफलाश्रयालम्बनैः सङ्गृहीतत्वादेषाम-िवे तद-िवः
hetu phala āśraya ālambanaiḥ saṅgrhītatvāt
eṣām abhāve tad abhāvaḥ

hetu – cause; phala – effect; āśraya – storage place, causal plane, supportive base; ālambanaiḥ – by what supports or lifts; saṅgrhītatvāt – what holds together; eṣām – of those, these; abhāve – in what is not there; tad – them; abhāvaḥ – not existing.

They exist by what holds them together
in terms of cause and effect, supportive base and lifting influence.
Otherwise if their causes are not there,
they have no existence whatsoever.

Commentary:

For a yogi, his involvement is the supportive element, which makes the subtle material nature exist for him and engage him or use his consciousness. Thus if he detaches himself the supportive element being removed, material nature no longer affects him.

Verse 12

अतीतानागतं स्वरूपतोऽस्त्यध्वे-दाद्धर्माणाम्
atīta anāgataṁ svarūpataḥ
asti adhvabhedāt dharmāṇām

atīta – the past; anāgataṁ – the future; svarūpataḥ – true form; asti – there is, it exists; adhvabhedāt – due to different courses or events; dharmāṇām – of the characteristics.

There is a true form of the past and future,
which is denoted by the different courses of their characteristics.

Commentary:

Śrī Patañjali establishes that the past and future are real existences, having contents, which cause the present. Time is not an illusion. It is real in that sense. Because of definite characteristics, there is a certain course which time takes from the past into the present and into the yet-emerging future. The inherent characteristics (dharmāṇām) from the past mold the future. The changes which come about in the present are stockpiled by time as the basis for slight or major differences which are to come.

Verse 13

ते व्यक्तसूक्ष्मा गुणात्मानः

te vyakta sūkṣmāḥ guṇātmānaḥ

te – they; vyakta – gross; sūkṣmāḥ – subtle; guṇātmānaḥ = guṇā – subtle material nature + ātmānaḥ – of itself.

They are gross or subtle, all depending on their inherent nature.

Commentary:

The three phases of time, the past, present and future, are perpetual, having a relationship one with the other. They are reliant on their inherent energies which comprise the subtle and gross material nature. A limited being cannot permanently affect these, even though he may take part in their operations according to how he is positioned in time and place.

Verse 14

परिणामैकत्वाद्द्वस्तुतत्त्वम्

pariṇāma ekatvāt vastutattvam

pariṇāma – transformation, change; ekatvāt – singleness, uniqueness; vastu – object; tattvam – essence, actual composition.

The actual composition of an object
is based on the uniqueness of the transformation.

Commentary:

Each object, no matter how similar, has certain unique qualities which are based on the particular transformations which caused its production. The varieties in material nature are researched by a yogi. Underlying all this, he finds the manifesting force of time along with the inherent qualities of material nature, mixed in various ways.

Verse 15

वस्तुसाम्ये चित्त-दात्तयोर्वि-: पन्थाः

vastusāmye cittabhedāt tayoh vibhaktah panthāḥ

vastu – object; sāmye – in the same; citta – mento-emotional energy; bhedaṭ – from the difference; tayoh – of these two; vibhaktah – separated, divided; panthāḥ – ways of viewing, prejudices.

Because of a difference
in the mento-emotional energy of two persons,
separate prejudices manifest
in their viewing of the very same object.

Commentary:

Separate prejudices lie dormant in the mento-emotional energy of each living entity. When viewing the same object which has the same composition, persons react differently. These prejudices are sponsored in material nature by time which, with the power of the past, regulates the present and future.

Verse 16

न चैकचित्तत्रं वस्तु तदप्रमाणकं तदा किं स्यात्
na ca ekacitta tantraṁ ced vastu
tat apramāṇakaṁ tadā kiṁ syāt

na – not, nor; ca – and; eka – one; citta – mento-emotional perception; tantraṁ – dependent; ced = cet – if, otherwise; vastu – object; tat – that; apramāṇakaṁ – not being observed; tadā – then; kiṁ – what; syāt – would occur.

An object is not dependent
on one person's mento-emotional perception.
Otherwise, what would happen
if it were not being perceived by that person?

Commentary:

Śrī Patañjali refutes the idea that the world is dependent on a limited mind or on a group of such minds. Otherwise if that or those limited minders were to lose perception of an object, the item would no longer exist.

Verse 17

तदुपरागापेक्षित्वाच्चित्तस्य वस्तु ज्ञाताज्ञातम्
taduparāga apekṣitvāt cittasya vastu jñāta ajñātam

tad = tat – that; uparāga – color, mood; apekṣitvāt – from the expectation; cittasya – of the mento-emotional energy; vastu – object; jñāta – known; ajñātam – unknown.

An object is known or unknown,
all depending on the mood and expectation
of the particular mento-emotional energy of the person in reference to it.

Commentary:

The application or non-application of consciousness is what brings objects into purview.

Verse 18

सदा ज्ञाताश्चित्तवृत्तयस्तत्प्रभोः पुरुषस्यापरिणामित्वात्
sadā jñātāḥ cittavṛttayaḥ tatprabhoḥ
puruṣasya aparīṇāmitvāt

sadā – always; jñātāḥ – known; citta – mento-emotional energy; vṛttayaḥ – the operations; tat – that; prabhoḥ – of the governor; puruṣasya – of the spirit; aparīṇāmitvāt – due to changelessness.

The operations of the mento-emotional energy
 are always known to that governor
 because of the changelessness of that spirit.

Commentary:

Here an explanation is given, as to why the spirit appears to be affected by the operations of the mento-emotional energy of the psyche. It is due to the changelessness of the spirit, which serves as a background for the movements of consciousness.

Verse 19

न तत्स्वा-सं दृश्यत्वात्
na tat svābhāsaṁ dṛśyatvāt

na – not; tat – that; svābhāsaṁ – self-illuminative; dṛśyatvāt – for it is due to being something to be perceived.

That mento-emotional energy is not self-illuminative
 for it is rather only capable of being perceived.

Commentary:

The mento-emotional energy has for its nature the capability of being perceived but is not self-illuminative. This has to be studied objectively in meditation by the particular yogin.

Verse 20

एकसमये चो-यानवधारणम्
ekasamaye ca ubhaya anavadhāraṇam

ekasamaye – at the same time; ca – and; ubhaya – both; anavadhāraṇam – of what cannot focus.

It cannot execute the focus of both at the same time.

Commentary:

This means that the mento-emotional energy cannot both focus on itself and the seer at the same time. This has to be verified in deep meditation.

चित्तान्तरदृश्ये बुद्धिबुद्धेरतिप्रसङ्गः स्मृतिसङ्करश्च cittāntaradrśye buddhibuddheḥ
atiprasaṅgaḥ smṛtisaṅkaraḥ ca

cittāntara – drśye = citta – mento-emotional energy + antara – another person + drśye – in the perception of; buddhi-buddher = buddhi – the intellect organ + buddheḥ – of the intellect organ; atiprasaṅgaḥ – absurd argument, unwarranted stretching of a rule or argument; smṛti – memory; saṅkaraḥ – confusion; ca – and.

In the perception of mento-emotional energy
by another such energy,
there would be an intellect
perceiving another intellect independently.
That would cause absurdity and confusion of memory.

Commentary:

Śrī Patañjali states here that it is absurd to think that without a spirit one's mind could perceive another mind. It would be absurd. Unless there is a spirit behind a mind, there would be no perception in that energy.

Verse 22

चित्तेरप्रतिसङ्क्रमायास्तदाकारापत्तौ स्वबुद्धिसंवेदनम्
citeḥ apratisaṅkramāyāḥ tadākārāpattau svabuddhisamvedanam

citeḥ – of the spirit; apratisaṅkramāyāḥ – not moving from one position to another; tad – tat – that; ākāra – form, aspect; āpattau – turning into, changing, assuming; sva – itself, oneself; buddhi – intellect organ; samvedanam – perception.

The perception of its own intellect occurs
when it assumes that form in which there is no movement from one operation to another.

Commentary:

Until the mind is still and the mento-emotional energy ceases to fluctuate, one cannot perceive one's intellect objectively. Otherwise, one feels as though one's self and one's intellect were part of an homogeneous consciousness.

Verse 23

द्रष्टृद्रश्योपरक्तं चित्तं सर्वार्थम्
draṣṭṛ drśya uparaktam cittam sarvārtham

draṣṭṛ – the perceiver; drśya – the perceived; uparaktam – prejudiced; cittam – mento-emotional energy; sarvārtham – what is all evaluating.

The mento-emotional energy which is prejudiced by the perceiver and the perceived, is all evaluating.

Commentary:

When the mento-emotional force absorbs energy from the spirit, as well as from an object, it seems to be all-evaluating. Thus the spirit becomes absorbed by its operations of analysis, conclusion and action.

Verse 24

तदसङ्ख्येयवासना-श्चित्रमपि परार्थं संहत्यकारित्वात्
tat asaṅkhyeya vāsanābhiḥ citram
api parārthaṁ saṁhatyakāritvāt

tat – that; asaṅkhyeya – innumerable; vāsanābhiḥ – subtle impressions; citram – diversified; api – even, although; parārthaṁ – for another’s sake; saṁhatya – because of it; kāritvāt – activity, force.

Although the mento-emotional energy is diverse
 by innumerable subtle impressions,
 it acts for the sake of another power
 because of its proximity to that other force.

Commentary:

Everything done by the mento-emotional energy, even those subtle actions which seem to imperil the spirit are done for the sake of the spirit itself, even though the spirit may not deliberately motivate the psyche.

The proximity (saṁhatya) of the spirit is itself, the cause of the innumerable moods and urges.

Verse 25

विशेषदर्शिन आत्म-त्व-त्वनाविनिवृत्तिः
viśeṣadarśinaḥ ātmabhāva bhāvanānivṛttiḥ

viśeṣa – distinction, specific perception; darśina – of the one who sees; ātma – the spirit; bhāva – feeling; bhāvanā – absorption in feelings; nivṛttiḥ – total stopping of the operations of the mento-emotional energy.

There is total stopping
 of the operations of mento-emotional energy
 for the person who perceives the distinction
 between feelings and the spirit itself.

Commentary:

This is repeated again and again in different verses. A yogin has to sort out between his spirit and his mento-emotional energy. He has to transcend the proximity of the two.

Verse 26

तदा विवेकनिम्नङ्कैवल्यप्राग्-रञ्चित्तम्

tadā hi vivekanimnam kaivalya prāgbhāram cittam

tadā – then; hi – indeed; viveka – discrimination; nimnam – leaning towards, inclined to; kaivalya – total separation from the mundane psychology; prāg – towards; bhāram – gravitating; cittam – mento-emotional force.

Then, indeed,

the mento-emotional force is inclined towards discrimination
and gravitates towards the total separation
from the mundane psychology.

Commentary:

The yogi has to achieve this. It does not come by wishful thinking. Only through higher yoga can this be achieved consistently.

Verse 27

तच्छिद्रेषु प्रत्ययान्तराणि संस्कारेभ्यः

tat cchidreṣu pratyayāntarāṇi saṁskārebhyaḥ

tat – that; chidreṣu – in the relaxation of the focus; pratyayaḥ – conviction or belief as mind content, inlaid impression in the mento-emotional energy; antarāṇi – in between, interval; saṁskārebhyaḥ – from the subtle impressions.

Besides that, in the relaxation of the focus,
other mind contents arise in the intervals.
These are based on subtle impressions.

Commentary:

The yogi has to work through this without being disappointed or frustrated. He should not give up the higher yoga practice. He faces failures at every step but he must forge ahead. He must work for emancipation from his helpless alliance with the mento-emotional force. His main energy is the mind's content, which is deeply inlaid, in the mento-emotional force as urge-producing impressions from the past. Some of these surface as memory and others surface as pictures, sound formation, and then are expanded into meaningful or meaningless picturizations and sounds which distract the yogi by keeping him occupied in the picture-sound show of the mind. A yogi has to fight this to gain self-conquest.

Verse 28

हानमेषां क्लेशवदुक्तम्

hānam eṣām kleśavat uktam

hānam – killing off, complete removal; eṣām – of these; kleśavad = kleśavat – like the mento-emotional afflictions; uktam – authoritatively said.

As authoritatively stated, the complete removal of these is like the elimination of the mento-emotional afflictions.

Commentary:

It is a personal struggle. The God is there but each yogi has to master this himself. As a beginning yogi becomes preoccupied removing all causes for the mental and emotional troubles, so the advanced yogi has to remove the mind content which poses a botheration and which the mind clings to automatically when it relaxed from the proper focus.

Great yogis went on before. They can help us with this inner struggle. They encourage us to practice. They have shown the way by their personal lives on earth, or by their current austerities in higher dimensions. Besides that, each yogi has to endure this inner conflict alone.

Verse 29

प्रसङ्ख्यानेऽप्यकुसीदस्य सर्वथा विवेकख्यातेर्धर्ममेघस्समाधिः

prasamkhyāne api akusīdasya sarvathā

vivekakhyāteḥ dharmameghaḥ samādhiḥ

prasamkhyāna – in the abstract meditation; api – even so; akusīdasya – of one who has no interest or sees no gain in material nature; sarvathā – in all ways; vivekakhyāteḥ – with super discrimination; dharmameghaḥ = dharma – nature’s way of acting for beneficial results + meghaḥ – mento-emotional clouds of energy; samādhi – continuous effortless linkage of the attention to higher reality.

For one who sees no gains in material nature,
even while perceiving it in abstract meditation,
he has the super discrimination.

He attained the continuous effortless linkage of the attention to higher reality which is described
as knowing the mento-emotional clouds of energy
which compel a person to perform
according to nature’s way of acting for beneficial results.

Commentary:

Dharmameghaḥ is usually translated as cloud (meghaḥ) of virtue (dharma). However we took hints from I. K. Taimni, where he stated that dharmameghaḥ samādhi, means the final samādhi in which the yogi shakes himself free from the world of Dharmas which obscure reality like a cloud.

He is perhaps, the first commentator who understood this particular verse of Śrī Patañjali. That is to be regretted. The key to the meaning of this verse lies in the terms akusīdasya. This is because kusida means a moneylender, or any money lent at a rate exceeding 5%. When "a" is added as a prefix, it means not having any desire to gain anything.

Śrīla Yogeshwarananda asked us to develop paravairāgya, which is complete disinterest in this world. Śrī Patañjali was specific in stating that one has to lose interest even in the very subtle aspect of material nature, aspects which we encounter in deep meditation on other levels of this reality. This is indicated by the term prasamkhyāne which means that one may see something of value in deep meditation, in which case one cannot develop the paravairāgya and one will not lose interest in the Dharmas or ways of righteous living which are legated by material nature for different beings on different gross and subtle levels.

If we want to benefit in any way (sarvathā) from material nature, on any level, we will be attracted proportionally, and we will fall under the cloud (megha) of values (dharmas) which dictate how we should act to gain in the particular realm of our interest. This will keep us in the material world.

All yogis are forewarned by Śrīla Yogeshwaranada, who warned this writer in the same way, that the main obstacle is the desire for fame as a spiritual master. From that comes the idea that one should develop a territory where one can have his own kingdom with loyal disciples. Material nature will then show one a layout of values which one must adapt for success as a territorial spiritual master or god. This will cause a fall down.

Even though Śrīla Yogeshwarananda had left behind many books, as well as ashrams and spiritual missions, still when I see him come down from the causal level where he is completing more austerities and researched into our complication, I never see him with disciples. He is not interested in any of the rules and regulations or dharmas which are laid out for spiritual masters who want to be worshipped as exalted saviors or gurus.

Everything in the material world, in the subtle, supersubtle or gross parts of it, is dangerous. We should know this. There were many people who came to me to be disciples and who suggested that they become elevated so that they can help others. All of them are conceited.

Verse 30

ततः क्लेशकर्मनिवृत्तिः

tataḥ kleśa karma nivṛttiḥ

tataḥ – subsequently; kleśa – afflictions; karma – cultural activities; nivṛttiḥ – stoppage of the operation of the mento-emotional energy.

Subsequently there is stoppage of the operation
of the mento-emotional energy
in terms of generation of cultural activities
and their resulting afflictions.

Commentary:

The meaning of dharma-meghaḥ in the preceding verse is now explained by the subsequently result of the stoppage of generation of cultural activities which are themselves dictated by various types of dharma righteous lifestyle for particular results in the gross or subtle mundane world. None of these karmas or cultural activities are completely free from afflictions. Thus when the yogi reaches the causal level and sees the various clouds of energy (meghaḥ) in which the dharmas or laws for righteous life, are created and maintained, he gets an ease in his higher yoga practice. He smiles for he will never again fall into the trap of making spiritual missions to help or to save others. Such things are a complete farce, and are very disgusting to one who has seen the reality as it is.

An example of a yogin who left aside such things is Swami Satyananda of Bihar, who though he complete all duties given to him by his spiritual master, the great Swami Shivananda, did not himself continue to be a guru in this world, but carefully and efficiently left all that aside to proceed honestly with his advancement. Such a high class person is neither selfish nor conceited. If anything, he is realistic.

Verse 31

तदा सर्वावरणमलापेतस्य ज्ञानस्यानन्त्याज्ज्ञेयमल्पम्
tadā sarva āvaraṇa malāpetasya
jñānasya ānanyāt jñeyam alpam

tadā – then; sarva – all; āvaraṇa – mental darkness; mala – impurities; āpetasya – of what is removed; jñānasya – of knowledge; ānanyāt – due to being unlimited; jñeyam – what is known; alpam – small trivial.

Then, because of the removal of all mental darkness and psychological impurities,

that which can be known through the mento-emotional energy, seems trivial in comparison to the unlimited knowledge available when separated from it.

Commentary:

For this world, the mento-emotion energy is the linking agent. It is the means of prying into various things. It shows us how to be interested in and how to invest in this world for a benefit. But once we become freed from that energy, and we experience the self by itself, we no longer consider this world as being essential.

Verse 32

ततः कृतार्थानां परिणामक्रमसमाप्तिगुणानाम्
tataḥ kṛtārthānām pariṇāmakrama samāptir guṇānām

tataḥ – thus; kṛtārthānām – having done their purpose; pariṇāma – changes, alteration; krama – a step, succession, progression, process of development; samāptir = samāptiḥ – end conclusions; guṇānām – of the influence of the subtle material nature.

Thus, the subtle material nature, having fulfilled its purpose,
its progressive alterations end.

Commentary:

This is only for the yogin who achieved isolation from his mento-emotional energies and their impulsive operations. For him, the natural power transfer from his spirit to the mento-emotional force ceases. For others it continues just as before.

Verse 33

क्षणप्रतियोगी परिणामापरान्तनिर्ग्राह्यः क्रमः

*kṣaṇa pratiyogī pariṇāma
aparānta nirgrāhyaḥ kramaḥ*

kṣaṇa – moment; pratiyogī – corresponding, being a counter-part; pariṇāma – change, alteration; aparānta – the end; nirgrāhyaḥ – clearly perceived; kramaḥ – process.

The process, of which moments are a counterpart,
and which causes the alterations,
comes to an end and is clearly perceived.

Commentary:

The advanced yogi alone achieves this. This is an individual accomplishment, where the yogi sees the moments, which in sequence make up time which is itself the changing mundane energy (gunanam). The yogi clearly perceives this from afar. What hypnotizes other and keeps them under its control subjectively and objectively, is looked upon by the yogin, just as the God would normally see it.

sa eṣaḥ pūrveṣām api guruḥ kālena anavacchedāt

He, this particular person, being unconditioned by time is the guru even of the ancient teachers, the authorities from before.
(Yoga Sūtra 1.26)

Some of what is natural for God, becomes natural for the yogin who made that much endeavor and who completed the course of higher yogi described by Śrī Patañjali Muni.

Verse 34

पुरुषार्थशून्यानां गुणानां प्रतिप्रसवः

*kāivalyaṃ svrūpapratiṣṭhā vā citiśaktirīti puruṣārtha śūnyānām guṇānām pratiprasavaḥ kaivalyaṃ
svarūpapraṭiṣṭhā vā citiśaktiḥ iti*

puruṣārtha – the aims of a human being; śūnyānām – devoid of; guṇānām – of the influences of material nature; pratiprasavaḥ – reabsorption, retrogression, neutralization; kaivalyaṃ – separation of the spirit from psychology; svarūpa – own form; praṭiṣṭhā – established; vā – thus, at last; citiśaktiḥ – the power of pure consciousness; iti – that is all.

Separation of the spirit
from the mento-emotional energy (kaivalyam)
occurs when there is neutrality
in respect to the influence of material nature,
when the yogi's psyche becomes devoid of the general aims of a human being.
Thus at last, the spirit is established in its own form
as the force empowering the mento-emotional energy.

Commentary:

This ends the description of higher yoga practice, given to us by Śrī Patañjali Muni, that authority for all times. Undoubtedly, Śrī Patañjali Mahamuni covered everything in the mystic practice of yoga. All glories unto him.

END

Glossary with Word-for-Word Meanings

A

abhāva – absence of awareness
 abhāvaḥ – disappearance, elimination, not existing abhāvāt – resulting from the elimination
 abhāve – in what is not there abhibhava – disappearance abhijātasya – of what is produced
 all around or transparent ābhimata – what is dearly desired abhiniveśaḥ – strong focus on mundane existence which is due to instinctive fear of death abhivyaktiḥ – manifestation ābhyantara – internal abhyāsa – effective yoga
 practice
 ādarśa – sight
 ādayaḥ – and related matters adhigamaḥ – accomplishment adhimātraḥ – substantial adhimātratvāt – from intense adhiṣṭhātrtvam – authority,
 complete disaffection adhvabhedāt – due to different courses or events
 adhyāsāt – resulting from the super-imposition adhyātma – relationship between the supreme soul and the limited one
 ādi – and the related mystic
 skills
 ādīni – and the same for other aspects
 ādiṣi – and similar aspects ādiṣu – and by related qualities adrṣṭa – not perceived, not realized

āgamāḥ – correct reference ahimsā – non-violence
 ajñāna – spiritual ignorance
 ajñātam – unknown
 akalpitā – not manufactured, not artificial, not formed ākāra – form, aspect akaraṇam – non-responsiveness
 ākāśa – atmosphere
 ākāśayoḥ – of the sky,
 atmosphere
 akliṣṭāḥ – non-troublesome akramaṁ – without sequential perceptions
 akṛṣṇam – not black, not penalizing
 ākṣepī – transcending akusīdasya – of one who has no interest or sees no gain
 in material nature alabdhabhūmikatva – not being able to maintain the progress made ālambanā – support, prop, means of conversion
 ālambanaiḥ – by what supports or lifts
 ālambanam – taking recourse ālasya – lack of energy
 aliṅga – without characteristics aliṅgāni – that which has no indication āloka – supernatural insight ālokaḥ – illuminating alpam – small trivial
 anabhighātaḥ – non-obstruction anādītvam – what is without beginning, primeval
 anāgata – future
 anāgatam – the future, what has not manifested

ānanda – introspective happiness
 ananta – endless, infinite ānantaryam – timeful sequence ānantyāt – due to being unlimited
 anāśayam – without harmful emotions
 anaṣṭam – not finished, still existing, effective anātmasu – in what is not the spirit
 anavacchedāt – due to or resulting from lack of definition, unconditioned
 anavacchinnāḥ – not restricted by, not adjusted by anavadhāraṇam – of what cannot focus anavasthitatvāni – unsteadiness
 in the progression
 anekeṣām – of what is numberless aṅga – limbs, part aṅgamejayatva – nervousness of the body
 aṅgāni – parts of a thing
 aṅima – minuteness
 aniṣṭa – unwanted features of existence
 anitya – not eternal, temporary aṅj – to smear with, to mix with aṅjanatā – assuming the nature of or characterization of āntaḥ – ending, extending to antar – internal, psychological,
 concerning the thinking and feeling organs
 aṅgam – part antara – another person, other antarāṅi – in between, interval antarāya – obstacle antardhānam – invisibility, non-perceptibility
 anu – following along, patterning after anubhūta – the experience

anugamāt – by accompaniment, occurring with anuguṇānām – of the corresponding features
 anukāraḥ – imitation, patterning, assuming
 anumāna – correct analysis anumāna – what is surmised or seasoned out
 anumoditāḥ – endorsed, approved
 anupātī – reach full retrogression, followed by
 ānuśāsanam – explanation
 anuśayi – connected to, devotedly attached to ānuśravika – what is conjectured on the basis of scripture valid anuṣṭhānāt – from consistent
 practice
 anuttamaḥ – supreme, the very best anvaya – following, connection, distribution, association
 anya – others
 anyatā – other than distinct from anyatā – otherwise, in a different manner
 anyatvam – otherness, difference
 anyatve – in difference
 aparāmrṣṭaḥ – unaffected aparānta – of the other end, of death entry into the hereafter, the end
 aparigraha – non-possessiveness aparīṇāmitvāt – due to changelessness
 āpattau – turning into, changing,
 assuming
 apavarga – liberation
 apekṣitvāt – from the expectation āpetasya – of what is removed api – also, even, although, but apramāṇakam – not being observed
 apratisamkramāyāḥ – not moving from one position to another aprayojakaṃ – not used, not employed, not causing apuṇya – demerits, vice āpūrāt – due to filling up or saturation

 ariṣṭebhyo – from portents
 artha – purpose, objective, meaning
 ārtham – for the sake of, value or purpose
 arthaś – for the value of purpose arthavāt – because of an object arthavatava – purpose, value
 arthavatva – value, worth asaṃkīrṇayoḥ – of what is distinct or separate asaṃpramoṣaḥ – retention
 asaṃprayoge – in not contacting,
 on not contacting
 asaṃsargaḥ – non-association, lack of desire to associate āsana – body postures
 āsanān – bodily posture
 asaṅgaḥ – non contact asaṅkhyeya – innumerable āsannaḥ – whatever is very near,
 what will occur soon
 āśayaḥ – storage, reservoir
 āśayaḥ – by subconscious motivations
 āsevitaḥ – sustained practice, aggressive interest
 āśiṣaḥ – hope and desire energies
 asmitā – identification,
 misplaced identity,
 asmitā – sense of identity which is developed in relation to material nature asmitārūpa – I-ness self-
 consciousness
 āśraya – storage place, causal plane, supportive base āśryatvam – what serves as a support for something else aṣṭau – eight asteya – non-stealing

asti – there is, it exists aśuci – not clean, not pure aśuddhi – impurity
 aśukla – not white, not rewarding
 āsvāda – taste
 asya – of his, him
 atadrūpa – not this form
 atha – now
 atiprasaṅgaḥ – absurd argument, unwarranted stretching
 of a rule
 atīta – the past
 ātma – spirit
 ātmakaṃ – self, nature
 ātmānaḥ – of itself
 atyanta – excessively, extremely,
 very auśadhi – drugs
 āvaraṇam – covering, mental darkness
 anabhighātaḥ – no shrinking, no attacking, no botheration avasthā – condition avasthānam – is situated āveśaḥ – entrance, penetration avidyā – spiritual ignorance aviṣṭavā – unbroken, continuous avirati – proness to sensuality aṣṭayā – not an object of anything, imperceptible aṣṭeṣa – what is regular aṣṭeṣaḥ – not distinct, inability to distinguish avyapadeśya – what is not to be defined, what is latent āyuh – duration of life
B bādhane – in annoyance or disturbance
 bahiḥ – outside, external bahiraṅga – external part bāhya – external bala – mystic force, strength balāni – powers
 baleṣu – by strength

bandha – bondage
 bandhaḥ – confinement, restriction
 bhāram – gravitating bhāva – states of feelings and perceptions, inherent nature, psychology
 bhāvaḥ – mento-emotional energy, feeling
 bhāvanā – absorption in feelings, producing
 bhāvanam – manifesting,
 imagining, conceiving,
 considering
 bhāvanātaḥ – abstract meditation bhedaḥ – splitting, removing, disintegrating
 bhedāt – from the difference
 bhede – in the difference
 bhoga – experience
 bhogāḥ – type of experience bhrāntidarśana – mistaken views
 bhūmiḥ – ground, foundation, basis, territory, range
 bhūmiṣu – in stages
 bhūta – the various states of matter, mundane
 elements, creature
 bhūtātvaṭ – the actual object bhuvana – the solar system
 bīja – seed, origin, source bījam – origin
 brahmacarya – sexual nonexpressiveness which results in the perception of spirituality
 buddheḥ – of the intellect organ
 buddhi – the intellect organ

C

ca – and cakre – on the energy gyrating center cakṣuḥ – vision
 candre – on the moon or moon-
 god

caturthaḥ – the fourth
 ced (cet) – if, otherwise
 cetana – sense consciousness chidreṣu – in the relaxation of the focus citeḥ – of the spirit
 citiśaktiḥ – the power of pure
 consciousness
 citram – diversified citta – mento-emotional energy cittam – mento-emotional force cittāni – regions within the
 mento-emotional energy
 cittasya – of the mento-emotional
 energy
 cittavikṣepaḥ – scattered mental and emotional energy

D

darśana – sight, vision, what is seen darśanam – the view of darśina – of the one who sees daurmanasya – of mental depression
 deśa – location, place
 deśaiḥ – by what location dhāraṇā – linking of the attention to a concentration force or person
 dharma – attributes, functions,
 quality, law, sustaining force dharma – nature's way of acting for beneficial results
 dharmāṇām of the characteristics dharmī – most basic condition
 dhruve – on the Pole Star dhyāna – effortless linkage of the attention to higher concentration forces dhyānajam – produced by the effortless linkage of the attention to a higher reality

dhyānam – effortless linking of the attention to a higher concentration force or person
 dhyānāt – from effortless linkage
 of the mind to a higher concentration force dīrgha – long dīrgha – prolonged divyaṃ – divine, supernatural doṣa – fault, defect
 draṣṭā – the perceiver
 draṣṭṛ – the observer
 dṛḍha – firm
 drg (drk) – supernatural vision
 dṛṣeḥ – of the perceiver
 dṛṣi – perception, consciousness dṛṣṭa – what is seen or perceived directly, realized
 dṛṣya – the perceived dṛṣyam – what is perceived dṛṣyasya – of what is seen dṛṣyatvāt – for it is due to being something to be perceived dṛṣyayoḥ – of what is perceived dṛṣye – in the perception of duḥka – distress
 duḥkhaiḥ – with distress
 duḥkham – distress
 dvandvāḥ – the dualities of happiness and distress,
 heat and cold
 dveṣa – impulsive emotional disaffection

E

eka – one ekāgra – ability to link the attention to one concentration force or person
 ekāgratā – of what is in front of one aspect before the attention ekāgratayoḥ – of the one aspect before the attention ekam – one ekarūpatvāt – due to one form

ekasamaye – at the same time ekātmatā – having one nature, identical
 ekatra – in one place, all taken together as one practice ekatānatā – one continuous threadlike flow of attention ekatvāt – singleness, uniqueness eṣaḥ – this particular person eṣām – of those, these etaya – by this etena – by this eva – only, alone, indeed

G

gamanam – going through,
 passing through gati – course of heavenly planets and stars, the flow
 grahaṇa – flow perception,
 sensual grasping
 grahīṭṛ – perceiver
 grāhya – appropriating, grasping,
 sensual perceptiveness
 grāhyeṣu – in what is perceived guṇa – influences of material nature
 guṇānām – of the influence of the subtle material nature
 guruḥ – the spiritual teacher

H

hana – avoidance
 hānam – killing off, complete removal, withdrawal, escape hasti – elephant
 hetuḥ – cause, reason hetutvāt – that which causes heya – that which is to be avoided
 heyāḥ – what is fit to be abandoned or left aside heyam – that which is to be avoided
 hi – indeed
 himsa – violence

hlāda – happiness

hṛdaye – on the samyam, on the causal body

I

indriya – sense organs, sensual
energy

indriyajayaḥ – the mastery of the sensual energy
by psychological control

indriyānām – of the sense

indriyeṣu – by the sensual energy

irtareṣām – for others

iṣṭadevatā

- cherished divine being

īśvara – Supreme Lord

itaratra – at other times

itareṣām – for others

itaretara – one for the other

iti – that is all, thus, subsequently iva – as if, as it were, seems to be, like

J

jāḥ – what is produced from

jala – water

janma – birth, particular species

japaḥ – murmuring

jāti – species, status of life, category

jaya – conquest

jāyante – is produced

jayāt – from the conquest of,
from the mastery

jñāna – knowledge

jñānadīptiḥ – radiant organ of perception

jñānam – information, knowledge

jñānasaya – of knowledge

jñāta – known

jñeyam – what is known

jugupsā – aversion, disgust

jvalanam – shining, burning,
blazing, with firey glow

jyotisi – on the shining light

jyotiṣmatī – spiritually luminous

K

kaivalya – total separation from the mundane psychology

kaivalyam – separation of the spirit from psychology

kāla – time

kālena – by time

kañṭaka – thorns

kañṭha – throat

kaṇa – cause, causing, creating,
making

kārita – cause to be done

kāritvāt – activity, force

karma – cultural activities, action

karuṇā – compassion

kathamtā – how, the reason for

kāya – body, subtle body

khyāteḥ – insight

khyāteḥ – of a thorough awareness

khyāti – the discriminating faculty of the intellect

khyātiḥ – what is known or identified, insight

kiṁ – what

kleśa – mento-emotional afflictions, troubles

kleśavad – like the mento
- emotional afflictions

kliṣṭā – agonizing

krama – a step, succession, progression, process
of development

kramaḥ – process

kramayoḥ – on the sequence

kriyā – action

kriyāyogaḥ – dynamic yoga
practice

krodha – anger

kṛt – fulfilled done

kṛta – done

kṛtārthānām – having done their purpose kṣaṇa – moment

kṣaya – decrease

kṣayaḥ – dissipation, removal kṣayāt – from the elimination kṣaye – on elimination kṣetram – field, existential environment
 kṣetrikavat – like a farmer
 kṣīṇa – great reduction kṣīyate – is dissipated
 kṣut – hunger
 kūpe – on the gullet
 kūrma – tortoise, a particular subtle nerve

L

lābhaḥ – what is gained,
 obtained
 laghu – light
 lakṣaṇa – individual characteristics, shape
 lāvanya – charm
 liṅgamātra – a mark, that which is indicated
 lobha – greed

M

madhya – mediocre mahā – great mahatva – largeness, cosmic proportions
 mahāvratam – great commitment
 maitrī – friendliness
 mala – impurities
 manasaḥ – of the mind
 maṇeḥ – of a gem
 manojavitvaṁ – swiftness of mind, rapidity
 mantra – special sound mātra – only, merely mātraḥ – measure or extent mātrasya – only mātrāt – from that only meghaḥ – mento-emotional clouds of energy
 mithyājñānam – false information
 moha – delusion mṛdu – minor, slight

muditā – joyfulness, cheerfulness
 mūlaḥ – root, cause
 mūle – in the cause
 mūrdha – the head

N

na – not, nor nābhi – navel
 nāḍyām – on the nadi or subtle nerve nairantarya – uninterrupted continuous
 naṣtam – destroyed, non-existent,
 non-effective
 nibandhanī – bond, fusion
 nidrā – sleep
 nimittaṁ – cause, motive, apparent cause
 nimnaṁ – leaning towards,
 inclined to niratiśayaṁ – unsurpassed nirbhāsā – shining nirbhāsaṁ – illuminating nirbījaḥ – not motivated by the
 mento-emotional energy
 nirbījasya – not motivated by the
 mento-emotional energy
 nirgrāhyaḥ – clearly perceived nirmāṇa – producing, creating,
 measuring, fabricating
 nirodha – restraint, cessation,
 suppression, non-operation nirodhāt – resulting from that non-operation
 nirodhe – on the non-operation
 nirupakramaṁ – dormant, destined nirvicāra – non-investigative linkage
 nirvitarka – fusion or linkage without deliberation of analysis nitya – eternal
 nityatvāt – what is eternal

nivṛtṭiḥ – cessation, suppression niyama – recommended behaviors
 nyāsāt – from placing or applying

P

pañcatayyaḥ – fivefold
 pañka – mud
 panthāḥ – ways of viewing,
 prejudices
 para – another, of others
 parair – with others
 param – highest (non-interest)
 paramā – highest, greatest parārtham – for another’s sake parārthatvāt – what is apart from another thing
 paridṛṣṭah – measured, regulated
 pariṇāma – transformation, change, alteration
 pariśuddhau – on complete
 purification
 paritāpa – distress
 parvāni – phases stages parts paryavasānam – termination paśyaḥ – what is perceived phala – effect
 phalāḥ – results
 pipāsā – thirst
 prabhoḥ – of the governor pracāra – channel flow pracchardana – exhalation
 pradhānah – subtle matter prādurbhāvaḥ – coming into existence, manifesting prāg – towards prajñā – insight
 prajñābhyām – from the two methods of insight
 prakāśa – clear perception, light prakṛiti – subtle material nature prakṛtilayānām – of those who are diffused into subtle material nature
 prakṛtīnām – of the subtle material energy

pramāda – inattentiveness pramāṇa – correct perception
 pramāṇāni – true perception,
 correct perception
 prāṇasya – of the vital energy praṇavaḥ – the sacred syllable
 āum (Om)
 prāṇāyāma – breath enrichment of the subtle body
 praṇidhānāni – profound religious meditation praṇidhānāt – derived from profound religious meditation
 prānta – boundary or edge
 prāntabhūmiḥ – stage
 prasādaḥ – clarity and serenity prasādanam – serenity prasamkhyāna – in the abstract
 meditation
 prasaṅgāt – due to association,
 due to endearing friendliness
 praśānta – spiritual peace prasava – expressing, going outwards
 prasupta – dormant
 praśvāsayoḥ – of the exhalation
 prati – opposing, reverting back, toward pratibandhī – the preventer, that which effectively suppresses something prātibha – the shining organ of divination
 prātibhāt – resulting from samyama on the shining organ of divination pratipakṣa – what is opposite or contrary
 pratipattiḥ – perception
 pratiprasavaḥ – re-absorption, retrogression, neutralization pratiṣedha – removal
 pratiṣṭhā – established pratiṣṭham – positioned, based pratiṣṭhāyām – on being firmly established pratiyogī – corresponding, being a counter-part pratyāhar – sensual energy withdrawal pratyāhārah – withdrawal of sensual energy and its focus on the mind pratyak – backwards, inwards, in the opposite direction pratyakṣa – direct but correct perception pratyayaḥ – conviction or belief as mental content, instinctive interest pratyayaḥ – mental content, objective awareness within the psyche pratyayānām – pertaining to the mind content, convictions, idea pratyayasya – of the mind content pravibhāga – differentiation, sorting, classification, mental clarity pravṛtti – destined activity, the force of cultural activity pravṛtti – frantic activity, dispersal of energy pravṛtṭiḥ – the operation

 prayatna – effort
 prayaya – objective awareness, opinions and motives of mind content prayojakaṁ – very, much used or employed punaḥ – again
 puṇya – merits, virtue puruṣa – of the spiritual person, individual spirit puruṣārtha – the aims of a human being puruṣasya – of the spirit pūrva – before, previous pūrvakaḥ – caused by, proceeded by, previously practiced pūrveṣām – of those before, the ancient teachers

R

rāga – a tendency of emotional attachment, craving rasa – essence
 ratna – gems, precious things ṛtambharā – reality-perceptive, truth discerning rūḍho – developed produced rūpa – form
 ruta – sound, cry, yell, language

S

śabda – sound
 śabdādi – sound and the related sensual pursuits śabdajñāna – written or spoken information sabījaḥ – with motivation from the mento-emotional energy sadā – always sādharmaṇatvāt – common, normal, universal sah – He, that sahabhuvaḥ – occurring with the symptoms śaithilyāt – due to relaxation, collapse sāḅṣātkaraṇāt – from causing to be visibly present, direct intuitive śakti – power, potency, energy śaktyoḥ – of the two potencies sālambanaṁ – leaning on, resting on, support
 samādhi – continuous effortless linkage of the attention to a higher concentration force or person
 samāna – digestive energy samāpatteḥ – of meeting, of linking samāpattibhyām – meeting, encounter samāpattīḥ – linkage fusion

samāptir – end conclusions
 samaya – condition
 sambandha – relationship
 sambodhaḥ – full or correct
 perception
 samhananatvāni – definiteness, hardness
 samhatya – because of it
 samjñā – consciousness,
 demeanor, mind-set samkāra – impression
 samkhyābhiḥ – with numbering accounting
 sampat – wealth, prosperity,
 perfection
 samprajñātaḥ – the observational linkage of the attention to a higher concentration force samprayogaḥ – intimate contact samśaya – doubt samskāra – impression in the
 mento-emotional energy
 samskārāt – from the impressions derived samskārayoḥ – of the impressions formed of cultural activities samskārebhaḥ – from the subtle impressions
 samvedanam – perception samvedanāt – from knowing samvegānām – regarding those who practice forcibly samvit – thorough insight samyamād – from the complete restraint of the mento-
 emotional energy
 samyamah – complete restraint samyamāt – from the complete
 restraint of the mento-
 emotional energy
 sāmye – on being equal, in the same samyoga – conjunction samyogo – the indiscriminate
 association
 saṅga – association

saṅgrhītatvāt – what holds together
 saṅkaraḥ – confusion,
 intermixture
 saṅkīrṇā – blending together, mixed
 sannidhau – presence, vicinity
 śānta – tranquilized, settled, subsided, collapsed
 saṅtoṣa – contentment
 saṅtoṣāt – from contentment
 saptadhā – seven fold
 śarīra – body
 sārūpyam – with the same format, conformity sarva – all sārvaabhaumāḥ – relating to all standard stages,
 being standard
 sarvajña – all knowing sarvajñātrtvam – all knowledge,
 intuition
 sarvam – everything, all reality sarvārtham – what is all evaluating sarvārthatā – varying objective sarvathā – in all ways
 sati – being accomplished,
 there is existing satkāra – reverence, care
 attention
 sattva – clarifying perception
 of material nature
 sattva – intelligence energy
 of material nature
 satya – realism
 śauca – purification
 śaucāt – from purification saumanasya – concerning benevolence
 savicāra – investigative linkage of one's attention to a higher concentration force
 savitarkā – thoughtfulness, reasoning, deliberation
 śeṣaḥ – what is remaining siddha – the perfected being siddhayaḥ – mystic perfectional

 skills
 siddhiḥ – perfection, skill
 śīlam – form, disposition
 smaya – fascination, wonderment smṛtayaḥ – memory
 smṛti – memory
 sopakramaṁ – set about,
 undertaken, already operative śraddhā – confidence
 śrāvaṇa – hearing
 śrotra – hearing sense
 śrotram – hearing sense
 śruta – what is heard
 stambha – restrained, suppressed, restrictive
 stambhe – on the suspension sthairyam – steadiness sthairye – in the consistent sthāni – the place a yogi would attain if his material body dies sthira – steady
 sthitau – regarding steadiness or persistence
 sthiti – stability, steadiness stūla – gross form
 styāna – idleness
 śuci – pure
 śuddhaḥ – purity
 śuddhi – purification
 sukha – happiness
 sukham – comfortable
 sūkṣma – subtle
 sūkṣmaḥ – subtle energies, hardly noticeable
 śunya – devoid of śūnyam – empty, void, lacking śūnyānām – devoid of sūrye – on the sun-god
 or the sun planet
 sva – own nature, own psyche, itself, oneself
 svābhāsam – self-illuminative
 svādhyāya – study of the psyche

svādhyāyāt – from study of the psyche
 svāmi – the master,
 the individual self
 svapna – dream
 svarasavāhī – it's own flow of energy
 of self preservation
 svārtha – one own, self interest
 svarūpa – own form
 svarūpataḥ – true form
 svarūpe – in his own form śvāsa – inhalation śvāsapraśvāsāḥ – labored breathing
 syāt – would occur

T

tā – they tad – that tadā – then tadarthabhābanam – that value
 with deep feelings
 tadeva – that only, alone
 tānatā – thread of fiber tantraṁ – dependent tanū – thinking reducing tāpa – strenuous endeavor
 tapaḥ – austerity
 tāra – stars
 tāraḥ – crossing over transcending
 tāsām – those tasmin – on this tasya – of it, of this,
 of him, of his tat – that tataḥ – hence, subsequently tatha – just as, so it is tatra – there, in that location tatstha – basis foundation tattva – standard method in pursuit of reality
 tattvam – essence,
 actual composition
 tayoh – of these two

te – these, they tīvra – very intense traya – threefold
 trayam – three trividham – three-fold
 tu – but, except tūla – cotton fluff tulya – similar tulyayoḥ – of two similar types
 tyāgaḥ – abandonment

U

ubhaya – both udāna – air which rises from the throat and enters the head udārāṇām – expanded udayau – and increase uḍita – emergent uḍitau – and agitated, emerging uktam – authoritatively said,
 described
 upalabdhi – obtaining experience upanimantraṇe – on being invited uparāga – color, mood
 uparaktam – prejudiced upasargāḥ – impediments
 upasthānam – approaching, waiting upon
 upāyaḥ – means, method
 upekṣaṇam – indifference, neutrality, non-responsiveness
 utkrāntiḥ – rising above
 utpannā – produced,
 brought about
 uttaraśām – of the other afflictions

V

vā – thus, at last, or vācakaḥ – what is denoted or named vāhī – flow current,
 instinct for self-preservation
 vāhita – flow
 vaira – hostility

vairāgyābhyām – non-interest,
 a total lack of concern,
 non-interference
 vairāgyam – non-interest
 vairāgyāt – from a lack of interest
 vaiśaradye – on gaining competence
 vaitṛṣṇyam – freedom
 from desire
 vajra – diamond-like, infallible
 varaṇa – impediments, obstacles vārtāḥ – smell
 vāsanābhiḥ – subtle impressions vāsanānām – of tendencies within the mento-emotional energy vaśīkāra – through control vaśīkāraḥ – mastery of the psyche vastu – object
 vastuśūnyaḥ – devoid of reality,
 without reality
 vaśyatā – subdued, subjugation, control
 vedana – touching vedanīyaḥ – what is experienced or realized
 vi – parting away
 from, dispersing
 vibhaktaḥ – separated, divided vicāra – deliberation, reflection
 vicchedaḥ – the separation vicchina – alternating, periodic videhā – bodiless state vidhāraṇābhyām – by inhalation viduṣaḥ – the wise man vikalpa – imagination
 vikalpaiḥ – with option,
 alternative,
 doubt, uncertainty
 vikṣepa – distraction
 viniyogaḥ – application,
 employment, practice
 vipāka – development, fruition vipākaḥ – what is resulting viparyaya – incorrect perception viprakṛṣṭa – remote virāma – losing track of, dropping virodhāt – resulting from confrontation

 or clashing aspects
 vīrya – vigor, stamina
 viṣayā – object
 viṣayaṁ – an object or person viṣayaṁ – subtle and gross
 mundane objects
 viṣayānām – relating to attractive objects
 viṣayatvaṁ – what is concerning the nature of gross objects viṣayavatī – like normal sensuality, something different but similar to a normal object viśeṣa – distinction, specific perception
 viśeṣaḥ – rating
 viśokāḥ – sorrowless vīta – without
 vitarka – doubt, argument,
 analysis
 vitṛṣṇasya – of one who does not crave
 viveka – discrimination
 vivekajaṁ – the distinction caused by subtle discrimination vivekakhyāteḥ – with super discrimination
 vivekinaḥ – the discriminating
 person

vṛttayaḥ – vibrational modes of the mento-emotional energies vṛtteḥ – concerning the mentoemotional operations
 vṛtti – vibrational mode of the
 mento-emotional energy
 vṛttiḥ – activity, movement,
 operation
 vyādhi – disease
 vyākhyātā – explained
 vyākhyātāḥ – is described vyakta – gross vyavahita – concealed vyavahitānām – of what is placed apart or separated
 vyūha – arrangement, layout, system
 vyutthāna – expression
 vyutthāne – in expressing,
 going outwards, rising up

Y

yama – moral restrains yatha – as, according yatnaḥ – endeavor
 yoga – yoga process
 yogaḥ – the skill of yoga
 yogānuśāsanam – yoga
 and its practice
 yoginaḥ – of the yogis yogyatā – being conducive for abstract meditation yogyatvāni – being fit for yoga
 or abstract meditation

Index to Verses: Selected Sanskrit Words

A

- abhiniveśaḥ* 2.9
abhyāsaḥ 1.32
adhyaṭmaprasādaḥ 1.47
ahiṃsā 2.30,35
āloka 3.27
ānantyāt 4.31
anāśayam 4.6
anavadhāraṇam 4.20 aṇimādi 3.46
antaraṅgam 3.7
antardhānam 3.21,22
anugūṇānām 4.8
aparigrahāḥ 2.30
āsana 2.29,46
asmitā 2.6' 3.48
asmitāmātrāt 4.4
asteya 2.30
ātmabhāva 4.25
ātmadarśana 2.41
auśadhi 4.1
āvaraṇam 2.52, 4.31
avidyā 2.4, 5, 24
āvivekakhyāteḥ 2.28

B

- bahiraṅgam* 3.8
bhāvanānivṛttiḥ 4.25
'bhiniveśaḥ 2.9
bhogāḥ 2.13
bhogāpavargārtham 2.18
brahmacarya 2.30, 38
buddhibuddheḥ 4.21

C

- candre* 3.28
citeḥ 4.22
citiśaktiritim 4.34
cittabhedāt 4.15
cittam 4.5, 23, 26
cittāntaradr̥ṣye 4.21
cittasaṃvit 3.35
cittavikṣepaḥ 1.30
cittavṛtti 1.2

D

- deśa* 3.1; 4.9
dhāraṇā 2.29; 3.1
dhāraṇā 3.1
dhāraṇāsu 2.53
dharmameghaḥ 4.29
dharmī 3.14
dhruve 3.29
dhyāna 2.29; 3.2
dhyānaheyāḥ 2.11
dhyānaḥ 4.6
dhyānāt 1.39
draṣṭā 2.20
draṣṭṛ 4.23
draṣṭuḥ ..1.3
dr̥ḡ 2.6
dr̥śya 4.23
dr̥śyatvāt 4.19
dvandvāḥ 2.48
dveṣaḥ 2.8

E*ekacitta* 4.16*ekāgra* 2.41*ekāgratāpariṇāmaḥ* 3.12*ekasamaye* 4.20Gguṇānām* 4.32, 34*guṇaparvāṇi* 2.19*guṇātmānaḥ* 4.13*guṇavṛtti* 2.15*guruḥ* 1.26Hhānam* 4.28*hṛdaye* 3.35Iindriyajaya* 2.41*iṣṭadevatā* 2.44, 45*Īśvara* 1.23,24*īśvarapraṇidhānāni*

2.32, 45

J*janma* 4.1*japaḥ* 1.28*jāti* 4.9*jātyantara* 4.2*jñānadīptiḥ* 2.28*jiyotiṣmatī* 1.36Kkaivalyam*

2.25; 3.34,51, 56;4.26

kāla 4.9*kaṇṭhakūpe* 3.31*karma* 3.15, 23; 4.7, 30*karmāśayaḥ* 2.12*kāya* 2.43; 3.21, 43*kāyasam̐pat* 3.47*khyātimātrasya* 3.50*kleśa* 2.2; 4.30*kleśavat* 4.28*kriyā* 2.18*kriyāyogaḥ* 2.1*krodha* 2.34*kṣaṇa* 3.53*kṣetram* 2.4*kūrmanāḍyām* 3.32Llobha* 2.34Mmahāvīdehā* 3.44*mahāvratam* 2.31*manasaḥ* 2.53*mantra* 4.1*moha* 2.34*mūrdhājyoti* 3.33Nnābhicakre* 3.30*nimittam* 4.3*nirbījaḥ* 1.51; 3.8*nirmāṇacittān* 4.4i*nīrodhaḥ* 1.2, 51; 3.9*nīrvicāra* 1.44, 47*nīrvītarka* 1.43*nīrvṛtiḥ* 3.31; 4.30*niyama* 2.29, 32*nyāsāt* 3.27

P

panthāḥ 4.15
paraśarīrāveśaḥ 3.39
pariṇāmāḥ
 3.13,15; 4.2, 14
pradhānajayaḥ 3.49
prāgbhāraṁ 4.26
prajñā 1.48; 2.27
prajñālokaḥ 3.5
prakāśa 2.18,52; 3.21,44
prakṛtyāpūrāt 4.2
prāṇasya 1.34
praṇavaḥ 1.27
prāṇāyāma 2.29, 49
praṇidhānāt 1.23
prasamkhyāne 4.29
prasāṅgāt 3.52
praśāntavāhita 3.10
prātibhāt 3.34,37
pratipattiḥ 3.54
pratiprasavaḥ 4.34
pratyāhāra 2.29, 54
pratyakcetana 1.29
pravṛtti 3.27; 4.5
pravṛtti 4.5
Puruṣārthaśūnyānām 4.34
puruṣaviśeṣaḥ 1.24

R

rāgaḥ 2.7
ṛtambharā 1.48

S

sabījaḥ 1.46
sākṣātkaraṇāt 3.18
samādhiḥ 1.46,51; 2.2,29; 3.3,38; 4.29

samādhipariṇāmāḥ 3.10
samādhisiddhiḥ 2.45
samāpattiḥ 1.42; 2.47
samāptir 4.32
sāmbodhaḥ 2.39
samprayogaḥ 2.44,45
saṁskāraḥ 1.50;
 2.15; 3.9,10; 4.27
saṁyamaḥ 3.4,16,17,27, 42,43,45,48,53
saṁyogaḥ 2.17,23,25
saṁtoṣa 2.32,42
sattva puruṣa 3.50,56
sattvasuddhi 2.41
satya 2.30
satyapraṭiṣṭhāyām 2.36
śauca 2.32,40
savicāra 1.44
siddhadarśanam 3.33
siddhiḥ 2.43; 3.38; 4.1
śrotram 3.42
śuddhi 3.56
sūkṣmāḥ 2.10,50; 3.27; 4.13
sūrye 3.27
sva svāmiśaktyoḥ 2.23
svābhāsam 4.19
svādhyāya 2.1,32,44,45
svapna 1.38 svarūpa 1.3; 2.23; 3.45,48 svarūpapraṭiṣṭhā 4.34
svarūpaśūnyam 3.3
svarūpataḥ 4.12

T

tantram 4.16
tapaḥ 2.1,32; 4.1

tapasaḥ 2.43U

upasargāḥ 3.3

V

vairatyāgaḥ 2.35

vāsanānām 4.8

vastusāmye 4.15

vastutattvam 4.14

vibhaktāḥ 4.15

viniyogaḥ 3.6

virodhāt 2.15

viśeṣadarśinaḥ 4.25

vitarkaḥ 2.34

vivekajam 3.55

vivekakhyātiḥ 2.26; 4.29

vivekanimnam 4.26

vivekinaḥ 2.15

vṛttiḥ 1.2,4; 3.44

vyakta 4.13

vyutthāna 3.9

Y

yama 2.29,30

yogā 2.28

yogaḥ 1.1

yoginaḥ 4.7

yogyatā 2.53

yogyatvāni ..2.41

Index to Verses: Selected English Words

A

- Absurdity, 4.21
- Afflictions,
 - defined, 2.2
 - elimination, 4.28
 - reduction, 2.2
 - stages, 2.4
- Air, 3.40
- Analysis, 1.7,17
- Anger, 2.34
- Atmosphere, 3.43
- Attachment, 2.3
- Aum, 1.27,28
- Austerity, 2.1,4.1
 - recommended, 2.32
 - results, 2.43

B

- Beautiful form, 3.47
- Behavior, see Recommended behavior
- Benevolence, 2.41
- Birth,
 - perception of, 2.39
 - realized/non-realized, 2.12
 - skills attained by, 4.1
 - species, 2.12
- Bodiless state, 3.44
- Body
 - layout, 3.30
 - possession of another's, 3.39
 - sky, 3.43
- Bondage, 3.39
- Breath enrichment, 2.29
- Breath regulation, 2.49-51
- Breathing, labored type, 1.31

C

- Causal body, 3.35
- Cause and effect, 4.11
- Celibacy, 2.30
 - also see sexual non-expressiveness
- Charm, 3.47
- Cheerfulness, 1.33
- Circumstances, 4.9
- Clairvoyance, 3.19
- Clashing aspects, 2.15
- Clouds of energy, 4.29
- Compassion, 1.33
- Competence, 1.47
- Condition,
 - basic type, 3.14
 - moral restraint,..2.31
- Confidence 1.20
- Conjunction, 2.23-25
- Contentment, 2.32,42
- Conviction, 2.20
- Correct perception 1.6,1.7
- Cotton fluff, 3.43
- Craving, 2.7
- Cultural activities,
 - emotional distress 2.12
 - impressions, 2.12
 - meditative restraint 3.23
 - stoppage, 4.30
 - timeful, 4.9
 - yogis', 4.7

D

- Death,
 - instinctive fear, 2.3,9
 - invitation, 3.52
- Delusion, 2.34
- Demerit, 2.14

Depression, 1.31
 Desire, 4.10
 Diamond-like definition, 3.47
 Disaffection, 2.3,3.50
 Discrimination, 1.43
 Disease, 1.30
 Disgust, 2.40
 Dispersals of energy, 4.5
 Distress
 cause of, 2.14
 distracted mind 1.31
 non-manifested type, 2.16
 Divination skills, 3.38
 Divine being,
 see cherished divine
 being Doubt, 1.30, 2.33,34
 Drugs, 4.1
 Dualities cease, 2.48

E

Elephant, 3.25
 Emotions, non-harmful ones, 4.6
 Endeavor, strenuous, 2.15
 Energy, lack of 1.30
 Exhalation, 1.34
 Experience ,
 defined, 3.36
 nature's purpose, 2.18

F

Farmer, 4.3
 Fear of death 2.9
 Feelings, distinct from spirit,
 4.25
 Focus on mundane existence, 2.3
 Friendliness, 1.33, 3.24
 Future, 3.16, 4.12

G

Ghost, 3.52
 Governor, 4.18
 Greed, 2.34

Gross forms, 3.45
 Gullet, 3.31
 Guru, Supreme Lord, 1.26

H

Happiness,
 best type, 2.42
 cause of, 2.14
 craving produced, 2.7
 Hearing sense, 3.37, 42
 Hereafter
 invitation, 3.52
 known 3.23
 Hope, 4.10
 Hostility, abandoned, 2.35
 Hunger, 3.31

I

Identifying powers, 3.48
 Identity, misplaced, 2.3
 Idleness, 1.30
 Ignorance,
 afflictions 2.3
 as environment, 2.4
 avoidance of 2.26
 conjunction, 2.24
 doubts, 2.34
 exhibited 2.5
 Imagination, 1.6,9
 Impediments, 4.3
 Impressions,
 insight 1.50
 storage, 2.12
 Impurity
 elimination, 2.43
 removed, 4.31
 Inattentiveness, 1.30
 Individual self, see Self Individual spirit realized, 3.36
 Infinite, meeting, 2.47
 Inhalation, 1.34
 Inherent nature, 4.13

Insight ,
 continuous, 2.26
 developed, 3.5
 impression, 1.50
 into cultural activities, 3.26
 limited type, 1.49
 of previous lives, 3.18
 shining light, 3.33,34
 stages 2.27
 steady type, 2.28
 subtle nature, 1.45 reality perceptive, 1.48

Intellect,
 limited, 4.21,
 perception of, 4.22

Interval, 3.11,112
 Interval, 4.27
 Introspective happiness, 1.17
 Introspective memory, 1.20
 Intuition,..3.50
 Invisibility, 3.21
 Inwardness, 1.29
 Isolation of self, 3.51

K

Knowledge, origin, 1.25
 Kriya yoga, 2.1
 Kurmanadi subtle nerve, 3.32

L

Language, 3.17
 Liberation, purpose, 2.18
 Light, subtle, 3.33,34

Linkage of attention,
 breath regulation, 2.53
 competence, 1.47
 continuous effortless
 1.20..2.1
 continuous, 3.3
 decreasing objectives,3.1
 deliberate, 1.42
 effortless, 1.39, 3.2
 effortless/continuous,
 1.46..
 investigative/non-
 investigative, 1.44..
 location 3.1
 mystic skills caused, 4.1
 non-analytical, 1.42
 non-motivated 1.51
 observational type, 1.17
 obstacles, 3.38
 without characteristics 1.45
 yoga process, 2.29

Location in the mento-emotional
 energy' 3.1

M

Material Nature ,
 alterations end, 4.32
 distinction, 3.50
 phases, 2.19
 purpose fulfilled, 4.32

Matter, 3.12

Mento-emotional energy,
 channels, 3.39
 conformity, 1.4
 insight into, 3.35
 known by spirit, 4.18
 motivational, 1.46
 non-interest 1.15,16
 non-operation, 1.2
 objectives decreased, 3.11
 parting away/dispersion, 3.49
 perceptible, 4.19
 limited,4.19
 prejudiced, 4.23
 proximity, 4.24
 regions of dispersal, 4.4,5 restraint 3.17
 restraint of , 3.10
 scattered 1.30
 serenity, 1.33
 stopping operations,4.25

Meditation ,
 see also Linkage of attention,
 abstract, 1.33-39
 complete restraint, 3.4,6
 fusion and steadiness,
 1.35
 on dearly desired force,1.39
 on material nature, 4.29
 on someone, 1.37
 on Supreme Lord,
 1.23,2.32, 2.45
 proficiency, 2.41
 profound religious, 2.1
 sorrow less/spiritually
 luminous, 1.35

Memory,
 purified 1.43
 subtle impressions, 3.10
 suppression 1.51
 timeful, 4.9.10
 vibrational mode 1.6,11

Mental darkness, 2.52, 3.44, 4.31

Mento-emotional operations,
 see vibrational modes.

Merit, 2.14

Mind,
 Also see mento-emotional energy
 content , 3.12
 distracted type, 1.312
 swiftness, 3.49

Minuteness, 3.46

Moment, 3.53, 4.33

Moon, 3.28

Moral restraints,
 great commitment, 2.31
 listed 2.29
 non-adjustable 2.31

Motivation,
 impulsive type, 2.15
 subtle type, 2.10

Mud, 3.40

Mundane existence, focus on, 2.9

Mundane objects 3.55

Mystic force,.. 3.47

Mystic skills, 4.1

N

Nature, 3.45
 Also see Material Nature

Navel energy gyrating center,
 3.30

Nervousness, 1.31

Neutrality 4.34

Non-possessiveness, 2.30, 39

Non-responsiveness, 1.33

Non-stealing, 2.30, 39

Non-violence, 2.30, 35

O

Object , composition, 4.14
 transcendent type, 1.35

Observer, 2.17

Obstacles to progress. 1.29,32

Om, 1.27,28

Omniscience, 3.34

P

Past and future, 3.16

Past, 4.12

Peace, 3.10
 Perceiver, 1.3, 2.20
 Also see observer
 Perception,
 correct/incorrect, 1.6
 radiant organ, 2.28
 types, 2.18
 Perfected beings, 3.33
 Perfection ,
 of body and sensual energy,
 2.43
 Person,
 Also see Self
 discriminating type, 2.15
 without craving, 1.37
 Personality distinction, 3.50
 Planets, 3.29
 Pole Star , 3.28,29
 Portents, 3.23
 Posture, 2.29, 46, 47
 Pranayama, 2.51
 Prejudice, 4.15
 Progress 1.30
 Psyche ,
 Also see study of psyche
 fiery glow, 3.41
 fusion, 1.41
 isolated, 3.51
 mastery of, 1.40
 psychological organs 3.7
 steadiness, 3.32
 study 2.1,44
 Purification, 2.32,40,41
 Purity, 3.56

R

Realism, 2.30, 36
 Reality of an object, 4.16
 Reality,
 known, 3.34
 pursuit of, 1.32
 similar types, 3.54
 Recommended Behavior,
 2.29, 32
 Reference, 1.7

Reflection, 1.17
 Reincarnation, 3.18, 52; 4.2
 Relationship control, 1.40
 Retrogression , 3.14

S

Samana digestive force, 3.41
 Saturation of subtle material
 nature, 4.2
 Seeing, 3.37
 Self consciousness, 1.17
 Self distinction, 4.25
 Self preservation, 2.9
 Self realization, 3.36
 Self, and psyche, 2.22
 Self, form of,4,
 Sense control, 2.54
 Sense of identity, 4.4
 Sensual energy conquest 2.41
 Sensual Energy Withdrawal,
 2.29, 54
 Sensual grasping 3.48
 Sensuality, 1.30
 Separation of perceiver,
 2.25, 3.56, 4.26, 31,34
 Sexual non-expressiveness,
 2.30,38
 Sharp objects, 3.40
 Shining organ of divination,
 3.34,37
 Sleep, dream-dreamless,
 1.6,10,38
 Smelling, 3.37
 Solar system, 3.27
 Soul, types 1.47
 Sound, 3.17, 22; 4.1
 Space, 3.42
 Spirit, 2.41
 Also see Self
 Spiritual ignorance, see Ignorance
 Spiritual perception, 2.30
 Stamina, 1.20
 Stars, 3.28,29
 State 1.18,19
 States of matter, 3.45

Status/moral restraint 2.31
 Strength, 3.25
 Study of psyche, 2.44
 Subtle activities, 4.6
 Subtle body perfection, 3.46
 Subtle material energy 4.3
 Sun planet, 3.27
 Sun-god, 3.27
 Supreme Lord/Supreme Soul
 1.23,24-27; 2.1.32,45 .

T

Tasting, 3.37
 Telepathy, 3.19
 Tendencies, cause of, 4.8
 Thirst, 3.31
 Throat, 3.40
 Time, moral restraint, 2.31
 Touching, 3.37
 Transformation, 3.15,16; 4.2
 Transition, 4.2

U

Uniqueness, 4.14

V

Vibrational modes, abandoned, 2.11
 distress causing, 2.15
 fivefold, 1.5
 non-operational,
 1.2, 12, 51
 reduction, 1.41
 stoppage, 4.30

Views, mistaken type 1.30

Vigor, 2.38

Vision, 2,6

Vital energy, regulation, 1.34

W

Water, 3.40

Weightlessness, 3.43

Withdrawal,

see sensual energy withdrawal.

Word 1.42

Y

Yoga practice,
 defined, 1.2
 eight parts, 2.29
 introduced, 1.1
 persistence for, 1,13,14
 rates 1.21,22
 results, 2.28
 standard method, 1.32

Index to Commentary of Part 3

A

ābhimata, 108
abhiniveśaḥ, 118,119,120
 Abhorrence, 120
 Absoluteness, 95
 Absorption, observational, 94
 Abstract meditation, 142
adhiṣṭhāṛṭvam, 97
 Adisesa, 144
 Afflictions, 117
 Agnihotra, 95
ahimsā, 134,135
 Akshardham, 82
akusīdasya, 201
ālasya, 102
 Alternate breathing, 146
 Anal region, 177
 Analysis, 87,111
anavasthitatvāni, 103
 Ancient authorities, 99
 Angelic world, defects, 184
 Animal memory, 123
 Animal nature, 139
 Anu, 108
 Anu-gita, 154
 Anvaya, 181
 Anxiety, 125
 Apana, 170,177
 Aparigraha, 135
 Apte, Vaman Shivram,
 150, 183
 Arjuna,
 86,103,134,139,154,161
 Asamprajnata Samadhi, 94
āsana, 141,143,145
 avoidance of, 92
āsayaḥ, 191
asmitā, 118
 Association, 101,107,142,178
 Asteya, 135
 Astral body, 118,169
 Astral world, 138

Atheism, 144
 Atma, 183
 Aum, 99
 Aura, 164
 Ausadhi, 188
 Austerity, 116,143
 Avidya, 118
 Avirati, 102

B

Babaji Mahasaya, Sri, 171
 notation, 188
 Balarama , Lord, 103
 Battle in the mind, 156
 Bedstead, 144
 Benevolence, 142
 Bengali Baba, 95
 Bhagavad-gita,
 99,103,104,130,134,
 136,139,151,189
 Bhagavan, 161
 Bhagavata Purana, 86
 Bhakti, 109,116,136
 Bharata, 167
 Bhastrika, 170,177
 Bhauma, 136
 Bhrantidarsana. 102
 Bhutendriya, 158
 Birth,
 method of powers,189
 millions, 91
 past ones, 123
 skills, 187
 Blowing out, 176
 Bodiless nature, 95,96,179
 Brahma, 82
 Brahma, Lord, 98
 Brahmacharya, 135
 Brahman, 135
 Brahmarandra, 172
 Breath nutrition, 141
 Breathing, labored type, 104
 British government, 164

Brow chakra, 113
 Buddhi organ,
 -Also see Intellect
 analysis, 110-111
 dull, darkish, 172
 glow of, 103
 glow. 171
 illuminated, 152
 instrument, 126,127
 mistaken, 102
 purity, 163
 radiant, 133
 sensually reliant, 88
 Buddhi yoga 102

C
 Cannibal, 140
 Castagna, Sir Paul, 85
 Causal level, 175,179
 Celibacy Yoga,
 135,141,143,171
 Celibacy, 103,135,141
 Chaitanya Mahaprabhu,Sri,
 116
 Chakra, 169
 Charm, 139
 Chemical means, 193
 Cherished divine being, 143
 Chit akash,
 - Also see Sky of
 consciousness.
 82.84,106,111,158
 Chitta, Also see Mento-emotional force/energy 83
 Christ, Jesus 177
 Citta, see Chitta
cittavikṣepaḥ, 103
 Clairvoyance, 141
 Cloud of values, 200,201
 Commitments, 137
 Conjunction, 131
 Consumption, 127
 Contentment, 143
 Conviction, 128
 Correct perception, 85
 Cosmic buddhi, 94
 Cosmic God, 87
 Cosmic sense of identity, 94

Cravings/ happiness, 120
 Cultural activities,
 afflictions 202
 all species, 124
 basis for rebirth, 124
 destiny, 165
 disinterest in, 91
 purifying 137
 unsteady, 103
 yogis 191

D

Death, 120
 Deity relationship, 168
 Demerits, 124,126
 Desire/hope, 193
 Desire-to-live, 121
 Destiny, 165,176
 Detachment , 91
 Devi, 176
 Devotion, 136,137,176
dhāraṇā, 93,100,142,147, 151-153,172,182
 imagination curbed. 86
 supernatural vision, 89
 Dharmameghah, 200
dharmī, 158
dhyāna,
 93,125,133
 151-153,157,172
 disease transcended, 101
 Diffused light, 157
 Digestive force, 178
 Disaffection, 118,183
 Disciples, distraction, 94
 Discriminative insight, 133
 Disease, 101
 Disgust, 131,142,153,190
 Disinterest, 158,201
 Dispassion, 85
 Dispersals of energy, 192
 Distress, 105,120,126
 Divination, 174
 Divine beings, 140
 Doubt, 102
 Dreamless sleep, 107
 Dreams, 107
 Drig/ drik shakti, 119
dr̥ṣi, 128

Durga, goddess, 176

E

Ear, 157

Earth, 136

Eating, 130

ekatānatā, 150

Emancipation, 131

Emotional disaffection,
118,120

Emotional distress, 126

Emotional energy, 103

Endearment, 108

Energy gyrating centers, 169

Entering body of others, 176

Excitation, 143

Experience, course of, 174

Exploitation, 140

Eye of consciousness, 86

F

Fame, 141,201

Farmer, 189

Fear of death, 118

Film theatre, 159

Fish-eating, 139

Friendliness,105, 166

Fruitarian, 139

Fusion, 94

Future/ real, 193

G

Gangotri, 113

Gate, 149

Gherwal, 164

God, 95,99,137,149,200,203

god, 95

Goddess Durga, 176

Gomsha, 101

Gonika, 144

Goodwill, 142

Gorakshnatha, Sri,
134,170,176,188

Grace force of prana, 146

Gravity, 179

Great commitment, 137,138

Grihasta ashram, 134

Gross existence, 118,119

Guru,

adoration 202

grace of, 117-118

premature type, 175

H

Habits, compulsive, 120

Happiness,

calm type, 143

cravings, 120

introspective type, 93

Harmlessness, 134,135

Hatha Yoga, 170, 187,188

Heart chakra, 86

Herbs, 188

Hiranyagarbha, 87

Honesty, 135

Hope/desire, 193

Human body, 101,142

Hunger/suppression, 170

Huxley, Aldous, 188

I

Ideation energy dormant, 83

Identity, misplaced, 118

Idle-mindedness, 101,102

Ignorance, 117,118,131,132

Images, mind 160

Imagination faculty,orb

as vision, 154

imagination faculty

location, 86

magical, 126

memory, 162

vibrational 84

visual insight113

Impersonalism, 144

Impressions,

ceased, 114

circumstance, 193

compacted, 123

cosmic reservoir, 162

ended, 126

Inattentiveness, 102

Incorrect perception,

85.88

useful ones, 114

I-ness, , 93
 Infinite, 145
 Insight,
 as buddhi organ, 152
 discriminative 133
 reality-perceptive, 113
 required, 96
 Instability, 125
 Instinct for yoga, 181
 Intellect,
 analytical power, 93
 reality-perceiving, 88
 Interval, 154
 Introspection, 131
 Introspective happiness, 94
 Intuition, 163
 Isolation of self, 183
iṣṭadevatā, 143
īśvara, 98
 Iyengar, 144,148

J

Jain, 135
 Janma, 189
 Jesus Christ, Lord, 177
 Jnanachakshu, 86,113,133,171
 Jnanadipah, 86,113,136,171,, jñānadīptih, 135,171

K

Kailash, 171
 Kaivalyam, 131,183,186
 Karma Yoga, 103
 Karmashaya, 123,126
kāya, 181
khyātih, 182
 King Dharma, 134
 Krishna ,Lord Sri,
 86,98,99,103,116,
 130,134,137,139,
 163,164,172,189
kriyāyogaḥ
 116,117,121,170,171,183
kriyāyogaḥ Masters, 154
kriyāyogaḥ research, 190
kriyā, 135
kṣaṇa, 154

Kundalini chakra,
 awakening 146
 frontal, 178
 purified, 103
 Kundalini Yoga,
 121,135,141,143,170,
 171,177,181,188

Kurmanadi, 170

Kurukshetra, 154

L

Lack of energy, 102
 Laws of Nature, 124
 Laziness, 101
 Leary, Timothy, 188
 Levitation, 179
 Liberation, 101,127
 Life force,
 curbed, 121
 protection scheme, 170
 purified, 103

Light

 central forehead, 157,171
 vision, 164

Linkage of attention,
 continuous, 145
 effortless, 119
 types, 110,111

Liquid, subtle type, 180

Living entity, see Self

Lords, 144

Love of god, 161

Love, 108

Lung, 145

M

Mahatva, 108

Mahavideha, 179

Mahavira, Lord, 135

mahāvratam, 136

Mahayogins, 171

Mandukopanisad, 95

Manipuraka, 169

Mantra, 188

Manu, 95

Matali, 184
 Material existence, , 112
 Material Nature/ Energy 127,159,188
mātra, 128
 Matsyendranatha, 176
 Matter,
 investigation into,111,112
 subtle type, 128
 undifferentiated state, 111
 imperceptible, 84
 Meditation practice, 105,116
 Meghah, 200,201
 Memory,
 aggravation, 109
 bothersome, 156
 circumstance, 193
 cleansed, 110
 compacted 123
 cosmic pool, 161
 described, 87
 disengaged, 99
 layered 192
 neutralized, 91
 reverse gear, 90
 suppressed, 115
 vibrational, 84
 Mental content, 95
 Mental energy scattered, 103
 Mento-emotional force/energy categories 84 explained 83,84
 light, 164
 linking, 202
 mastership, 148
 operations, 84
 prejudices, 195
 quiescent 83
 restrictions, 84,85 unstable state, 172
 vibration, 82
 Merits, 124-126
 Mind,
 content control, 157
 operation, 159,160
 perceptive abilities, 196,197
 picturization, chatter, 99
 space, cleared, 147

Mistaken views, 102
 Moonlight, 167,168
 Moral code, breakage, 139
 Moral Principles,
 135-139
 Motivation,
 for immorality, 139
 involuntary ones, 125
 seedless, 153
 Mudgala, 184
 Muladhara, 177
 Murdhajyoti, 171
 Mystic actions, 152
 Mystic skills, 187
 Mystics, 96

N

Naad sound, 86,157
 Nadis, 146
 Nadis, 180
 Narada, 116
 Narcotic drugs, 187
 Nature/ yogi 189
 Navel chakra, 169
 Nerves, 119
 Nervousness, 106
 Neutrality, 107
 Nidhana, 98
nirbhāsā, 150
 Nirodhakshana, 154
 Nirvana, 174
 Nirvedah, 131,190
 Non-attachment, 91
 Also see Vairagya,
 See Detachment.
 Non-possessiveness, 135,139,141
 Non-stealing, 135,139
 Non-violence, 139
 Notions, 89
 Nutrition, 141

O

Obeisances to Sri Patanjali,
 174
 Objects, supernatural, 106
 Obstacles for others, 100
 Old age, 104

Om, 86,99-100,102

Omkara -See Om

Omniscient, 162

One-ness craze, 183

Organ of perception, 133

P

Patanjali, Sri,

--He is mentioned on almost every page.- inspired message, 90
parentage 144

Padmasana, 144,170

Parallel worlds, 149

Paranormal powers, 187

Parashariravesha siddhi 176

Paravairagya. 201

Past lives, 124,163

Past/real, 193,194

Peace, 154

Perceiver, see Self

Perception tools, 119

Perception, see correct perception,
see incorrect perception,

Perception, supernatural/ spiritual, 106

Perception, types, 113

Perfected being, 171

Perfectional skills, 175

Personality of Godhead, 144

Planetary transfer, 169

Popularity, 141

Portents, 166

Posture, 141,144

Prakash, 127,147

Prakriti energy, 92,158,159

Prakritilaya, 96

pramāda, 102

prāṇa, 88

prāṇāyāma,

85,106,121,141,
143,145-147,157,
170,171,177

avoidance of , 92

idleness affected, 102

mastership required, 101

Om, 99

Pranic energy charge, 100,102,103

Pranidhana , 98

Pranidhanani, 137

prāntabhūmiḥ, 136

prasamkhyāna, 201

Prasanta vahita, 156

prātibha, 172

Pratiprasava , 122

Pratistha, 140

pratyāhar from Om, 101

pratyāhar,

88,100,102,118,

122, 142,148,180

pratyāhar,

energy conservation, 103

Pratyak, 100

Pratyaksha, 87

Pratyayah, 95,150,159

Pravritti, 106

Predisposition, 166

Prejudice, 166,195

Primitive people, 188

Providence, 140

Proximity, 101,198,199

Psychology, self studied, 120

Psychic energy conserved, 122

Psychic light, 164

Psychics, 96,188

Psychological storage

compartment, 123,124

Psychological organs, 152

Psychological receptacles, 126

Punah, 184

Purification, 137,141,178

Purusa, 92

Purusayoh, 185

Q

Quiescent stage, 128,156

R

rāga, 118

Raja Yoga, 95,115,122,170

Rampa, 176

Ratio of 1:4:2, 146

Realism, 135,138
 Rebirth,
 angelic world,184
 avoided, 176
 haphazard, 84
 Krishna's view 167
 Relationship, to Supreme Personality, 113
 Religion, fundamentalist, 124
 Religious leaders, 188
 Research, diversion, 180
 Response of a yogi, 108
 Righteous life style, 202
 Rishi Singh Gherwal, 164
ṛtambharā buddhi, 113,114
rūḍho, 121

S

samādhi, 93,96,134,151-153
 yielding paranormal powers 187,189
samāna, 177
 Samhatya, 198
samprajñātaḥ, 93
 Samprayoga, 164
samśaya, 102
 Samyama, 151,156
 Samyoga, 131
 Sanctified objects, 86
 Sanskrit grammar, 114
 Sanskrit language, 114
 Sarvabhauma, 136
 Sattva features, 174
 Sattva suddhi, 142
 Sattva, 186
 Sattvaguna body, 181
 Satya, 135
 Satyananda , Swami, 202
 Saviors, 201
 Seat of feelings, 191
 Seeing instrument, 127
 Seer/seen, 127

Self

 changelessness, 196
 conquest, 199
 consciousness, 128
 diffused type, 95
 handicapped, 84
 ignorance, 84
 image as the body, 119
 independence 83
 intimidated, 110,111
 isolation, 183
 mento-emotional energy, 83
 mind. 197
 self perception, 128 realization, 130,131
 Sense consciousness, internalization, 100
 Sense of identity 93
 Senses,
 prejudiced, 102
 short-sighted, 110
 Sensual energies,
 purified, 103
 rapidity, 181
 Sensual expressions, reverting, 122
 Sensual influence, 128
 Sensual withdrawal, 172
 Sensuality proness, 102
 Serentiy, 105
 Sexual intercourse, 135
 through another's body. 176
 Sexual non-expression, 139
 Sexual urge sublimated, 135
 Shaman, 188
 Shankaracharya, Sri Adi, 176
 Shiva, Lord,
 98,103,134,163,
 167,171,172,178
 Shiva's wife, 176
 Shivananda, Swami, 202
 Shivram Apte, 150
 Shuddha, 110
 Shuka, 116

Siddhaloka 160
 Siddhas, 116,171
 Siddhi, 154,161,187
 impediments, 178
 Sir Paul Castagna 85
 Skanda Kumara, 134,176
 Skeptics, 157
 Sky of consciousness, 82,106
 Sleep,
 curbed, 86,87
 described, 89
 dreamless, 107
 impulsive, 84
 self disconnect. 89
 Solar deity, 168
 Solar plexus, 168,169
 Solar system, 179
 Solitude, 152
 Soul, see Self
 Sound, subtle, 157,187,188
 Special person, 130
 Species of life, 135
 Spirit see Self
 Spirit,
 limited, 128
 /Material Nature, 130,131
 proximity, 198
 Spiritual Master, 201
 Sri Krishna, see Krishna
 Sri Patanjali, see Patanjali
 Srila Yogeshwarananda
 see Yogeshwarananda
 Srimad Bhagavatam, 86
 Study of psyche, 116
styāna, 101
 Subconscious mind, 90
 Subtle body, changed, 121
 orange glow, 178
 past lives, 141
 special powers, 178,179
 upgraded, 181
 Subtle tube nadis, 180
 Suddhi-samyē, 186
 Sun-god, 167,168
 Sunlight, 167
 Sun-planet, 167
śūnyam, 150

Supernatural perception, 122
 Superphysical planes,96
 Supportive element, 193
 Supreme Being
 101,112,131,
 161,162,167
 Supreme Lord,
 affliction free, 98
 investigated, 111
 meditation upon,
 98,116,137
 meditation upon, 116
 special person 130
 supreme teacher 98
 unsurpassed, 98
 Supreme Spirit, 183
 Suratha, 95
 Surrender, 111
 Sushumna nadi, 178
 Sva, 132
 Sva-bhava, 118

T

T.Lobsang Rampa, 176
 Taimni, I.K.- Raj Yogi,
 121,150,201
 Tapa, 99
 Tapah, 188
 Tapasah, 143
 Teachers, 145,146,180
 Telepathy, 90
 Tendency, 192
 Thinking conservation, 100
 Third eye, 113
 Thirst suppression, 170
 Thoughts transmitted, 165
 Time gap/ repercussions, 124
 Time, no illusion, 193
 Time/Nature, 203
 Tirthankaras, 135
 Tistha, 140
tīvra samvegā 97
 Transmigrations, 129
 Trees, memory, 123
 Truthfulness, 135

U

udāna, 177
 Uddhava, 86,116
 Umbilical cord, 169
 Undifferentiated matter, 111
 Uniqueness, 194
 Universal Form, 103,134
 Universe, dissolution, 82
 Unsteadiness, 103
 Urdhvareta, 141
 Urges, 192

V

Vaikuntha, 82
 Vairagya, 91
 - Also see detachment
 Vaishnava teachers, 116
 Vaivasvata, 95
vaśīkārah, 108
 Vati, 106
 Vedas, 95
 Vegetarian, 139
 Vicchedah, 145
 Vices, 139
 Videhas, 95
 Vigilance, 85
 Violence, 134,135,139
viśayā, 106
 Vision, 119,164
 Vitarka samapattih, 110
 Vivekajam, 185
vivekakhyātih, 132,135,138
 Void, 150,156
 Vrishnis, 139
 Vrittis
 compared to 5 gears, 89
 Also see mento-emotional
 energy
vyādhi, 101
 Vyasadeva, Srila, 116

W

World of Dharmas, 200
 Writer, 94

Y

Yama/niyama, 134
 Yoga Practice,
 5th stage, 118
 affected by disease 102
 attachment to 96
 contravened 96
 culmination, 187
 forceful 97
 habit, 101
 higher type, 203
 inner drive, 101
 intense 97
 its bane, 123
 mastery without practice, 97 persistence, 91,92,133
 rates of practice 97
 stamina for 96
 syllabus 81
 Yoga siddha body,
 121,132,171,
 Yogeshwarananda Yogiraj,
 82,85,86,113,161,201
 Yogi
 association, 107
 degradation, 170
 deity relationship, 168
 discovered, 140
 experiences, 107
 other worlds, 149
 Patanjali,s advice 90
 progression different, 108,109
 stalled, 123
 status, 186
 student, 159

Scheme of Pronunciation

Consonants

Gutturals:	क	ख	ग	घ	ङ
	ka	kha	ga	gha	ṅa
Palatals:	च	छ	ज	झ	ञ
		ca	cha	ja	jha	ña
Cerebrals:	ट	ठ	ड	ढ	ण
		ṭa	ṭha	ḍa	ḍha	ṇa
Dentals:	त	थ	द	ध	न
		ta	tha	da	dha	na
Labials:	प	फ	ब	भ	म
		pa	pha	ba	bha	ma

Semivowels:

य	र	ल	व
ya	ra	la	va

Numbers:

०	१	२	३	४	५	६	७	८	९
0	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9

Sibilants:

श	ष	स
śa	ṣa	sa

Aspirate:

ह	ऽ
ha	‘

Vowels:

अ	आ	इ	ई	उ	ऊ	ऋ	ॠ
a	ā	i	ī	u	ū	ṛ	ṝ
ए	औ	ओ	औ	ळ	ळू	•	:
e	ai	o	au	ḷ	ḷū	m̄	ḥ

About the Author

Yogi Madhvāchārya (Michael Beloved) took his current body in 1951 in Guyana. In 1965, while living in Trinidad, he instinctively began doing yoga postures and trying to make sense of the supernatural side of life.

Later on, in 1970, in the Philippines, he approached a Martial Arts Master named Mr. Arthur Beverford, explaining to the teacher that he was seeking a yoga instructor; Mr. Beverford identified himself as an advanced disciple of Sri Rishi Singh Gherwal, an astanga yoga master.

Mr. Beverford taught the traditional Astanga Yoga with stress on postures, attentive breathing and brow chakra centering meditation. In 1972, Madhvāchārya entered the Denver Colorado Ashram of Kundalini Yoga Master Sri Harbhajan Singh. There he took instruction in Bhastrika Pranayama and its application to yoga postures. He was supervised mostly by Yogi Bhajan's disciple named Prem Kaur.

In 1979 Madhvāchārya formally entered the disciplic succession of the Brahma-Madhava Gaudiya Sampradaya through Swami Kirtanananda, who was a prominent sannyasi disciple of the Great Vaishnava Authority Sri Swami Bhaktivedanta Prabhupada, the exponent of devotion to Sri Krishna.

However, Yoga has a mystic side to it, thus Madhvāchārya took training and teaching empowerment from several spiritual masters of different aspects of spiritual development. This is consistent with Sri Krishna's advice to Arjuna in the Bhagavad-gītā:

*tad viddhi pranipātena paripraśnena sevayā
upadekṣyanti te jñānam jñāninas tattva darśinaḥ*

This you ought to know. By submitting yourself as a student, by asking questions, by serving as requested, the perceptive, reality-conversant teachers will teach you the knowledge. (Gītā 4.34)

Most of the instructions Madhvāchārya received was given in the astral world. On that side of existence, his most prominent teachers were Sri Swami Shivananda of Rishikesh, Yogiraj Swami Vishnudevananda, Sri Babaji Mahashaya - the master of the masters of Kriya Yoga, Srila Yogeshwarananda of Gangotri - the master of the masters of Raj Yoga (spiritual clarity), and Siddha Swami Nityananda - the Brahma Yoga authority.

If you have some interest in yoga, nurture and develop it. Sri Krishna, the Supreme Being offers all encouragement to those who are attracted to yoga. This is what the God said:

*tatra tam buddhi saṁyogam labhate paurva dehikam
yatate ca tato bhūyaḥ samsiddhau kuru nandana*

In that environment (in the new birth), he (the yogi) is inspired with the cumulative intellectual interest from a previous birth. And from that time, he strives again for yoga perfection, O dear son of the Kurus. (Gītā 6.43)

